Charlevoix's Red Rayders defeated Grayling by a 32 to 23 score Tuesday night, blasting their ambitions to win or tie for the northern Michigan "Little Seven" class C basketball title.

The victory left Boyne the conference leader, elevated Charlevoix to second place and pat Grayling in third position. Boyne must win Friday night from a strong East Jordan team to cinch the title. If they lose and Charlevoix wins from Harbor Springs as anticipated, the title remains with Charlevoix, the defending champions.

The Rayders came from behind to top Grayling. The visitors led 10 to 7 at the qaarter, Charlevoix was ahead 14 to 13 at the half and 24 to 16 ut the third intermission. Charlevoix's hetter team play was the deciding factor.

Brown scored 14 points to lead the Rayders, followed by Pearl with 10 and Withers with 8. Lovely und Deckrow were hest for the visitors, the former scoring 9 und the latter 8.

STRAITS FERRY SERVICE AGAIN RESUMED

Ferry Crossed Friday; Expect Little Trouble Balance of Winter

Ferry service across the Straits of Mackinaw was resumed at noon Friday and it was expected that the Chief Wawatam will be able to make regular crossings from now on.

Thursday morning the Chief left Mackinaw City at 10 a. m. and finally completed its round trip at 11:30 p. m.

Friday morning the ship spent several hours breaking up the ice barrier that has hampered its crossings and started its first trip of the day at noon.

Attendants at the State Ferry Office predicted that the boat would be able to continue its regular trips and slowly take care of the traffic which has piled up at each side of the Straits during the period that ice prevented the crossing.

HISTORICAL PAGEANT OF TUESDAY STUDY CLUB EVENT OF MONDAY

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bonthron was the scene of an elaborate and beautiful historical pageant Monday evening when the Tuesday Study club, under the very able direction of Mrs. Floyd A. Supp, entertained 28 guests at their second annual party.

The room was lighted with many candles and their soft glow brought out the exquisite beauty of the handpainted figures displayed by Mrs. Rosa Nettleton. The setting was a fashion emporium of the year 1876. Mrs. Nettleton, in her hoop-skirt gown of silk with short over skirt of figured blue, finished with ribbons and old lace, displayed her models to Mrs. Supp, who was beautifully gowned in old gold satin with wide silk lace and slippers to match. Her hair was arranged in ringlets over her shoulders in keeping with the style of 1876.

As the figures were displayed, Mrs. Nettleton gave short descriptions of each, then members of the club as doll mannequins, dressed to correspond to the models, were brought in by Parkinson, the butler, portrayed in true butler style by Floyd A. Supp, wound up and paraded stiff and expressionless for the inspection of Mrs. Supp and the entertainment of the guests.

The first mannequin was Lillis Flanders in the colorful dress of the stately Egyptian queen of 1500 B. C. Her feathered head dress and rope sandals were unique as was also the Ankh, attribute of royalty and emblem of life, which she carried.

Olive Allen wore a gown of soft lavendar with large flowing sleeves and white close fitting bonnet of a lady of Palestine at the time of the beginning of the christian era, 1 A. D., and carried a candle.

A flowing gown of bright colors, representing the dress at the time of the Crusades, 1000 A. D., was worn by Mrs. Albert Cook. From the Saracen alms bag suspended from a ribbon about her neck, she tossed coins while begging "alms for the poor, please."

Gallant gentlemen cut the tops from carriages and even raised the ceilings to accommodate the towering head dress of 1450 A. D. The costume of this period was worn by Mrs. Frank Courier and the peak of her veiled hat towered to an amazing height.

Mrs. Otto Krueger represented the lady of rank in the court of Queen Elizabeth of 1590. Her hoop skirt gown of brown satin with white neck ruff, rich jewels and close fitting satin head dress, was exquisite and her henring most queenly and dignified.

"The Landing of the Pilgrims" was given by Mrs. Oscar Nurth. Her quiet manner and simple charm were in perfect harmony with the gray gown and white starched apron, collar and bonnet of the sturdy pioneers of 1620.

A flirtatious coquette in a hoop skirt of blue and white with a saucy flowered bonnet, was Mrs. Robert Bonthron. She carried a shepherd's crook and represented the dress of 1770.

The gayest of all the costumes was a brilliant red gown of fine material, an enormous muff and a high crowned feathered hat of 1816, which suited perfectly the vivacity and charm of Mrs. Clara Kenyon.

At the close of the program the entire ensemble sang "Long, Long Ago," with words appropriately arranged to fit the occasion. Dainty refreshments were served, after which Gordon Todd showed technicolored motion pictures which were taken of the ladies and their costumes at the annual party last year and a few reels of Charlevoix scenes, which were interesting and beautiful and very much appreciated by all present.

LANSING LETTER

will then cost close to $500,000 more each year in salaries and maintenance.

"Where is this money coming from?" Senator McCallum asked. "This is a question I want to have answered. We have a big deficit on our hands. If we appropriate large sums of money early in the session, we may have to deprive others later on of needed money."

The comment was voiced during consideration of a $150,000 annual appropriation to advertise Michigan as a tourist state. This amount, voted in 1937, gives $25,000 a year to each of the four tourist associations and $50,000 a year to the state administrative board. According to facts brought out by Senator Bishop of Alpena and Senator VanderWerp of Fremont, Michigan receives back in the form of sales taxes paid by outstate tourists ten times this appropriation every year.

$337,000 More Wages

An actual comparison of the state payroll in January, 1937, and in January, 1939, shows an increase of $337,000 on the Fitzgerald ledger instead of a decrease. The governor's office payroll, for example, was $3,225 in January, 1939, as compared with $2,365 in January, 1937.

Of course, these facts paint a gloomy picture, but they are incomplete to the extent that much of Fitzgerald's economy deeds could not take immediate effect. Employees are entitled to reasonable notice. Reductions of staffs can not be achieved always over night.

As the administration enters into its eighth week, it is becoming more and more clear that Governor Fitzgerald will be fortunate if he manages to balance the budget.

Labor Relations

Another plank in the administration's program is sound labor relations — giving every man a fair chance to get and keep a job.

Step No. 1 was to be a labor relations mediation board which was to settle strikes, if possible, without a loss of production for the manufacturer and a loss of wages for the workers.

Accordingly a bill was introduced simultaneously in the senate and house, known as the "governor's labor bill," which among other things would require a ten-day notice for a strike, would legalize picketing (now illegal), force manufacturers to hire back workers who went out on a legal strike and to pay them wages during the 10-day interim, and otherwise restrict both sides in the interest of the public.

Labor, Industry Critical

First, organized labor registered emphatic objections to the 10 day clause. While they liked legalized picketing, they opposed a requirement that only the workers of the involved plant could demonstrate. They spoke heatedly of their "right to strike" without notice.

They especially disliked the restriction that workers who violate the 10-day strike notice would make themselves liable to loss of their legal standing as an employee.

Both the A. F. of L. and the CIO joined in a loud chorus of protest. Governor Fitzgerald was booed at a labor convention in Detroit. Mention of Daniel A. Knaggs, former mayor of Monroe, who was appointed one of the state labor commissioners, evoked a noisy storm.

It became evident that labor don't want restrictions on labor any more than the Michigan Manufacturers' association wanted restrictions on industry. John Lovett, counsel for industrialists, declared that a permanent labor mediation board would incite trouble instead of preventing it. He suggested that a state commissioner be empowered to appoint a special arbitration committee to fit the particular needs of each labor difficulty and that restrictions be few in number, if any at all.

Welfare Bill

Faced with a clash of interests between the cities and rural areas, Governor Fitzgerald has chosen to compromise on the drafting of provisions for the welfare reorganization bill.

Aimed to eliminate costly duplications of agencies handling relief and to promote efficiency and economy, the welfare measure follows closely the provisions of the welfare reorganization act defeated in last year's referendum. It provides for more local control which is satisfactory to supervisors, but allots welfare funds on the basis of need rather than of population, which suits city officials.

This is a controversial topic in Lansing, and the welfare bill will have tough sledding before it is enacted into law.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT

Curable Cancers

An intensive campaign in recent years, undertaken both by national and local health officers and physicians, has served to familiarize the public with the symptoms of the more common types of cancer. Repeatedly the assertion is made that many of these forms, particularly cancer of the face, lip and skin can be cured if diagnosed and treated in the early stages. Surgical excision, the x-ray and radium have proved to be three potent weapons against the enemy.

Yet the results of the campaign are far from encouraging. Willful blindness to obvious symptoms and inexcusable procrastination still account for many unnecessary cancer deaths each year. Against ignorance, stupidity and neglect, medical science exclaims in vain.

It should be always remembered that cancer never begins as such but almost always as some inflammatory or abnormal condition existing for a considerable period of time before the malignant change takes place. Thus cancer is always a localized disease at its beginning. Then only is it certainly curable through the removal or destruction of the cancer cells.

The deep cancers of the body cavities are more difficult to recognize than are those on the surface but nearly all announce their presence early through some definite sign. The person past 40 years old who suffers from chronic digestive disturbances may or may not be a victim of cancer but he is well warranted in demanding an x-ray of the digestive tract.

Blood in the urine often indicates cancer of the bladder or urinary tract while blood and mucous stools suggest trouble in the large intestine. Other conditions may produce similar symptoms but cancer should be suspected until ruled out by competent diagnosis.

Raised, slightly pigmented, hairless moles should be removed because many tend to become cancerous, especially if located at a site of irritation. They should never be allowed to become large and dark in color as, at that stage they are already cancerous. White patches on the tongue or lip, often seen in excessive smokers, should be investigated by a skilled diagnostician.

The maximum recorded age for muskellange is 20 years, the top weight from 60 to 75 pounds.

American Boy Magazine Companion to Thousands

Hundreds of thousands of boys and young men read The American Boy magazine every month and consider it more as a living companion than as a magazine.

"It's as much a buddy to me as my neighborhood chum," writes one high school senior. "The American Boy seems to understand a boy's problems and considers them in such a sympathetic and helpful way. It gives advice and entertaining reading on every subject in which a young fellow is interested. It is particularly helpful in sports. I made our school basketball team because of playing tips I read in The American Boy."

Many famous athletes in all sports credit much of their success to helpful suggestions received from sports articles carried in The American Boy magazine. Virtually every issue offers advice from a famous coach or player. Football, basketball, track, tennis, in fact every major sport is covered in fiction and fact articles.

Teachers, librarians, parents and leaders of boys clubs also recommend The American Boy enthusiastically. They have found that as a general rule regular readers of The American Boy advance more rapidly and develop more worthwhile characteristics than do boys who do not read it.

Trained writers and artists, famous coaches and athletes, explorers, scientists and men successful in business and industry join with an experienced staff to produce in The American Boy, the sort of reading matter boys like best.

The American Boy sells on most newsstands at 15c a copy. Subscription prices are $1.50 for one year or $3.00 for three years. Foreign rates 50c a year extra. To subscribe simply send your name, address and remittance direct to The American Boy, 7430 Second Blvd., Detroit, Michigan. —Adv. 7t2pd.

"Hoppy" Returns in "The Frontiersmen"

The changing nf the cattle country from a lnwless frontier region into a place in which men can live and work in peace is the theme of the new "Hopalong Cassidy" range romance, "The Frontiersmen," which will be shown Saturday only, February 25th, at the Palace Theatre. Playing the action-loving "Hoppy," William Boyd once again rides the danger trail, this time fighting for law and order against a politician who uses his high office as a shield for his rustling activities.

MacMurrey, Millend, Cempbell Heed "Men With Wings" Cast

Three of the screen's leading young personalities, Fred MacMurray, Rny Millnnd nnd Louise Campbell, playing together for the first time, head the cast of the new technicolor cavalcade of the air, "Men With Wings," which Paramount will present to local audiences Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, February 26-28, at the Palace Theatre.

In a story which traces the progress of aviatinn for thirty-five years, MacMurrny and Milland will be seen as two typical American pioneers of the air, while Miss Campbell plays the air-minded woman who not only inspires men in their conquest af the sky but devotes her whole life to plane-building and flying.

Film Offers Swerthout Thrill Role

Pnramount's "Ambush," to be shown March 1 and 2 at the Palnce Theatre, marks the first straight dramatic characterization for glamorous Gladys Swarthout. Long heralded for her beauty and her operatic voice, Miss Swarthout now makes her bow in a picture so replete with thrills, action, gunfire and romance that it leaves no room for song.

Revolving about the plot of the "perfect" bank robbery, the new story precipitates Miss Swarthout into the hideout of bank burglars, where she has gone to attempt to rescue her younger brother from their grasp. The desperate criminals, headed by wily Ernest Trnex, force her to become their unwilling accomplice.

A hospital for fish is to be established at Seattle, Washington, by the department of commerce where "ailing" fish will be studied with the idea of obtaining cures for various diseases.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SOCIETY

Sunday morning service, 10:45.
Sunday school, 12 o'clock.
Meets first Wednesday evening each month at 7:45 p. m.

We cordially invite the public to our service and reading room.

Reading room open Saturday, 3 to 5 p. m.

"Christ Jesus" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, February 26.

The Golden Text (Colossians 3:16, 17) is: "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; . . . And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him."

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Jeremiah 23:5, 6): "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS."

Bay View Gleaners meet again a week from next Friday at their hall at Eastport. The money for payment of the park grounds is now all ready in the county treasury at Bellaire, to be paid over to Glenner officials.

The proposed law to make all drinkers of intoxicants buy a $5 license so sellers will know who is eligible to buy is a good one. The drinker should also have a number on his back and one each on front and rear of car so anyone meeting them could look out for being run into.

Mrs. A. B. Warner's death occurred at Lockwood Hospital a week ago Sunday and funeral preached by Lillian Underwood, was held last week. She was a much esteemed Christian lady, and will be greatly missed by relatives and friends. She was 69 years of age, and had lived here several years.

Cherry growers have received notice from the county agent of the plan to tax the growers one-eighth cent per pound on crops grown, for advertising the crop. One wonders why, the canners don't pay the same. It no doubt is a good proposition but expense should be met by both producer and packer.

Ivan Dawson, son of Eben Dawson, living two miles southwest of town, was badly injured in a coasting accident a week ago Sunday, slipping forward onto a projecting bolt in his sleigh on which he was sitting while coasting. He was immediately taken to Lockwood Hospital and operated on, and was able to come home last Saturday.

Harry Clark's barn across from the Bay View school house was blown down in last week's storm. The snow was blown into roads and yards from all points of the compass. James Dawson, believe it or not, has snow piled six feet high, coming from his own and three neighboring farms, while the territory from which the snow came is practically snow-less.

Many people here were surprised to hear of the death last week of Hubert Morrison of Lansing. His funeral was held last Saturday at Lansing. He was 66 years of age, and for many years was a citizen of this place, an old schoolmate of the writer. He leaves to mourn his loss a wife, formerly Belle Mudge; children and sister Elva, wife of J. A. Tuplett of Eastport. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Morrison, brother Fred and sister Jennie, preceded him in death. He will be missed by relatives and friends here.

SHOT AT RANDOM

some of which are so fantastic they are really funny. One, I have learned, makes City Superintendent Don Herrick a relative of Mayor Robert Bridge, and Ben Seifert, who is city inspector on PWA projects, a brother-in-law of Mr. Herrick's. In other words, some tongue-waggers have tried to make it appear that the city management is just a little family circle. Don Herrick is no relative of Mayor Bridge and Seifert is no relative of either one of them. And speaking about Seifert, he has been employed at a wage of $150 a month as inspector on city PWA projects which are specifically the electric light system extension and the city hall and fire station. He was hired to fill the position when local men tried on the job failed to qualify. He protects the city's interests to the extent of seeing that contractors on the various PWA jobs follow the plans and specifications as they should, and otherwise makes himself useful in drawing plans, blue prints, etc. His job ends when the projects are completed. If City Superintendent Herrick was super-human so that he could attend to the duties of his office, be on the construction jobs as an inspector, prepare the plans and specifications for the various projects, supervise the work of various departments, etc., all at one time, it wouldn't have been necessary to hire Mr. Seifert. Herrick happens to be just human, can only be one place at one time, thus Seifert has a job. And when it comes to the cost of his services, it might be added that the city paid out several thousand dollars for similar inspection services when the sewage disposal plant, also a PWA project, was built a few years ago. The engineering firm of Pierce, Greeley & Hanson was employed at a stipulated engineering fee to furnish plans for the sewage disposal plant and inspection during construction. So the procedure now being followed is merely routine in connection with PWA projects. A stenographer is also employed in Mr. Herrick's office at the wage of $10 per week, paid out of PWA funds. Her services have been required to type specifications for the various PWA and WPA projects which the office has handled, a job which has kept her busy for several months, but is only a temporary position. Salaries of both are taken from the project funds and not from city general funds.

Pete: "What about the ten bucks you owe me?"

Charlie: It's your birthday tomorrow, I'll give it to you then with my congratulations."

Pete: "Listen brother! Just give me the ten bucks and I'll congratulate myself!"

Substitutes had to pinch hit at the postoffice Wednesday morning so that we people could get our mail. Clint Cooper and Louie O'Neil of the regulars took a joy ride to Beaver Island with Pilot Rudy Pekrul on the mail plane and had to stay over night when the ship was damaged in landing. They had a fine sample of that far-famed Beaver Island hospitality and an experience thrown in with it.

February 26, 1939
Charlevoix 11, Ironton 12:15
Subject:
"The Teachings of Jesus Concerning Sin"
7:30 Discussion Group:
"Meeting Life Unafraid"

For several Sundays we have been presenting the teachings of Jesus concerning God, Himself, The Holy Spirit, Satan and Man. These are known as personalities.

Now we turn from these personalities to a general theme of sin and salvation. Under this theme we will consider at least five sub-topics, Sin, Salvation, His (Jesus) Saving Mission, Human Responsibility and Sanctity. We are not speaking from our view-point, nor from the view-point of any other teacher. We are trying to present what Jesus taught about these various subjects. It will pay you to come and hear this series.

In connection with this series we will tell a true story, probably, March 12. We have been announcing the coming of this story which is entitled "The Kingdom of Heaven is filled with people like the Girl with the Flaming Birthmark." Plan to hear this story.

Our Sunday night group meetings will take up in earnest our original theme Sunday night, "The Problem of Following Jesus," and we will start the discussion with the subject, "Meeting Life Unafraid." If you wish to learn about vital and radiant Christianity here is the place for you.

WINDOW DISPLAY FOR TEMPERANCE LEADER

Map at Benj. Brown Building Shows Memorials to Frances Willard

An exhibit in the south window of the Benj. Brown building calls attention to Frances E. Willard, the great temperance leader, the centenary of whose birth is being celebrated this year by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union which she helped to organize and over which she presided for 20 years.

The souvenir map shown in the window beside Miss Willard's picture lists the many school houses and other buildings named for her in various parts of the country, also hundreds of statues, fountains, stained glass windows, streets and other memorials which honor her.

Miss Willard crusaded not only for temperance but for social purity, courts of arbitration, woman's suffrage, a living wage, an eight-hour day, child welfare legislation and other humanitarian causes.

In 1883 she organized the world W. C. T. U., which now functions in fifty-four countries and has a membership of more than a million women. The poet Whittier wrote of her:

"She knew the power of banded ill,
But felt that love was stronger still,
And organized for doing good,
The world's united womanhood."

SPEARING SEASON TO CLOSE ON MARCH 1ST

Fishing Season on Designated "Pike" Lakes Over March 16

Ice fishermen whose favorite haunt happens to be one of the designated pike lakes in the state have only one more week to indulge in their sport.

A perusal of the fishing regulations shows that fishing on designated pike lakes in the lower peninsula closes March 2, one week from today. In the upper peninsula, the season on the same classification of lakes does not close until March 16.

Spearing through the ice is another winter fishing sport which also is nearing the close for 1939, this season extending only through February.

REGIONAL TOURNEY OPEN AT PETOSKEY

BOYNE CITY AND INDIAN RIVER DISTRICT WINNERS

Charlevoix Bowed Out of District Play Friday Night When Defeated by Pellston Cagers

Buyne City was the class C and Indian River the class D winner at the district basketball tournament Saturday at Boyne City, and as a result of their victories, enter regional competition which opens tonight at Petoskey.

Boyne City, favored after winning the northern Michigan class C conference championship, eliminated Harbor Springs, East Jordan and Pellston to take the title. Indian River, a tenth grade high school with only seven boys available for basketball, upset Mackinaw City and then went on to defeat Boyne Falls in the finals.

Charlevoix's Red Rayders provided another tournament upset by losing 17 to 13 to Pellston, Friday night. The Emmet county aggregation, playing for the first time in class C circles, took advantage of Charlevoix's ragged performance to win and reach the finals. Charlevoix led 2 to 1 at the quarter and trailed 6 to 7 at the half. The score was tied at 11-all in the third period, but in the fourth Pellston pulled away to a safe margin. Thus the Rayders, favored as finalists against Boyne City, bowed out of the tournament.

Eighteen teams will compete at the Petoskey regional. In class B are Cheboygan, Rogers City, Traverse City, Manistee and Petoskey. Class C competitors are Mancelona, winner at Gaylord; Northport, winner at Traverse City; Boyne City, winner at Boyne; Oscoda, winner at Alpena; Mesick, winner at Mesick; and Onekama, winner at Manistee. The class D line-up includes Gaylord St. Mary's, Maple City, Indian River, Ellsworth, St. Anne's of Alpena, Buckley and Kaleva.

Paul Hufford, Petoskey, Set New Record of 63 Feet to Win Event for Distance Jump

Charlevoix riders won a large share of the honors as northern Michigan skiers participated in a regional meet Sunday afternoon at the Mt. McSauby slide.

The event, sponsored by the Board of Commerce and WPA recreational group winter sports committees, drew several hundred spectators and provided a most entertaining and thrilling program.

Fred Hardy, Charlevoix coast guardsman, won first place in competition for distance and form. John Zeitler Jr. was second and his brother, Bruce, won third by nosing out Paul Hufford, Petoskey, with whom he was tied after first trials.

A 1939 record was established for the new slide by Paul Hufford to win the distance event with a leap of 63 feet. Hardy placed second with 62 fees and John Zeitler third with 61 feet.

The ski course was marked off with flags. Skiers were towed up the steep hill with a block and pulley tackle drawn by a car.

SHOT AT RANDOM

Will bet Monday's election caused more head-aches than heart-aches.

There's one thing about this good old American election system of ours, though. It gives people a chance to express what they want and to get rid of what they don't want.

I want to express my appreciation to 377 voters.

It was a real, old fashioned, spirited election, anyway. The cannon roared out for the victors and the fallen were burned in effigy. The exhuberance created by victory must work wonders, or is it the age we live in.

Turning to a more agreeable subject, here's a communication from the department of conservation of interest to all sportsmen. It reads: "There appears to be considerable misunderstanding concerning the department officers attitude toward proposed deer legislation. As evidenced by letters and articles in a number of newspapers, the idea seems to be prevalent that the department is in favor of a one deer law. This is not the case. In order to clarify the conservation department's point of view, the official statement of policy, adopted by the conservation commission at its regular session on December 9, is given. 'The commission is convinced that reduction of the deer herd in certain areas is necessary. After ten years of study, considering all the precedents established, it is believed that the most practical and effective method is by controlled hunting of antlerless deer. Therefore, the director is instructed to ask the legislature for authority to establish an antlerless deer season, following the regular buck season in the fall of 1939, to be examine by investigation next spring the year's distress due to overpopulation and the approximate

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Michigan's state government today is thoroughly "Main Street."

Only one of six recently elected officials (Secretary of State Harry Kelly of Detroit) comes from a town that has more than 7,000 population. And Mr. Kelly is the only novice in state politics, the governor and lieutenant governor and treasurer and auditor general and attorney general all having served in various capacities at one time or another at Lansing.

The legislature, too, reflects the "Main Street" flavor of the Fitzgerald administration, as most of the members of the house and senate come from so-called rural areas—towns under 10,000 population and farming districts.

Thereon has developed some interesting trends which merit watching.

More Home Rule

Whereas the legislature two years ago (with the Republicans putting up little resistance) gave in to home pressure groups and went on a spending spree $17,000,000 in excess of anticipated revenue, the 1939 lawmakers have been talking much about economy and "home rule."

Jersey Breeders Select Officers for New Year

The Jersey breeders from Emmet, Antrim and Charlevoix counties held a most interesting meeting at Ellsworth last Wednesday. Some eighteen breeders enjoyed a dinner together and an afternoon program attended by H. E. Dennison, state Jersey field man, and George Cooper, president of the state club.

The election of officers for the new year resulted in the selection of: George Meggison, Charlevoix, president; Herm DeYoung, Ellsworth, vice-president; and Carl Brown, Harbor Springs, secretary-treasurer. After discussing plans for another Jersey parish show which has been successfully held for the last two years, a committee was appointed to confer and make plans for the show. The past two years the show has been held in connection with the Charlevoix County Fair. The Emmet County Fair has tendered an invitation to hold the show in connection with their exhibition so it was thought desirable to appoint a committee to make a recommendation.

Both Dennison and Cooper gave the group some fine suggestions in the promotion of the Jersey breed. At the conclusion moving pictures were shown of the 1938 national show winners. Also pictures were shown of outstanding Jersey animals throughout the country and, to add zest to the occasion, three pictures were shown of local breeders of Jersey cattle. In other words, Nick Dekkenga of Ellsworth and George Meggison of Charlevoix have reached national proportions.

Third Dairy Meeting Scheduled for Thursday Afternoon, March 16

The third and last dairy meeting in the series of three arranged for Charlevoix county dairymen will be held on Thursday afternoon, March 16, in the city hall, East Jordan, starting promptly at two o'clock. C. M. Harrison, specialist from the farm crops department, Michigan State college, will be in charge of the discussion.

He will suggest pasture mixtures and combinations which will lengthen out the feeding season and which will give an abundance of pasture during the hot, dry months when most pastures are ineffective. You will be interested in hearing about the good points of smooth brome grass in conjunction with alfalfa. Dairymen know that good pastures are the cheapest means of obtaining lowest cost production. Ordinarily, when production drops in July and August, it is laid to flies and hot weather but, as a matter of fact, it is usually due to too little feed.

Come to this last meeting in the city hall, East Jordan, Thursday afternoon, March 16, at two o'clock promptly.

CHAPTER VII

Mary sat up, trying to avert her haggard face from Lelia's gaze. "Yes," she lied. "I was asleep. What time is it, Lelia?"

"Six o'clock, darling. Hadn't you better start dressing? This is the night you and Linnie are going to Jerry Taylor's, isn't it?"

"Yes," Mary replied dully. "No! Oh, I don't know!"

"But, Mary, I'm sure it is. In fact, I heard Linnie say this morning that you and she were to be at his place at seven. He's sending the car for you.—Mary?"

"Yes?"

"I wish you'd wear my ermine wrap tonight. It would look simply ravishing on you, and I know Aunt Linnie wants you to appear particularly beautiful. Jerome's quite a person, you know—even though he is, in my humble opinion, the worst sort of renegade."

"But, Lelia," Mary demurred "I might get it soiled or tear it."

"Don't be ridiculous, darling. I want you to wear it. It'll look divine with that silver-threaded evening frock of yours."

"All right," Mary replied listlessly. "Thank you." But she was thinking, "What difference does it make how I look? What difference does anything make, now that Chris is married? All that matters is that I succeed in my writing."

Three-quarters of an hour later, Mary, a transformed person, stood before the mirror of the dressing-table. The hot bath and icy shower had brought life and color back to her weary body; miraculously wiped from her face the ravages of sorrow. Lelia had dusted just enough rouge over the soft curve of her cheeks to disguise their pallor. Her lace frock clung lovingly to her body, and fell to the floor in an eddy of silver and white. Three orchids of deep purple perched lightly on her left shoulder, and now and then smoothed their soft petals against her cheek. Addie had just brought them in with the announcement that Mr. Taylor's chauffeur had delivered them, and that Mr. Taylor's car was waiting at the door.

"Well, if you ain't a dream!" Addie cried. "Why, honey, you look just like a prineess."

Mary, suddenly aware that, had it not been for Lelia, she would never have been able to dress that evening—that Lelia had practically pulled her together—turned impulsively and kissed the other girl on the cheek. "Thank you, Lelia. You've been sweet to me tonight. You're always sweet to me."

Linnie Cotswell, looking handsome in a trailing gown of maroon-colored lace, appeared in the doorway. "Ready, Mary? Why, my dear, you're a dream! I didn't know my family tree could produce such royal fruit!"

Mary never quite knew how she managed to get through the hours that followed. It was like a hectic nightmare—a nightmare made up of spacious, flower-filled rooms in Jerome Taylor's penthouse; of Jerome Taylor himself, faultless in black and white, a gardenia in his lapel; always at her side, always looking at her with quizzical, admiring eyes. It was a wild conglomeration of Aunt Linnie, looking like a duchess and saying bright things to the man who made the fourth in their party, and whose name Mary neither caught nor cared to know. Dancing with Jerome Taylor to the tune of "September in the Rain," and thoughts of Chris! A constant pain in her heart, a lump in her throat that could not be swallowed, and thoughts, unforgettable thoughts, of Christopher Cragg!

CHAPTER VIII

Mary had taken out her typewriter several times during that first week after the arrival of Ellen's letter telling of Chris' marriage. She had tried to write, but her mind would give forth nothing, and, at long last, she had decided not to attempt any work for another solid week. She would accept every invitation showered upon her by Count Balianci and Jerome Taylor; try to divert her thoughts from Chris by taking an interest in the amusements offered by these two men who appeared to be vying with each other for her company. Eventually, perhaps, she would be refreshed by their diversions, and able to return to business. In consequence of which, she spent every evening with either Balianci or Taylor; even went, accompanied by Aunt Linnie, to Journey's End, Taylor's estate in Westchester, for a week-end.

There she danced with Jerome, she walked with him, she played a little atrocious Bridge as his partner. Her mind, however, was back in Hawkinsville, and she would never have dreamed of what was transpiring, had not Aunt Linnie remarked nearly a dozen times a day.

"My dear, the man's simply mad about you, and I swear it's the first time anybody's ever known him to be seriously in love with anybody. Marry him, my dear, if he asks you, and he most certainly will. Just think, darling, what he can do for you!"

Mary would reply, "Yes, Aunt Linnie, but Jerome's old enough to be my father. I really couldn't marry him."

To which Aunt Linnie would reply, "Oh, nonsense! What if he is old enough to be your father? He's stunning-looking, and he's charming—and he's rich as Croesus. All this talk about young love is poppy-cock. Any love wears off after the first few years. And then what have you besides worry over the grocery bill, and how you'll manage to pay the dentist for straightening the children's teeth!"

Linnie's and Lelia's plans for a West Indies cruise were now completed. They were sailing on the Itasca the fifteenth of March, and expected to be gone at least six weeks. Linnie extended to Mary a most cord at invitation to accompany them, but Mary finally managed to convince her aunt of the sincerity of her desire to write. "I can never thank you enough, Aunt Linnie," she said in conclusion, "but I am going to make writing my business, and it won't ever amount to much of a success if I go gallivanting off on glorious pleasure trips."

"Then," Linnie said firmly, "the thing for you to do, since you're hell-bent on belonging to the intelligentsia, is to remain right here in New York and work. You can't accomplish anything by returning to Hawkinsville, and you might as well just stay in this apartment. Addie will be running it just the same."

Mary rushed to her aunt and threw grateful arms about her shoulders. "Oh, Aunt Linnie, how wonderful! I'd love to stay here! Thank you so much. Why, in the time you're away, I can write at least six shorts!"

It was the morning of the second day in March that Addie called Mary to the telephone. "It's Miss Hickenlooper," the Mulatto said in a stentorian whisper, "or, anyhow, that's all I could make out of the name."

"Perhaps she's calling up about 'Their Son,'" she thought, rushing to the telephone. "Or do editors have their receptionists attend to things of that sort?"

But Miss Hickenlooper's business did not concern the manuscript. Instead, she informed Mary that she was calling for Mr. Buchanan. He had asked a number of people to his apartment for cocktails at five that afternoon. Could Mary come?

Mary accepted with the only bit of enthusiasm she had experienced for anything in days. "Thank you, Miss Hickenlooper," she replied. "I'll be there."

Mr. Buchanan's apartment—the second floor of a house which had once been someone's very smart town home—was located in the East Fifties. Mary climbed one flight of the graceful, old mahogany staircase, and stopped timidly before a tall, paneled door through which could be heard the buzz of conversation. No bell was to be seen, but a knocker of dull brass occupied a spot in the middle of the center panel, and with a gloved hand that trembled in spite of the self-control she was trying hard to exert, Mary lifted the metal hammer and knocked.

This process had to be repeated three or four times before it elicited any response, but eventually a husky male, with a large pugnacious face, turned the knob and asked Mary to come in. He wore dark trousers and a white duck coat, and Mary assumed that he was Mr. Buchanan's servant. He looked far more like a pugilist than a butler-valet, and she learned later that day that "Spike" actually had been more or less actively engaged in fisticuffs until a night several years previous, when Phillip Buchanan had literally dragged him out of the gutter, and installed him in his modest bachelor abode.

Phil Buchanan, surrounded by guests, and in the act of mixing a highball at a wheel-in bar, looked up, a bit startled, and beheld Mary standing in the doorway. "All right, Spike," he replied with something akin to a sigh of resignation, and came swiftly forward.

"I'm so glad you came, Miss Loring. Do forgive Spike's manner of announcing you. He simply can't see any sense in the more esthetic points of the social amenities—and maybe the guy's right. You see, everybody else has been here before, and just barged in."

"I rather liked it," Mary admitted, smiling up into Phil Buchanan's amused, gray eyes. "It made me feel at home. If anybody in Hawkinsville had a man-servant, I'm sure he'd be just as informal as Spike."

Slowly, he took her about the big comfortable room, introducing her to one group after another, enunciating her name clearly, speaking it in full. "This is Mary Loring," he said, and Mary warmed to the gracious kindness in his voice. "Her first story, 'At Sea,' will appear in a [illegible] National Weekly the fifteenth of next month. Miss Loring, may I present ...." And, in turn, he mentioned the name and connection of each person there.

"He's press-agenting me," Mary told herself. "Bless his heart—he's rather sweet."

Eventually, the introductions were over, and he placed her in a low chair before the fire of charred coal that crackled in the hearth, asked Mrs. Van Winkle, who appeared to be acting as hostess, to fetch her a cup of tea; then left her to the mercies of two intense young men, who, after greeting her effusively enough, returned wholeheartedly to a discussion of the relative merits of two recently published historical novels.

dog that Spike was known to walk—either blinked sleepily before the fire, or else made himself a nuisance by begging first one guest and then another for food. He was a beautiful, lumbering animal, slightly gray around the snout and knotty at the knees, and his name was Oscar.

Conversation buzzed and crackled about the room. Over by the east window, three men and a dowdily-dressed young woman were shrilly discussing the colossal sale of a new best-seller.

Eventually, Mr. Buchanan found time to come and sit on the arm of her chair. "I've been meaning to drop you a note," he said, balancing, rather dangerously, a highball and a cigarette in the same hand. "We'd like a picture of you for our edition of Friday the eighth, and a short biographical sketch. Sort of introductory affair to the appearance of 'At Sea' a week later. Can you manage it?"

"Heavens, I don't know! I haven't had my picture taken since I was ten!"

"Um—well, that would scarcely do. We're exploiting you as somewhat of a prodigy, but I hardly think

LOANS INCREASED TO CHARLEVOIX FARMERS

Greater Participation in Farm Security Loans Is Indicated

Charlevoix county farmers operating with the aid of loans secured from the Farm Security administration, increased their net worth by an average of $81.94 per family during 1938, according to data recently compiled by County Supervisor T. B. Pemberton and submitted to the Washington officials of the Farm Security administration.

Mr. Pemberton pointed out that the purpose of the Farm Security administration is to help distressed and handicapped farm families to become self-supporting and self reliant. The FSA loans are based on farm and home management plans worked out with each individual borrower family. The supervisor also called attention to the fact that before securing FSA loans, these families had been denied credit from all other sources. The report covers 59 families.

Dairy cattle, according to the review, showed a major increase and the total number of cattle now owned by the borrowers is approximately 400. Their hogs and poultry also increased with the number of hogs now about 125 and the number of poultry estimated at 1500. There were nearly two work horses on the borrowers' farms.

NATIONAL WILD LIFE WEEK IS MARCH 19-25

Observance Urged in Proclamation by National and State Leaders

March 19-25 is Wildlife Week. Its observance will be marked by proclamations by the president, the governor and city officials, special programs in schools, churches and clubs, and a wildlife banquet, with receipts going to the wildlife fund for financing the national movement to preserve and perpetuate the natural resources of the country.

The wildlife poster stamps are made up of sheets of eighty designs, depicting game, waterfowl, mammals, birds, fish, trees, wildflowers, etc. The stamps are valuable additions to any library, schoolroom or home for their faithful reproductions of the wildlife of America. They are printed in natural colors, and perforated so that they may be separated for preserving in a scrap book or using on the backs of letters to help promote National Wildlife Restoration week.

The objectives of National Wildlife Restoration week may be outlined as:

1. To bring about a wider and fuller public understanding of the present crisis in condition of national resources.

2. To win organized support and effort toward a program of sensible wildlife use and restoration.

3. To obtain voluntary financial support for the movement so that it may carry on from year to year.

MICHIGAN IS NATION'S TOP PICKLE PRODUCER

Grows Billion Pickles, One-Fourth of National Production

If the nation's pickle eaters fail to get their fill in 1939, it isn't Michigan's fault, for growers in this state last year harvested 25,000 acres of cucumbers to get an estimated billion pickles.

That's a fourth of the national production, as figured out by E. L. Seaton, horticulturist, and F. W. Fabian, bacteriologist of the staff of Michigan State College.

The two men were leaders at East Lansing in the recent midwinter technical school for pickle and kraut packers which attracted plant managers and technicians from 18 states and Canada. The schooling is designed annually as a service to those who utilize so much of the Michigan production of cucumbers for pickles and cabbage for kraut.

One of the men attending the conference was Roy Irons, Clyde, Ohio, secretary of the National Kraut Packers' association. He placed Michigan fourth in kraut cabbage, yielding a large share of the 192,000 tons packed in 1938 and now being consumed. The 192,000 tons fill 138,384,000 average size cans.

Insects and crop diseases were discussed at the conference, as well as new information on vitamins, flavors, control of bacteria and use of various sugars and acids in processing the food products.

VAN WAGONER ADVOCATES SUPER HIGHWAY

Would Seek Billion Dollar Fund for Construction in United States

Michigan's Murray D. Van Wagoner laid before the American Road Builders' association in convention in San Francisco, Calif., this week a 25-year program of super-highway construction in the United States.

Van Wagoner's plan included the setting up of a billion dollar revolving fund to finance initial construction with the superhighways later liquidating themselves through tolls or an increase in the federal gasoline tax. The commissioner, however, admitted disadvantages to each of these financing methods but emphasized that roadbuilders could not long postpone an answer to the superhighway need.

FENCING YOUNG STATE PARK A CCC PROJECT

Group of Twenty Workers Completing Project Started Last Winter

Twenty CCC enrollees, under the direction of Milford E. Martin, Jr., landscape architect, are now engaged in the further improvement of Young's State Park, on Lake Charlevoix, by the construction of a rustic fence around the boundary of the park. The three rail fences are built of pine, with white or red pine posts and jackpine rails, stained a rustic brown, and treated with creosote to prevent weathering and decay.

Two thousand feet of fence has already been completed this winter in addition to 1,000 feet completed a year ago.

BIENNIAL SPRING ELECTION FALLS ON APRIL 3

State, County and Township Officers Come Up for Election

Secretary of State Harry F. Kelly has outlined the following information regarding the spring election April 3:

"This year the people of Michigan will case their ballots for two Justices of the Supreme Court, each for a term of eight years, their terms commencing on January 1, 1940; two Regents to the University of Michigan, for terms of eight years each, beginning January 1, 1940; a Superintendent of Public Instruction for a two year term, commencing July 1, 1939; a member of the State Board of Education for a term of six years, beginning July 1, 1939; two members of the State Board of Agriculture, each for a term of six years, their terms commencing January 1, 1940.

Every county will elect a county school commissioner except in counties over 250,000 or more population in which Act 117, Public Acts of 1935, provides for a county superintendent of schools.

In each organized township, a supervisor, township clerk, treasurer, justice of the peace, commissioner of highways, constables, not to exceed four in number and a member of the board of review are elected.

The terms of officers for township offices, except a member of the board of review and justices of the peace, shall be for one year. The terms of offices for the justice of the peace is for four years, beginning the 4th of July following the election. Township offices must qualify within ten days after the election.

SIX THOUSAND FARMERS SUPERVISE GAME

Operate Cooperatives on Hunting in 20 Southern Michigan Counties

More than 6,000 farmers in Michigan participated in 1938 in cooperative game management activities on their farms.

Projects in which the farmers operated were sponsored through service of the agricultural extension service of Michigan State college and the game division of the Michigan State Department of Conservation.

Cooperatives of farmers were organized under the "Williamston Plan" which has been in operation in the vicinity of that town since 1931.

In the 20 counties which found farmers using the plan last year, there were 450,000 acres of farm lands involved.

Primary reason for organization was to control trespass, but other wild life aids are being followed by the farmer cooperators.

These include curtailing unnecessary burning and draining of lands that offer cover and feed for game, and the protection of natural growth on unused or eroded areas. In exchange for these activities, members of the groups are furnished necessary signs for posting lands, and tickets which may be issued to desirable hunters.

Advice on proper administration by farmers of these hunting areas also is furnished by the college and the cooperating state conservation department. R. G. Hill, college specialist in game management, is aiding in the wider distribution of use of this plan.

WARREN SHAPTON HEAD CONSERVATION CLUB AT M. S. C.

Warren Shapton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Shapton, who is completing his final year of study on conservation and forestry at Michigan state college, has been elected president of the Conservation club at the college. The honor is a fine recognition of Warren's accomplishment in his chosen field.

SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBER IS IMPORTANT

Holders Urged to Safeguard Account Card to Avoid Trouble

Ten don'ts for those who have social security account numbers were issued today by Clifton H. Little, manager of the social security board field office in Traverse City. His suggestions are:

1. Don't give any wrong information when you get a social security number. Give your full name, your exact age and all other facts requested by the federal government.

2. Don't lose your social security account number. It is your property throughout your lifetime and should be guarded carefully.

3. Don't fail to make a record of your social security number and keep the record in a safe place even if you lose your card. In this way a duplicate number can be obtained more easily.

4. Don't have more than one social security account card. To have more than one may delay or reduce benefits you will receive later under the old-age insurance plan.

5. Don't give your social security number to any one else. Show it to your employer if he asks for it but keep the card. It is your personal property.

6. Don't hesitate to ask the social security board to correct extra numbers if you have more than one. This will help the board keep your wage record up to date and will assure your receiving full credit for all covered wages paid you during your lifetime.

7. Don't hesitate to ask the social security board to correct its records if you have given wrong information when you applied for a social security number. This service is free for the asking.

8. Don't be afraid the information contained in your social security application will be disclosed by the government. This information is held in strict confidence and is not available to anyone.

9. Don't fail to apply for a money payment if you reach age 65 and have worked in commerce or industry since January 1, 1937. You may be entitled to a substantial sum under such circumstances. The same is true if you are the legal heir of a worker who has died since the date mentioned, after having been employed in a covered occupation.

10. Don't hesitate to call at the Traverse City field office of the social security board for any information you may desire about any phase of social security. It is your office, all of its services are free and yours for the asking.

Backed by the state association of supervisors, Representative Audley Rawson of Cass City (the governor's own choice for the post of majority leader in the house of representatives) has introduced a bill to restore more local control in administering relief.

In brief, this bill would allocate one-third of a $1,500,000 welfare appropriation to counties on a basis of population, one-third on a basis of relief cases during the past three years, and the remainder on the basis of immediate needs.

While officials in industrial centers suspect that rural supervisors are using "home rule" as an excuse to get their hands on more welfare funds, the administration appears to be sincere in its belief that present handling of relief is top-heavy with salaries and unnecessary expenses. Economy is the key-word.

Will home-rule effect this saving?

If costs are reduced at the expense of cities, how will the voters in cities react? (Alderman Kronk of Detroit reflects some of the resentment against upstate control; he is sponsoring home-rule for Detroit by a movement to create a 49th state!)

A Brake on Spending

Governor Fitzgerald is not an advocate of state centralization of power. He, too, talks of "home rule."

In conferences with legislators he has suggested that the state administration should not solve home problems by acceding to fresh demands for more state funds. If the treasury is to be solvent, home communities must refrain from asking Lansing to shoulder more of their responsibilities, he has pointed out.

In the cause of home rule, therefore, lies the administration's hope of effecting economy in government. The trend for several administrations has been to create more bureaus at Lansing. Fitzgerald is trying to apply the brake.

Gambling Is Involved

When it comes to moral issues such as gambling, however, home rule is a horse of another color.

The governor at first took the attitude that gambling was a matter for local law-enforcement by the sheriff and of prosecution by the prosecuting attorney. Slot machines and gambling resorts, he said, should be controlled by county authorities and not the state. The reception of this policy was not cordial among rural people in general and among church people in particular.

In Macomb county irate citizens obtained a court injunction when a resort re-opened with brazen publicity. Last week the slot machines began to re-appear. Operators anticipate a busy season in the resort sections of northern Michigan and the upper peninsula where home rule in morality has been lax, especially when visiting tourists arrive with pockets well filled with cash.

The latest deviation of the home rule policy in gambling is that the administration will not tolerate syndicate control—a syndicate being an organization reaping profits from gambling in several counties. The implications are easy to forecast.

Civil Service

Eight bills on civil service have been introduced so far at Lansing.

Developments to date indicate that the legislature will yield to patronage pressure, repeal the present civil service law and open many jobs to competitive examinations.

Blanketing many Democrats in state jobs was accomplished by the 1937 legislature under the title of "qualifying" examinations for all those hired prior to January 1, 1938. For example, one state elected official discovered recently that the man on whom he was dependent for publicity releases is a Democratic county chairman. This state employee is protected by civil service. What is the Republican official going to do about it?

A check into the number of state employees added during the Murphy administration, however, has revealed the interesting fact that outright repeal of civil service might jeapardize the jobs of approximately 10,000 persons who were hired prior to January 1, 1937—many of them during the first Fitzgerald administration.

Senator Brake's Bill

Among the bills is one sponsored by Senator D. Hale Brake of Stanton which would compel all employees, hired between January 1, 1937 and January 1, 1938, under "qualifying examinations, to take competitive examinations.

This bill would also eliminate all present eligible lists and would exempt from civil service all divisional heads who were in a position to make policies.

Under Senator Brake's bill the Democratic county chairman, for example, could retain his job only by proving his competence through an open competitive test. The fairness of such an examination would depend, of course, on the civil service commission and its director — as would be the case in any administration, republican or democratic.

The Stanton republican, chairman of the senate judiciary committee, is one of the outstanding influential leaders in that chamber. Hence his views are of significance in the present civil service controversy.

Spring Election

With the spring election only a month away, the legislature is proceeding more cautiously on controversial matters that might develop into campaign issues.

The labor mediation board plan is one.

This measure, proposing a 10-day "cooling off" period between declaration of strike and the actual walk-out, was originally drawn up with numerous restrictions on both employer and employee. Among other things it outlawed sit-down strikes which were responsible more than anything else for the downfall of the Murphy administration last fall.

The United States Supreme court has taken the sit-down strike problem off Fitzgerald's hands.

And with another campaign in the offing, legislators are inclined today to postpone action on the labor bill until after votes have been counted. Many teeth in the present bill will be removed, it is believed, more dependency being put on public opinion than on legal penalties.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

From the office of Fred Bradley, Congressman
11th District, Michigan

Governmental administration under the New Deal has created more problems than it has solved. Every day there comes to the fore difficulties that arise as the result of attempts to settle economic ills through government control.

Heralded by promises of prosperity through a planned economy, the nation finds itself still confronted with unemployment, government inspired monopoly, agricultural surpluses, a near-bankrupt transportation system and more than ever before, a large percentage of the people in need of food, clothing and housing.

Agree on Objectives

From the very beginning, no citizen worthy the name has challenged the objectives. Everybody believes in a larger and more assured earning power and in order to reach that objective, the people were willing to submit to any reasonable program. That was why there was little effort made to block the new taxes for old age and for unemployment. Even the incurring of the largest debt on record was not universally protested, except by those who challenged the effectiveness of the pump-priming operations.

Now the administration finds itself farther back than where it started, with the added disadvantage of a national debt of around 40 billion dollars and with an annual interest charge of over a billion dollars, the interest alone costing more than the entire operating cost of the federal government for any one year until 1917 with the single exception of the year 1865, the last year of the Civil War. It marks the end of the planned economy period and the beginning of what should have been the major program in the first place, the finding of ways and means of getting people back on the private pay rolls in productive employment.

Commemorate First Congress

The three branches of the government, executive, legislative and judicial, joined in the ceremony arranged on March 4 to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the convening of the first congress. President Roosevelt, Chief Justice Hughes, Vice President Garner as president of the senate and Speaker William B. Bankhead, of the house of representatives, all took part in the program.

A joint session of congress, with a crowded gallery in the house of representatives, witnessed the historical event.

Sees Monopoly Peril

Willis J. Ballinger, economic advisor to the Federal Trade commission, told members of the senate monopoly committee last week that our laws against monopoly have proved ineffective.

"Monopoly has so far weakened the body of capitalism that both are in danger of dissolution," Mr. Ballinger told the senators, ading that this might be expected to be followed, as in other nations, "by some kind of authoritarian social order which would be highly distasteful to the American people."

Pointing to the danger of relaxing monopoly laws, such as occurred under NRA, Mr. Ballinger declared that business under our system is dependent on free competition, protected by rules against unfair practices. There must be enough free business to maintain a democracy, he declared.

Other witnesses testifying before the monopoly committee contended that price and production controls, set up to obtain larger profits at the expense of the consumer and the business system as a whole, had succeeded in a directly opposite way.

Action Contradicts Words

While Secretary of Commerce Hopkins and other administration spokesmen promise cooperation with business and private enterprise, pressure was placed on congress by the White House to continue all appropriations for TVA. Originally voted out by the house, the independent offices bill came back from the senate with the $17,203,000 included for the Gilbertsville dam. After considerable debate the house gave its approval by the slender margin of nine votes. Ultimately nearly 400 million more will be demanded for this project which might have been discontinued at this time.

Foreign Policy Flayed

Debates in the house and senate reflect a growing belief that the policies of the president are entangling the United States with foreign powers to such an extent that neutrality would be impossible should another major war break out abroad.

Congress is willing to vote money for every sound defense measure recommended by Mr. Roosevelt, but it is not in agreement that this nation should finance and encourage European nations in their war plans. Let Europe settle its own troubles and at the same time let us confine ourselves to our own domestic problems.

Senator Walsh (Democrat) Massachusetts, urged that the United States "mind our own business" and be "neutral, honestly, truthfully, directly and positively," in answer to the plea of Senator Logan, Kentucky Democrat, that we extend direct aid to England and France, lest they "fall prey to the dictators."

That was exactly what this nation did before we were drawn into the World War charged Senator Hiram Johnson, progressive California Republican, and noted isolationist. There is only one way to be neutral, he said, and that is by keeping out of the wars of other nations. There is no danger of becoming involved in war if we will mind our own business, and this the White House had failed to do, he charged.

It all started when a plane crashed in California, killing an agent of France here to buy planes for his government. That was the first that congress knew of the agreement to furnish planes abroad.

There has been introduced into congress what is known as the equal rights amendment, which says: "Men and women shall have equal rights throughout the United States." It's going to be a Godsend to us men if we can get it.

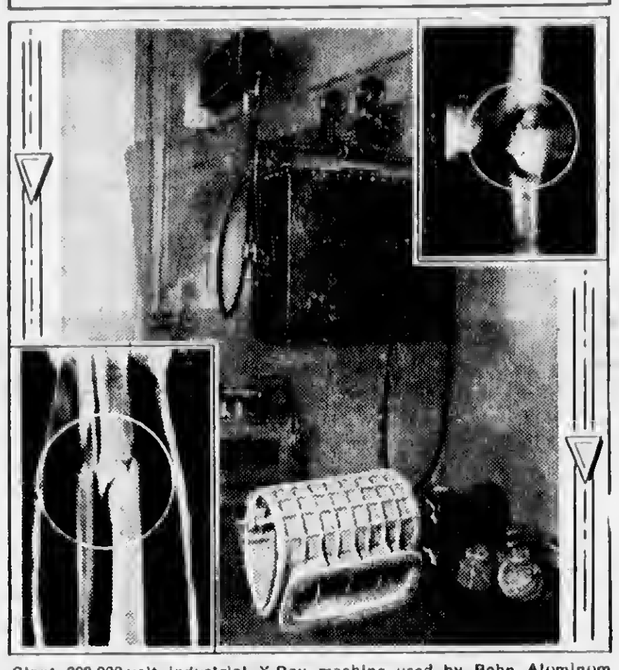
X-Ray Inspection of Metals Prevents Mishaps, Saving Lives and Money



Giant 200,000-volt industrial X-Ray machine used by Bohn Aluminum Company, photographing an aluminum casting. (Upper right) Flaws in a casting as disclosed by the X-Ray Machine. (Lower left) Break in a human leg bone shown by an X-Ray photograph.

THE X Ray machine, so valuable in surgery, now saves life and property in another way. Industry is using it to inspect mechanical parts to locate flaws in vital members to prevent failures while in service. The U. S. Government insists on X-Ray inspection of important airplane parts such as bearings. The Bohn Aluminum and Brass Corporation now exhibit the engine cylinder heads, bearings and other castings in X Ray inspection to eliminate defects. In this way manufacturing costs are reduced by detecting flaws before expensive machine work is undertaken and lives and valuable property saved by eliminating breakdowns resulting from such imperfections. Truly the industrial X-Ray machine has come to be an invaluable aid to industry just as it has been to the medical profession.

we can make our readers believe you're as young as all that! I'll tell you what—Miss Hickenlooper will make an appointment for you with a photographer some time this week, and he can take a few shots of you."

"If you want me to, certainly." Then, glancing at her watch, "It's later than I thought it was. I must be going."

"Dinner engagement?"

"Well—yes."

"I'm sorry. A bunch of us'll probably drift into Tony's, later on tonight, and I'd rather hoped you'd go with us."

"I wish I could," Mary replied, thinking how much more stimulating an evening with these hectic, interesting people would be than the one she had in store. Jerome Taylor was calling for her at seven. The dinner would be delectable. They would have the very choicest seats at the theater, and later go on to a club for supper. Everything would be perfect—but suddenly she wished, with all her fervor, that she might just stay on here with Phillip Buchanan and his friends.

CHAPTER IX

Spurred on with a new enthusiasm for writing because of having met, although rather casually and at no great length, a few arrived authors, Mary again set to work the next day. She entitled her new story "Concerning Anne," and, with a feverish zeal but not much conviction, devoted the entire day to working on it. Aunt Linnie and Lelia were occupied with some last-minute shopping for their cruise, and the apartment was blessedly quiet.

Miss Hickenlooper, sounding slightly more cordial than she had that day at the office, telephoned Mary around three o'clock, and informed her that she had made an appointment for her for some sittings at the photographer's at four the following day. And would she mind dropping in the office before going to have her picture taken? Mr. Buchanan wished to talk to her. Mary acceded happily to both requests, saying to herself, "Mr. Buchanan's probably made his decision on my story, and I believe, I really believe, it's favorable. Otherwise, he would merely have returned the manuscript with a polite note of refusal."

The following day, she refused luncheon invitations both from Jerome Taylor and Count Balianci. "Concerning Anne" must be retyped, and whipped into shape in order to present it to Mr. Buchanan that afternoon. Her heart was light while she made her plans. One story was finished, and another was about to be accepted. She was, she felt, going places and, for the time being, although she did not quite realize it, she had completely forgotten Christopher Cragg. At least, the hurt of his marrying Ilsa Graceland was not bedeviling her every conscious thought.

She arrived at The National Weekly quarters at exactly three o'clock, a large envelope containing her new manuscript under her arm. There were three people seated in the waiting room, but, much to her amazement, Miss Hickenlooper escorted her immediately, and with somewhat of a flourish, to Mr. Buchanan's office.

He was seated at his desk, gazing angrily at a typed letter in his hand. The afternoon sun filtered through the Venetian blind of the window behind him, and settled on that strangely sunburned hair of his, making him look, Mary thought, like a little boy who has spent too many hours on the beach.

Buchanan rose hastily from his swivel chair. "Oh, Miss Loring! It's you? Won't you sit down?"

Mary seated herself on the edge of the chair that faced his desk. "I'm very well, thank you. And I've really been working since I saw you the other day. Meeting all those interesting people at your apartment stimulated me immensely, and I got busy at once on a new short."

"Fine! That's fine. Have you finished it?"

Mary placed the brown envelope on the desk before him. "Here it is. I thought I might as well bring it with me since I was dropping in this afternoon anyhow. Miss Hickenlooper said you wanted to see me."

Phil Buchanan extracted a crushed package of cigarettes from the pocket of his tweed coat; extended it rather vaguely towards Mary who nodded a refusal; helped himself, and lighted a match. "Yes, I wanted to talk to you about 'Their Son.'"

Mary's heart turned a somersault. "Oh, so you've read it?"

"Yes, after Mr Van Winkle turned it over to me with a recommendation for thumbs down."

"For what?"

"Thumbs down. He didn't like it, Miss Loring. He said well, to speak quite frankly, he said it was trite."

Mary felt the hot blood rushing to her face.

"But I decided to read it, anyhow," Buchanan went on, "and I'm afraid I have to agree with him. It doesn't come up to the standard you set for yourself when you wrote 'At Sea.' The—well—the snap's just not there. The plot's weak. The story lacks conviction."

Mary felt as if she had been slapped in the face. The man's words seemed so brutal, and his rejection of "Their Son" was such a shock. She had definitely counted on receiving a check for it this afternoon. A foolish lump filled her throat, and to her dismay she felt hot tears welling into her eyes and sliding treacherously from beneath her lashes. She could not trust herself even to look across at the man on the other side of the desk.

"Good Lord!" Phil Buchanan exclaimed incredulously. "You're—you're not crying! My dear child, please don't take this thing so seriously—After all, The National Weekly's not the only magazine in New York."

Mary averted her face, and gazed blindly out of the window. "No," she finally managed to say, "The National Weekly's not the only magazine in New York, but if you say 'Their Son' is trite, and lacks conviction, there's no use in my trying to market it anywhere else. And what a fool you must think I am! Crying because you don't like my story! I—I bet I'm the only woman who ever bawled in your office!"

Buchanan grinned, showing those strong teeth that looked so startlingly white compared with the tan of his face. "Well, perhaps you are, but let's forget it."

Mary smiled through her tears. "Maybe you can, but I'm sure the memory of my making a fool of myself before an editor will haunt me to my dying day!—Mr. Buchanan?"

"Yes, Mary?"

"Throw that script in your waste basket!"

"Why, I can't do that. It's your property, you know."

"I never want to see it again!"

"No, I won't. It'll be mailed to you in proper form. Now tell me, what's the new tale about? And do you feel that you've allowed yourself enough time on it?"

Mary looked at him with troubled eyes. "Why, I don't know. I worked on it constantly for two days and a half—and, after all, a short is only a thousand or so words in length. Do you think I'd better take it back home?"

"No. Leave it here. I'll glance over it, myself, instead of submitting it to the regular routine. Then, if I feel it should be improved upon, I'll return it to you for revision before putting it through the usual reading procedure. Are you having that picture taken this afternoon, by the way?"

Mary glanced at her watch. "Yes, I am, and it's time I was getting to the photographer's. Thank you, Mr. Buchanan. You've been—nice, and I'm sorry I acted so silly."

Phil Buchanan followed her to the door. "Well, there's something you might do to—ah—make up for having floored me just a bit there for a moment."

Mary smiled at him obliquely. "And what is that? Never darken your doors again?"

"To the contrary. I have to drive Oscar up to Westchester this afternoon, and I wish you'd go along."

"Oscar?"

"Don't tell me you've forgotten Oscar! My dog, you know. He's working up an attack of something or other, and I want to get him to the veterinary's before he breaks out with distemper or the rickets, or whatever Great Danes have. We could call for you at the photographer's if you'll go; then, after getting Oscar settled, drop in at Trudi's on the Boston Post Road for a beefsteak dinner."

Mary hesitated. She had accepted an invitation with Count Balianci for dinner somewhere, and one of their usual walks, but an evening with Phil Buchanan suddenly appeared far more desirable than an evening with the suave Italian. She could phone Balianci; cancel her engagement with him.

"I'd love to go with you and Oscar," she finally said. "I don't imagine the photographer will keep me more than an hour, do you?"

"Not a chance! Shall I call for you, say, at five?"

"Yes, at five. Good-by."

He was, by the grace of a friendly policeman, waiting for her in his low-slung coupe when she came out of the building at five minutes after five. Oscar, looking regal in spite of a nose that was definitely dripping, occupied the rumble seat.

Mary hastily slid in beside Buchanan, and slammed the door. "I didn't know anybody short of the mayor could park on Fifth Avenue!" she said. "How's Oscar?"

"Oscar's got a decided case of the sniffles," Phil replied, looking really worried, "and Spike says you can hear a sort of wheeze in his chest—like an organ in a country church when the organist misses a note."

Mary turned about, and looked at the big dog through the back window. "He seems to be enjoying life right now," she reported. "Sitting up very straight and regarding the traffic with enormous interest!"

Eventually, they arrived at Doctor Horner's Country Retreat for City Dogs, and, cramped and cold, alighted from the car. Mary could discern, through the gathering dark of the March night, a rambling frame building, once a barn, so Phil Buchanan informed her—now a model hospital for canine pets.

A united howl from the inmates had set up the moment Phil's car had pulled into the driveway. Oscar, feeling he had been betrayed by his master and this girl who had allowed him to lean so comfortably against her, slunk beneath the car and, for exactly ten minutes, steadfastly refused to budge.

Eventually, they wheedled him out, Doctor Horner having produced some bait in the shape of a very large hunk of round steak. Finally, assured by the veterinary that Oscar merely had a cold and would probably be in the pink of condition within a few days, they told the dog good-by, and, followed by his accusing eyes, made their way to the coupe.

It was nearly midnight when Mary reached home. Lelia had just got in, and was rifling the ice-box; while Miss Colswell, propped up in bed, was reading.

"Come on in here, girls," she called from her bedroom, "and bring some cheese and crackers. Where in the world have you been, Mary?"

Mary stepped into the bedroom. "Why, Aunt Linnie, didn't Addie give you my message? I telephoned about five, but you weren't in, and I told her to tell you I was driving to Westchester with Mr. Buchanan. He had to take his dog to a veterinary's, and asked me to go along."

"Heavens! How domestic and unexciting!"

"But it was fun, Aunt Linnie, really! We stopped at Trudi's on the way back, and had beefsteak and German-fried potatoes, and pancakes. And we sat in front of a big log fire in a room that can't

"Darling, you're not falling in love with him, are you?"

be a day less than a hundred years old. No one else was there, and after Trudi served our dinner, he and his wife, who cooked it, came and sat with us, and we talked."

Secretary Perkins Cut Off

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins may not have to answer the impeachment charges lodged against her, but the congressional attitude towards her administration is revealed in the house vote to place the control of the wage and hour expenditures under Elmer F. Andrews, administrator.

The fight stirred up by the change will continue even if there is reached a peace agreement on another labor front, through negotiations being conducted between two committees representing the A. F. of L. and the CIO. Awaiting the outcome of these conferences the senate committee in charge of the hearings for the proposed amendments to the Wagner Act has deferred action until next week.

It looks like a man has to be defeated for office these days in order to get a good job.—Senator Adams.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT

Protection Against Whooping Cough

Years of patient research have at last yielded a whooping cough vaccine which, on the basis of recent tests, seems to be highly effective. As the malady is especially severe in children under five years old, sometimes resulting fatally, parents should consider giving such children this protection before the usual outbreaks of early spring arrive. Vaccination is desirable for older children but is not imperative.

One dose of the Sauer whooping cough vaccine is given weekly for three weeks. A skin reaction with some redness and tenderness may be expected for a day or so but this is not likely to be severe.

The diagnosis of the disease does not depend wholly upon the typical "whoop" which may be absent in the case of infants and older persons. Instead, a glass plate covered with a felutinous solution is held before the cougher and the organisms retained on the surface are examined beneath the microscope. A blood specimen, too, will reveal an abnormally high white cell count. A case of whooping cough confers lasting immunity and a person occasionally may fall victim subsequently if closely exposed in a sufferer later in life.

In the light of possible complications, whooping cough should be prevented. Dr. L. W. Sauer, who perfected the vaccine, was able to protect all but 32 children in a group of 2,453, ranging in age from six months to four years. In the same community, of 1,736 children not vaccinated, 286 developed whooping cough.

Their personal interest in Charlevoix's welfare has been established through many years of close association with local citizens. Their ability as hotel hosts has long been recognized. Charlevoix needs that kind of ability. In a recent letter, Bill said he would come here May 10th to start the "ball rolling."

KIWANIANS HEAR TALK ON AUSTRALIAN CUSTOMS

Dr. James Marshall, Australian Naturalist, Speaker Tuesday Night

Dr. James Marshall, Australian naturalist, who appeared Wednesday on the program of the county Teachers' Institute, was the guest speaker at the Kiwanis club meeting Tuesday night, giving an interesting talk on the topic, "United States Influences on Australia."

He showed through word pictures and colored slides the peculiarities of life and nature in Australia and pointed out that the Australians consider the United States as their nearest neighbor, even though this country is three weeks away by water transportation. England is six weeks away.

Dr. Marshall stated that the Australian Constitution is very like that of the United States, being copied word for word in many paragraphs. He also related that Australia has stimulated production to an extent that labor must be imported to satisfy the demand for its goods and that the country's prosperity is permanent among the nations.

Several Petoskey Kiwanians were guests of the local club, including Joseph Scroggin, president of the Petoskey club, Glen Townsend, Dr. Miller and Fred Smith.

MARCH TERM CIRCUIT COURT IS ADJOURNED

Two Are Sentenced by Judge Gilbert; Two More Await Sentence

The March term of circuit court for Charlevoix county was adjourned by Judge Parm C. Gilbert following sentencing of criminal cases Tuesday night.

William Haddix, 22, of Boyne City, was sentenced to serve from 3 to 4 years at Jackson prison for assault with intent to commit murder. Haddix, on probation from previous convictions for breaking and entering and car theft, shot William McCafferty in an argument over a woman on December 9th.

Ray V. Chapin, Marion township farmer, was sentenced to serve from 20 months to 2 years following plea of guilty to a charge of disposing of property mortgaged to federal loan agencies. Chapin had obtained two federal loans and a chattel mortgage on property owned by his brother, it is understood.

Richard Sudekatus, alias Richard Myers, 51, of Toledo, O., was found guilty by a jury of attempt to break and enter the Charlevoix Cooperative Co. oil station October 29th. He was remanded to jail to await probation report and sentence. Sudekatus has a long criminal record.

The case of Charles Nechita, Boyne City, charged with larceny and breaking and entering, was continued for sentence following Nechita's plea of guilty.

DUPLICATE GAME REPORTS ARE AVAILABLE

Hunters Who Have Lost Original May Obtain Them for Reports

In an effort to make it as easy as possible to do what the law says should be done, the department of conservation has printed 5,000 duplicate report cards for small game hunters and trappers who have lost their originals.

The duplicates may be obtained from conservation officers, conservation district headquarters and at the department's offices in Lansing.

Although the deadline for sending the reports in was February 15, thousands of both small game and deer hunters have not yet complied with the law, and the number of reports coming in to the department has fallen off considerably during the last few days.

Morning Subject

"The Girl With the Flaming Birthmark"

7:30 Discussion Group:

"Steps To a Happy Christian Life"

Sunday morning we will offer you the story we have been announcing for several weeks. This is a true story. It was thoroughly investigated and the details corroborated by a well known and popular magazine, no the "True Story" magazine. The details are so different that even the United States Court of Appeals granted a request never before granted. The story is based upon such a changed physical appearance that the above magazine called it a modern miracle. You should not miss this story—11 o'clock at Charlevoix, 12:15 at Ironton.

Our Sunday night discussion group is making good progress. We will consider again, beginning where we left off, the subject, "Steps to a Happy Christian Life." Without these teachings here or elsewhere one cannot intelligently live a Christian life. There are so many unbiblical plans, and some very conscientious people are mistaken. Some very good people believe their "Old Nature" can be eradicated. If that is so why do we continue to sicken and die, commit sin, in fact be susceptible to all of our human weaknesses? Well, come over Sunday night and let us talk this over.

Union Good Friday services this year will be held in our church April 7th, all protestant churches cooperating.

Cast Young Stars Provide Thrilling Entertainment in "The Duke of West Point"

Capturing the [illegible] romance, gayety and [illegible] cadets of the United States Military Academy [illegible] ace Theatre on March 11 for its premiere showing.

Headed by a cast which includes Louis Hayward, Joan Fontaine, Richard Carlson, Tom Brown and Alan Curtis, this romantic drama tells the story of young cadets who enter a different and difficult world when they become Plebes at West Point. Recording their ups-and-downs, their personal human dramas, their prides and prejudices, their hopes and dreams, the picture is unreeled against authentic backgrounds which were photographed at West Point by a special camera crew.

Colbert and Marshall in Film Leads

The private life of "Zaza," the notorious star of the French music halls, whose mad infatuation for a man she could never marry, is bared in the new picture of the same name, which Paramount has used as the new vehicle for Claudette Colbert and will present March 15-16 at the Palace Theatre.

With Miss Colbert, Herbert Marshall, Bert Lahr and Helen Westley the chief figures in the drama, "Zaza" presents an amazing and daring story of life behind the scenes of the French music halls. Marshall has the role of the society man who falls for the allure of "Zaza" against his better judgment and goes from one folly to another until both their lives are wrecked. Lahr is "Cascart," Miss Colbert's vaudeville partner, and the complete vaudeville hoofer right down to his "barber-pole" trousers and time-honored stage gags. Completing the leading foursome, Miss Westley is a quaint character as "Zaza's" tippling foster-mother.

OPEN BOY SCOUT COUNCIL OFFICE

HEADQUARTERS FOR 11-COUNTY UNIT AT TRAVERSE CITY

Charles A. Boyer, Scout Executive, Announces First Training Course for March 20 at Petoskey

President Hugh Johnston of the new Northwest Michigan Boy Scout Council announced this week the arrival of Charles A. Boyer, scout executive, and the establishment of a council office in the Sutherland building in Traverse City.

In making his announcement Mr. Johnston also stated that the office is now ready to handle any requests of scouts and scouters throughout the council, which comprises Manistee, Benzie, Grand Traverse, Kalkaska, Leelanau, Antrim, Wexford, Missaukee, Charlevoix, Emmet and Cheboygan counties.

Miss Amy Jane Hoyt of Suttons Bay, has been secured as secretary and will be in the office at all times to give information and available material to the public.

Plans for the summer camp program will be made during the next week and the camp announcement will be made before the end of the month. A systematic savings plan will also be introduced. Any person interested in scouting is cordially invited to contact the council office regarding the organization of new units or assistance from the executive at any time, Mr. Johnston stated.

Mr. Boyer announced today the opening date of a training course to be held for all scoutmasters, assistants, troop committee members, district committeemen, and any other persons who might be interested in scouting.

The first session of the course will be held on Monday, March 20, at the Emmet county court house in Petoskey. The training program will run for five consecutive Monday nights and each session is scheduled to start at 7:30 p. m.

The course, known as the "Introduction to Scouting," will give both new and experienced scouters an opportunity of hearing the philosophy, the organization and many technical points of scouting, as well as many new features in the administration of the Boy Scout program. The group taking the course will be divided into patrols, such as scouts in a troop are divided and the entire program will be run as would a meeting of a scout troop.

It is expected that over sixty men will be there from every town in the northern district of the council to take part.

WITHERS IS NAMED ON HONOR QUINTET

CHOSEN BY OFFICIALS AT THE BOYNE CITY TOURNEY

Lewis Brown Given Center Position on Second Team on Basis of Season's Record

A concensus of opinion of coaches, officials and press observers taken immediately after the last game of the district Tournament at Boyne City, named eleven men from the five Class C teams as all-tournament material.

Of these eleven the five players indicated as the honor team were as follows: Forwards — Sheaffer of Boyne City, C. Scott of Pellston; center — Hosegood of Boyne City; guards — Withers of Charlevoix, Lockman of Boyne City.

These five boys were called the outstanding performers of the three-night tournament and were picked as all-tournament players entirely on their performances during the tournament games. No emphasis was placed on the regular play season when opinions were asked for.

The other six boys named by those close to the players were just a "shade" under those who placed on the first five according to those who gave their opinions and in some cases who had surpassed the all-tournament men in regular season play. They were:

Furwards—Cihak of East Jordan, Givens of Pellston; center—Brown of Charlevoix; guards—Shepard of Harbor Springs; Shonivan of Pellston; Stackus of Boyne City.—Boyne Citizen.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By Ken Usher

Tuesday's miniature blizzard must have been the tail end of the sleet and snow storm that hit southern Michigan Saturday and Sunday. While we basked in the bright sun shine and spring-like temperature Sunday and Monday, lower Michigan was treated to the worst sleet storm in years. Maybe the storm was the last dying roar of the March lion. We certainly hope so.

And speaking about the weather, spring can't be so very far off, or else the crows we've seen and heard the last four or five days got their signals mixed and arrived too early. It's been a long, hard winter, the passing of which nobody is going to grieve. A year ago today the thermometer stood at 52 degrees and it was raining.

Bet I'm not the only one who knows that the trout season opens just 44 days from tomorrow. It's Saturday, April 29th, to be exact. Expect Charlie and Clarence and I will go up the Jurdan again. If the same thing happens this year as last, Charlie and Clarence will catch up on their sleep while I catch enough fish fur dinner. It was a lot of fun the last time and wouldn't mind doing it over again just the same way.

And while on the subject of trout fishing, Kalkaska has set April 28 and 29 for their annual trout festival which is quite some event. From a small start they've built it into one of the outstanding civic events in northern Michigan with hundreds of sportsmen gathering for the two-day celebration which marks the opening of Michigan's trout fishing season. Which all goes to cause us to again repeat "Why shouldn't Charlevoix hold a spring Perch Festival as a means of cashing in on the annual spring perch run that comes each year just as sure as death and taxes. It would not only be a swell publicity

KIWANIS HEAR TALK ON LOCAL HOSPITAL

Dr. McMillan Presented Interesting Facts on Policies Tuesday

Dr. F. F. McMillan spoke before the Kiwanis club Tuesday evening on the subject, "The Charlevoix Hospital as a Community Institution."

He brought out many enlightening facts. The institution has developed until it now has accommodations for 25 beds. There are men's and women's wards, each handling six patients, also several private and semi-private rooms.

Dr. McMillan pointed out that the hospital is partially financed through donations of money and equipment. Summer residents of the North Side, Belvedere and Chicago club ally themselves with local citizens in raising funds.

Among several fine policies is one by which indigents are always hospitalized when the need arises. Another permits any reputable physician in nearby areas to treat his patients at the hospital.

Members of the hospital board are H. A. Craig, president; E. J. Edwards, secretary; P. D. Campbell, treasurer; W. H. Wallace, J. M. Foster, Albert Cook, Martin Block, Dr. R. B. Armstrong and Dr. F. F. McMillan.

Donald T. Herrick, city superintendent, became a member of the Kiwanis club Tuesday evening.

PLANS ANNOUNCED FOR PING PONG TOURNAMENT

WPA Recreational Staff Sponsoring Event March 20 to 24

Complying with popular demand from the adult ping pong group following winter's play, the WPA recreational staff is promoting a ping pong tournament at the high school game room the evenings of March 20th through March 24th.

There will be four divisions of play, ladies' singles, men's singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles with championship and consolation prizes awarded in each division. Drawings will be made at 10 a. m. Monday, March 20, at the Board of Commerce office. A nominal entry fee to defray expenses will be charged. Entry blanks may be obtained at the Board of Commerce office.

The high school game room in the basement of the high school building is equipped with five tables and affords a fine setting for the tournament from the standpoint of both participants and spectators. The game room is open from 7 to 10 p. m. each week day for practice. Tournament play will begin at 8 p. m. each night of the tournament.

County and area tournaments may be planned in the near future. With many devotees of this fine sport here, a large entry is expected.

MEETING FRIDAY TO ORGANIZE ARCHERY CLUB

Local WPA Staff Promoting Project in District-Wide Program

In conjunction with a district-wide program by the WPA recreational organization to develop the ancient and now much popularized sport of archery in northern Michigan, a meeting for those interested in this sport will be held at the high school game room at 7:30 p. m. Friday, March 17th, to form a local club.

Recreational Leaders Joe Szymankiewicz and Ed. Radle have been trained in the art of making bows and arrows and the plans are for all members who join the group to make their own equipment under the direction of these leaders. Equipment can be made at a nominal expense and this craftsmanship is the pride of the real archer.

To become a member of the club it is not necessary for anyone to have any background in the sport, as it is intended that everybody develops the various techniques together.

Organization of the group will be followed by construction of ranges for spring and summer shooting, culminating in local, area and regional meets this summer.

4-H CLUBS JOIN PROJECT TO COUNT DEER

Three Hundred Members Scanning Feeding Yards in Michigan

Hunting without guns in midwinter in 13 of the most populous deer counties in Michigan is the newest 4-H boys and girls club project which has attracted 300 members.

The project is sponsored by the educational and game divisions of the department of conservation and by the boys and girls club department of Michigan State college.

What are they seeking — these hunters without guns?

They are after information to enable them to make maps of winter deer feeding yards, major problem of the conservation department now that the deer population seems to exceed the winter yards' supply of browse. Other data will show food supply and extent of browsing including reports on starvation.

TIME NEARING FOR ANNUAL SMELT RUN

EAST JORDAN JAMBOREE SET FOR MARCH 25

Bayne City Celebration Opens About April 1—Beulah Event Comes Between March 20 and April 5th

West Michigan's annual three ring fishing circus, the smelt runs, is getting close to opening day. First of these Smelt Jamborees is scheduled to be held in East Jordan on March 25, with the run at Boyne City hitting its peak about April 1 and the one at Beulah coming "sometime between March 20 and April 5" as the Beulah residents say.

The Jamboree at East Jordan will coincide with the close of National Wildlife Week and will open with a banquet and wildlife program on the evening of March 24. The Jamboree program will continue all day Saturday, March 25, with parades, street events, coronation of the King of Smeltium, with a stag banquet in the evening, which will recess for the "Charge of the Night Brigade"—the smelt dip.

At East Jordan the river is too deep to allow the dippers to dash into the stream so the dipping is done from the shore with long handled wire dip nets, handles from 12 to 15 feet long. Board walks are built out over the banks of the stream to make the dipping convenient for the visitors. The Jordan River Sportsmen's Club and the East Jordan Chamber of Commerce have put out an interesting booklet of advise to smelt dippers for free distribution to the smelt fans.

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

The ardor of legislators for outright repeal of the civil service law is cooling off.

Whereas outright repeal of this much-discussed statute appeared a fortnight ago to be certain, today sentiment is growing slowly for revision of the 1937 law, retaining most of its provisions and amending others to provide competitive examinations for all state employees except those in the lowest income brackets and executives at the other end of the scale, who help to shape administrative policies.

The so-called Pollock bill, recommended by the State Civil Service Study commission of which Dr. James K. Pollock of the University of Michigan was chairman, has been reintroduced in the house of representatives. The state affairs committee has decided to use this 1937 bill (which was amended by the 1937 legislature) as its starting point.

If this movement receives legislative support, the administration then would be in a position to maintain that it had enacted a "genuine" civil

"Sounds cozy," commented Lelia, entering the room with a tray of food. "Phil Buchanan loves to hob-nob with all kinds of people. Perhaps that's why he's so successful; he knows every phase of life. Half the policemen in New York have named their first-born son after him."

Miss Cotswell regarded her niece with speculative eyes. "Darling, you're not falling in love with him, are you?"

The butter knife with which Mary had been spreading some cheese clattered to her plate. "No," she said coldly. "I'm not falling in love with him, and a darned lot of good it'd do me if I were. He's interested in me as a writer—not a woman. And not so terribly interested, at that! He turned down 'Their Son' today—said it was trite and banal."

"Um," murmured Linnie, and bit into her cracker. "Well, I can't say, my dear, that I can shed any tears over that. The sooner you discover you were never meant to be an author, the better it'll be for you. Something will have to wake you up to the advantages of marrying Jerome Taylor."

Mary placed her plate on the tray with a bang that was almost fatal. "I'm never going to marry that silly old man, Aunt Linnie, and you might as well know it right now. Also, I wouldn't have Umberto Baltanci, with his brilliantined hair and perfumed cigarettes, for a gift. I'm sick to death of their fatuous glances and their silly speeches. It was wonderful—simply wonderful—to spend this evening with a man who never once mentioned my so-called beauty, nor attempted to kiss me. No, Aunt Linnie, I'm not falling in love with Phil Buchanan! And heavens knows, he certainly is not falling in love with me. In fact, there are times when I feel quite sure he doesn't even like me—that he secretly thinks I'm something of a fool!"

And, leaping to her feet, her eyes burning with unshed tears, she fled from the room.

CHAPTER X

The script of "Their Son" had reached Mary the second morning after the drive to Westchester with Phillip Buchanan, and the very sight of the long envelope in which it came, and the printed rejection slip that automatically had been enclosed, sent a wave of nausea over her. There was a small fire burning on the hearth in the living room, the March morning being chill; and Mary, seeing that Aunt Linnie was engrossed in her mail, stepped to the hearth, and dropped the script on the burning logs.

"That's that!" she told herself. "I never want to see the thing again. It'll only remind me of how futile my efforts are."

In that same morning mail, there had come a letter from Janet Loring; and Mary, seeking what privacy she could, seated herself in the wing-chair by the window, and slit it open with a hairpin.

Mary Dear

I am getting more and more worried about Dad every day. He is so terribly discouraged, and as yet not one ray of hope has come our way concerning a position for him. Also, he is not well, and has contracted a hacking cough that keeps him awake night after night. I've urged him to go see Doctor Cragg, who's back from his honeymoon, you know, but Dad always says, "Oh, it's nothing. I'll be better tomorrow." I know, however, the truth of the matter is—he's afraid of what the doctor will tell him, and also he feels he can't spend the money even on such a necessary thing.

He won't tell me how much money we have left in the bank, but I know it must be practically gone—after Pete's operation two years ago, and what Dad's had to draw for expenses lately.

Morning after morning, he leaves the house right after breakfast, just as he's done for twenty-five years, when there really was some work to be going to. Each morning he bathes and shaves and dresses so carefully, and there actually seems to be some hope in his face; but he always comes back to noon dinner, and again for supper, with no news to tell us, and a look of defeat in his eyes.

I've come to the conclusion that we ought to tell Linnie about our affairs, ask her for a loan. Five hundred dollars would be a life-saver for us right now—would give Dad some relief until he can find a position; but when I mention this to him, his face gets red, and he says, "No, Janny. We haven't come to that yet. I don't mind your sister's sending you valuable presents, and giving Mary a lovely time in New York, but I can't allow you to ask her for money to—feed us."

People don't seem to like Chris Cragg's wife very much. I saw her at Sullivan and Ourwerda's the other day, and she was being positively rude to poor Miss Ackley about their line of chintzes. I overheard her say, with a little toss of her head, "I'll simply have to go to Chicago to get what I want. Why, I can't even get a decent hair-cut or manicure."

We're so excited over the news that your story will appear in The National Weekly next month. Mr. Chickering called up the other night to get the details, and he's going to print a nice article about you in the evening paper. To think my daughter should be a successful author!

Have a good time, darling, and as long as Dad is so adamant on the subject, don't let on to Aunt Linnie in any manner, shape or form, that we are so frantic about finances here at home.

Mary read the letter again, her heart heavy with compassion. "Have a good time, darling"—"Don't let on to Aunt Linnie"—"To think my daughter should be a successful author!" The brave, pitiful sentences danced about in her tired mind. "Poor Dad!" she thought. "Poor Mother! So gallant—so determined! Wanting me not to tell. Wanting me to have a good time. Thinking me a successful author, when 'At Sea' is probably my one and only story that'll ever see itself in print."

Suddenly, unable to bear her thoughts in the narrow confines of Aunt Linnie's home, she jumped to her feet. "Aunt Linnie," she began, and her voice was breathless, "I'm going out for a walk."

Miss Cotswell glanced up from the announcement of an art exhibit. "Why, Mary! So early? It's only nine o'clock!"

The older woman, discerning the girl's unrest, studied her lovely young profile. "What's the matter, dear? You haven't received bad news from home, have you?"

"No, everything's — all right. I simply feel—restless. I won't be gone long."

Linnie Cotswell, sympathetic to something she could not fathom, continued to search the girl's face. "All right, my dear," she finally said. "Run along, but don't forget we're leaving for Journey's End at eleven. Jerome's car'll be here promptly on the hour."

"I know," Mary murmured as she left the room to get a hat and coat. And to herself, she was saying, "Journey's End—Oh, my God! How can I stand driving out there today—filling myself with rich food—being shown those thoroughbred horses and dogs—talking fool nothings!"

The days wore on—fruitless, sterile days for Mary. She longed with every fiber of her being to write, but the words would not come. It was futile to try, she finally told herself, until after she had learned the fate of "Concerning Anne." If Phillip Buchanan accepted it, her belief in herself would be restored. The dried well of her mind would again gush forth. Until then, she must go on in this helpless daze—eating, bathing—dressing; attempting to sleep; attending farewell parties given for Linnie and Lelia.

More than "making the motions" when you change to OIL-PLATING

Dump Winter-fouled oil. Whatever you do, drain and refill now with something. But drain and refill with Conoco Germ Processed oil and then your engine's OIL-PLATED. Then it's got more than swell fresh oil down in the crankcase—it's got another big plus all the way up... It's got fresh surfacing... OIL-PLATING. That comes from the actual union of this patented oil direct with inner engine surfaces. Conoco Germ Processing gives this oil so much "power of attraction" that it cannot drain down and leave engine parts bare, though your car stands by the hour or speeds by the hour.

Never all Spring and Summer, with Germ Processed oil, can your engine suffer rasping "dry starts"... not with every square inch always oiled in advance by drain-proof OIL-PLATING. Nor will four to five thousand revolutions per minute whirl away this implanted OIL-PLATING. It stays on. It helps the oil-level to stay up. PAPERS HELD BEST AD MEDIUM BY SCHMIDT'S

Practically 50% of Entire Advertising Budget Goes to Newspapers

"Approximately 50% of our entire advertising budget for Schmidt's Beer will again be spent in newspapers in 1939," stated George Schmidt, president of The Schmidt Brewing company, Detroit.

The fact that Schmidt's sales during 1938 were 7.9% ahead of 1937—whereas the Michigan brewing industry, as a whole, showed a decrease for the year of approximately 16%—has proven the wisdom of spending the bulk of our advertising budget in newspaper advertising. We believe we are one of the largest users of newspaper space among all the major breweries in Detroit.

This company's advertising agency, Simons-Michelson company, stated that the 1939 advertising budget would be approximately $175,000.00 and would appear throughout the entire state of Michigan in newspapers, as well as in part of Ohio.

BOYNE CITY PREPARING PLANS FOR SMELT "RUN"

Higher Water Level in Lake Expected to Increase Number of Fish

The Boyne City Rod and Gun club is rapidly completing plans for entertainment of visitors during the ninth anoual smelt run.

Although present weather conditions do not indicate an early breakup of ice, a record run is anticipated, one factor being that Lake Charlevoix is 18 inches higher than for several years, tending to cause a more even flow of Boyne river.

Inquiries are being received from former visitors and from outlying states requesting information.

DINNER WILL FEATURE ALL-MICHIGAN PRODUCE

Cong. Fred Bradley Sponsors Affair at Washington, D. C., April 6

Greater Appreciation on the part of the American public of the importance of Michigan's agriculture should result from the staging of the all-Michigan farm and food products dinner to be held in Washington on April 6 and through other advertising and promotional efforts, according to John B. Strange, commissioner of agriculture.

"Michigan has been referred to so often as the automobile state that the value of our farming has been lost sight of," Commissioner Strange said. "The fact is that while we rank only 26th in the number of acres in farms we rank tenth or better in all of the major crops with the exception of two, one of them being corn. For instance Michigan's rank among states in agricultural production is as follows: First, cherries; second, beans, third, grapes and potatoes; fourth, pears, peaches, alfalfa hay, clover seed; fifth, apples, field peas and buckwheat."

"The total cash income from the sale of Michigan farm products and from government payments to Michigan farmers in 1937 is estimated as $246,198,000," Mr. Strange continued. "Livestock and livestock products represented nearly 58 per cent, and crops about 39.5 per cent of the total.

Governor Frank D. Fitzgerald is cooperating with the all-Michigan dinner by contributing some farm products from his Grand Ledge farm. The Upper Peninsula Potato Growers association is furnishing potatoes; Michigan Canners association, New Era, cherries and peaches; Farmers and Manufacturers Beet Sugar association, Saginaw, beet sugar; Michigan Bean company, Saginaw, beans; Upper Peninsula Dairy Manufacturers association, butter; Carney Cheese and Butter company, Carney, cheese; Michigan Salt company, St. Louis, salt; Michigan Apple Institute, Bangor, apples; Traverse City Chamber of Commerce, smelt.

Representative Fred Bradley of Rogers City, who is making the arrangements for the dinner for capital newspaper writers, news reel cameramen and radio representatives, will serve as toastmaster. An invitation has been extended to Governor Fitzgerald to give the main address.

ELECTRIC USAGES CAN SHOW PROFIT

Michigan's farm women are getting their kitchens and households so well equipped with electrical appliances that they actually are retarding advance of rural electrification into the barns and other portions of the farms where real profit can be made from the use of feed grinders, milking machines and water pumps, electrical brooders and similar pieces of equipment.

That is the observation of D. G. Ebinger, rural electrification specialist of Michigan State college.

He finds on many farms the initial investments too often include electric ranges and pieces of equipment of high initial cost.

The men in the households look at the bills, find that charges are not high but that the farm is getting no profit back from devices that could be used with poultry, crops and livestock.

Thus the investment, says Ebinger, often looks like a luxury to a farmer. He is discouraged from purchasing the labor saving devices that could earn profit that could be used to pay for the household purchases.

Ebinger is pursuing the thought in meetings throughout the state as he participates in the agricultural extension service of the college.

His figures gained from farm records show that if Michigan is to continue its annual leadership in adding power to new farms, the practical side of purchases of equipment needs greater attention. Where the barn gets equipped first, the kitchen never suffers, for the cash returns prove to farmers the economy of equipping the household as well.

AT THE MOVIES

Norma Shearer as Phony Countess; Clerk Gable as Song-and-Dance Man, Co-Starred

Norma Shearer and Clark Gable, supported by a gronp of notable players, co-star in the screen version of Robert Sherwood's Pulitzer prize-winning stage play, "Idiot's Delight," which has been brought to the Palace Theatre March 18 for an engagement of two days.

Sherwood wrote the screen play, which has been brought to the films by Hunt Stromberg, with Clarence Brown directing. He was also the director of "A Free Soul," in which Miss Shearer and Gable appeared in 1932, she as the star, he to win his first real screen distinction.

Prominent in support of the stars are Edward Arnold, Charles Coburn, Joseph Schildkraut, Burgess Meredith, Laura Hope Crews, Skeets Gallagher, Peter Willes, Pat Patterson, William Edmonds and Fritz Feld, together with the dancing group known as Gable's Glamour Girls, comprising Virginia Grey, Lorraine Krueger, Paula Stone, Virginia Dale, Joan Marsh and Bernadene Hayes. The girls join with Gable when he performs his burlesque act as a hoofer and sings a song called "Puttin' on the Ritz."

"Burn 'Em Up O'Connor" Next Palace Attraction

A hitherto neglected field for motion picture thrills has provided the dramatic background for "Burn 'Em Up O'Connor," opening March 22 at the Palace Theatre. The new field is that of midget automobile racing which has suddenly swept the world of sports and in which junior speed demons risk their lives daily to offer exciting moments to speed-crazed galleries.

"Burn 'Em Up O'Connor" is the first in a series of sport features which MGM will produce. It teams Dennis O'Keefe and Cecilia Parker for the first time and also marks the return of Edward Sedgwick to MGM's family of ace directors.

One news dispatch states that Italy has 14 submarines capable of cruising to the United States and return. We'd sort of like to take a bet on that.

LANSING LETTER

service law and that the Republicans, instead of the Democrats, were the real friends of civil service.

Economy Still is Trend

In the so-called modernization of the act, Republican legislators will see to it that many jobs are made available, just as Democrat law-makers in 1937 provided that only "qualifying" examinations had to be taken by job applicants prior to January 1, 1938.

The present act covers 17,000 state workers.

If by exempting low income employees as well as policy-making executives this number would be reduced to 8,000 to 10,000, legislators say that a saving can be effected in the operating cost of the civil service department. The commission has asked $300,000 for the next fiscal year beginning July 1, 1939. House leaders want to reduce this to $100,000 on grounds of economy. Clipping of civil service wings thus would be justified, in part at least, by the imperative need to avert a further deficit.

In the senate a tourist-farm advertising appropriation was reduced from $100,000 to $300,000. Instead of $50,000 a year for general state advertising, as granted two years ago, the amended bill provides for $25,000 a year.

Advertising of Michigan farm products was limited to $25,000 a year on a $6,000 matched aid basis for any one product—apples, potatoes, etc.

Because of the 1939 world fairs at New York and San Francisco, Michigan resort owners are apprehensive over summer prospects. Last year's business was 20 per cent off normal.

Defeat School Bill

Supported by the Michigan Education association a resolution to relax the present 15-mill limitation, putting a revision up to a spring referendum, was defeated by a narrow margin in the house.

Dr. Eugene Elliott had supported the resolution which he felt would permit local districts to undertake needed school building construction.

Only two issues will appear on the April ballot: (1) Nonpartisan election of judges; (2) To permit the legislature to extend to circuit court commissioners judicial powers similar to those of justices of peace.

Borrowing Problem

A bill to give Michigan cities borrowing power of 20 per cent of their current tax levies, instead of 10 per cent, has stirred a controversy in Detroit, where the measure is backed by city officials headed by Mayor Reading.

The Detroit Bureau of Governmental Research, opposed to any increase in indebtedness, declared that to double the borrowing limit was but to multiply the "stableful of dead horses with which Detroit now is plagued."

Because of unemployment and a resultant temptation to undertake public work programs under the PWA's offer of generous grants, many Michigan cities have borrowed to the limit.

If recent legislative action is any index of Lansing's present temper, bills for more borrowing and more spending are likely to be carefully scrutinized. Chances of their passage are none too good, at this moment.

Fair Trade, Milk Bills

According to the Michigan Retail Institute, trade groups are "hopelessly at loggerheads" over the merit and constitutionality of any unfair trade practice bill which seeks to maintain prices.

"Rural opposition to the features which are claimed to center price competition on farm produce will probably grow in volume as the session progresses," states R. Wayne Newton, director of the retailers' organization.

A number of bills have been introduced, proposing to outlaw any prices "below cost" and otherwise to regulate retailers.

The present legislative "straws in the wind" are against any further extension of state regulation and control. This conservative trend also makes unlikely the passage of any milk price control measure at this session. Milk producers are still hopeful, however, that a compromise plan can be agreed upon that will afford some relief from the present low bulk price of milk at the farm—a price which, producers say, does not afford any margin of profit above cost of production.

Bricks and a Bouquet

Because many newspapers advocate retention of civil service and oppose outright repeal, some legislators have been inclined in recent weeks to grumble loudly about the press.

To seasoned capital correspondents who have seen administrations come and go and who followed the 1938 campaign in which few newspapers rallied to the support of Frank Murphy, the present critical attitude is a sudden reversal in form.

While law-makers are now in a mood to damn editors in general and correspondents in particular, newspaper writers generally agree that the present membership of the legislature is distinctly above average in individual competency and ability. At the same time, viewing the Lansing scene as unbiased observers, they believe that any civil service action smacking of sabotage would react unfavorably to the party in 1940.

"Three months ago these legislators were praising newspapers for their fairness in the campaign," commented one Detroit writer. "Now they are damning us. It all has convinced me that the press is on sound middle ground, neither to the right or left."

We present these candid statements for what they are worth.

EXTENSION SOFTBALL LEAGUE BEING PLANNED

Charlevoix Would Be Included in Northern Michigan League

Intercity leagues of the Michigan Softball association will be increased from two to four throughout Michigan, Commissioner Seth Whitmore has announced.

The tentative lineups are: Northern—Traverse City, Petoskey, Charlevoix, Manistee, Cadillac and Ludington. Central—Grand Rapids, Muskegon, Lansing, Grand Ledge, Holland and Grand Haven. Southeastern — Pontiac, Adrian, Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti, Monroe and Jackson. Northeastern — Midland, Bay City, Saginaw, Caro, Essexville, Owosso.

The divisions are located to eliminate the necessity of traveling long distances, Whitmore said. A playoff series among the winners of each circuit will determine the state champion.

Whitmore announced that meetings will be held before the season opens, to form schedules. First cities to obtain franchises in each league will be accepted, with each division having six or eight teams.

START CHICKS EARLY, IS ADVISE OF STATE COLLEGE

Charlevoix county poultrymen who hope to make a profit from their flocks next winter should purchase baby chicks in March so that they will produce eggs in the months of September, October and November. Earlier chicks mean a better chance of making a profit in most years, according to J. M. Moore, extension specialist in poultry for MSC.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SOCIETY

Sunday morning service, 10:45.

Sunday school, 12 o'clock.

Meets first Wednesday evening each month at 7:45 p. m.

We cordially invite the public to our service and reading room.

Reading room open Saturday, 2 to 5 p. m.

"Matter" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, March 19.

The Golden Text (Exodus 20:7) is: "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain."

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Matthew 9:35): "And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness and every disease among the people."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 227): "If God had instituted material laws to govern man, disobedience to which would have made man ill, Jesus would not have disregarded those laws by healing in direct opposition to them and in defiance of all material conditions."

We want more pump priming by private capital and less of it by public moneys and partisan greed. —Governor James.

It was now the twelfth of March, and they would be sailing in three days. Maybe, after they had gone, and she and Addie were left alone in the quiet of the apartment, she'd be able to think. Maybe . .

It was early in the afternoon of the twelfth that, coming home from a dull luncheon at the Ritz with some of Linnie's friends, she found a letter from The National Weekly on her dressing-table. Her heart flooded with hope when she saw that it was thin and flat—that it could not possibly contain a script. With clumsy haste she tore off one end of the envelope, and snatched out the single sheet of paper it contained.

"Why, it's in longhand," she said to herself. "How strange! Did Mr. Buchanan write it himself?" Yes, there was his signature, "Phillip Buchanan," scrawled at the bottom of the page.

Then, with joyous anticipation, she began to read:

My dear Miss Loring,

I've just finished reading "Concerning Anne," and, my dear child, "Their Son" was a gem in comparison. It, at least, had possibilities—that is, perhaps, for some magazine other than The National Weekly. What has come over you? Why can't the girl who wrote "At Sea" produce another perfect short?

It's in you, Mary Loring. It is—only something about which I can't possibly know is destroying your beautiful talent. Please try to overcome it, or shake it off, or forget it. I feel sure you can do it. I have absolute faith in your ability. That is why I am writing you these words which, in all probability, you will consider brutal.

"Concerning Anne" is not being returned to you by mail. I don't want anybody in the office to see it. Instead, will you lunch with me at the Brevoort Saturday the fifteenth, and talk things over?

Sincerely,
Phillip Buchanan

Mary never knew how long she stood there at the dressing-table, staring blindly at Phillip Buchanan's letter. A dull pain pounded at the back of her neck, and, for a while, she thought she was going to be sick. The frankness of his words was reacting upon her with physical violence. Her mouth felt dry and hot. Automatically, she moved towards the bathroom, took the peach-colored glass from its niche in the wall, and turned on the cold water faucet.

"I shan't have lunch with Mr. Buchanan and talk things over," she thought bitterly as she slowly sipped the water. "There's no use in that. There's nothing to talk over! I've tried for years to be an author, and I've failed. My writing one story that was worthy of acceptance was evidently just an accident. There's only one thing left to do now, and no matter how repugnant and cheap and vile, I'll simply have to do it. I'll marry Jerome Taylor. Perhaps Aunt Linnie was right all along! At least, it's the only way out—to save my family."

She had an engagement for dinner and the theater with Jerome Taylor that evening. He would "make love" to her sometime during the evening. He always did. He would tell her how beautiful she was, and how he never tired looking at her; and he would ask her if she didn't care for him "just a little bit." She had always evaded this question, or else answered, "Why, of course, Jerry, you know I like you very much," in a manner so definitely platonic that it forever brought the topic to a close.

She dressed with unusual care, wearing, as she had for that first dinner at Jerome's penthouse, her frock of silver and white, and, as she had also done on that night, his superb orchids high on her shoulder. You learn as you grow, she were [illegible] ing one last glance [illegible] mirror before going to the living room to greet him [illegible] bitter approval. [illegible] herself with scorn. "I look [illegible] what I am—a girl [illegible] orchids, creamy cape and all."

Jerome rose hastily from a chair as she entered the room. "Mary!" he exclaimed at sight of her. "My dear, you're more beautiful tonight than I've ever seen you!" And, lifting her hand to his lips, he kissed it.

She did not withdraw it immediately, although the touch of his lips on her hand made her cringe. She must not be aloof, as she heretofore had been with this man. She must pretend that she liked him. She must bring on a proposal tonight—tonight.

He evidently noticed the change in her, for they were hardly settled in his car before he again sought her hand and held it. She did not attempt to draw it away, although she felt as if it were imprisoned in the claw of a large eagle. "This is part of the business of getting engaged," she soothingly informed herself. "I'll have to endure it. It's—it's all in the day's work!"

"You're — different tonight, darling," Jerome was saying in that purring, tender voice she hated. "And, my dear, I've never seen you quite so beautiful. That coronet braid around your lovely little head makes you look like a queen! You do like me, don't you, dear? Somehow, tonight, I feel . . ."

But Lorgan, the chauffeur, was pulling up at the curb in front of the Waldorf and the uniformed doorman was opening the door of the car.

Bread Makes You Fat? Nonsense, Says Science

Neither bread nor cakes, pies, potatoes, milk nor candy make you fat because it all depends on what and how much you eat with them, is the contention in an exceptionally interesting article revealing many facts you probably never heard about "The Staff of Life" in The American Weekly, the great weekly magazine with the March 19 issue of The Detroit Sunday Times.

were sold everywhere for what prices they could get. They told everyone to work that could, and now they have no WPA, and all have work. They pensioned men above 65 at $20 per week, and women above 60.

The funeral of Frankie Hostler was held at the Methodist church at Central Lake last Saturday afternoon. Funeral was well attended by the relatives and friends. Rev. W. H. Houch preached a fine sermon. Mr. Hostler was a member of Eastport Baptist church of which Rev. Rauch is pastor. Rev. Reed of the Methodist church made the prayer and Mrs. Homer Loper acted as pianist, and Miss Harris sang two beautiful funeral songs, the "Old Rugged Cross," and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere." Both Mrs. Loper and Miss Harris were members of the Central Lake Pentacostal church. Mr. Hostler was a fine Christian gentleman and great worker, as well as his wife, in church work. He will be much missed by many people here. The deceased was a World War veteran and had suffered many years from shell shock and other disabilities caused in the war. He, like many other soldier boys of today, was much neglected by the government in the matter of pension compensation. There was much ado when the boys went over, but they were almost forgotten after they came back.

stunt, but would give a lot of downstaters some real honest-to-goodness perch fishing. It'a worth thinking about, anyway.

Emmet county is going to have an airport large enough for a transport plane terminal and to accommodate commercial planes which are now winging their way daily from Detroit to the Soo. They've bought the land up near Pellston and are seeking federal aid to develop the field. When you stop to think about it, that's foresight, for it wasn't so long ago that a commercial airline through this territory was something we only dreamed about.

Charlevoix citizens, who own their own electric light system and can use all the "juice" they need for street lighting, porch lights, water pumping and a hundred other things, can appreciate a little better what they've got when they learn that Harbor Springs has just decided to turn on their boulevard lights for the first time since Christmas because of icy conditions which make walking and driving dangerous. At 11 o'clock they turn off every other light, the rest remaining on until morning. Harbor Springs buys their current from a puhlic utility. A little reflection will prove that it's mighty nice to own your own electric light system.

Wonder how many local hunters are among the delinquents who haven't sent their game reports for the 1938 season to the department of conservation? Only about half the hunters have complied with the law, according to reports. Failure to comply constitutes a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of $100 or a sentence of 60 days, or both. It would seem that cooperation with this law wouldn't hurt anybody. As explained by game investigators, the purpose in setting up the report system was not to create an annoyance for hunters, but to provide a more reliable and comprehensive method of obtaining information regarding hunting and game conditions throughout the state. Such information, it is explained, is needed in the formation of wildlife management policies conducive to the improvement of hunting conditions and for that reason contributes to the very sport the hunters enjoy.

"The Power to Face Reality"

As one reads the Gospels he is struck with how constantly Jesus impressed upon His listeners that He was sent of God. Because He was sent, there was a purpose back of it. One has no right to look upon Jesus as one for His generation hut as one for all time.

In the evening we invite you to consider the subject "The Power to Face Reality." There are some who insist that the life of spiritual devotion lacks virility, that it makes one afraid to deal with the reality of life. They think that it is efeminate to be religious. But to what, or to whom, does the defeated man turn, usually? Come and let us discuss this next Sunday night.

INCOMPLETE REPORTS SHOW HEAVY DEER KILL

Returns Based on 50% of Hunters Places Bucks at 46,140 for 1938

With reports in from one-half of the 160,000 deer hunters who took to the woods last fall, indications are that the biggest deer kill in recent years has been made.

With returns from 50 per cent of the hunters now in, the size of the kill is estimated at 46,140. Each year the size of the estimated total kill decreases as the percentage of reports sampled increases. This is believed to be accounted for by the probability that the successful hunter reports without hesitancy while a disgruntled nimrod is inclined to let his report slip until the last possible moment.

A higher percentage of successful hunters is shown by present figures than 50 per cent records have indicated for any other year. In 1936 with 50 per cent of the reports in, the deer kill was 42,551. In 1937 with half of the hunters reporting, the figure was 42,868 as compared to 46,140 for 1938.

At Boyne City the Boyne River, although a sizeable stream, is shallow enough to allow the smelt dippers to get into the water and dip with almost anything that comes to hand. The Boyne City Rod and Gun club, which is sponsoring the celebration there, plans to install a screen in the river to hold the fish after they have spawned and to have a daylight dip this season.

A date for the Beulah smelt run will not he announced until about four days before they reach the peak of the run. Cold Creek, the famous Crystal Lake smelt stream, is quite small compared with the Boyne and Jordan rivers and any sizeable turnout of "smelters" fills the stream to capacity.

Although these three cities put on celebrations in connection with the smelt run there are at least a dozen other designated smelt streams where the conservation department allows dipping during the spawning run.

DUPLICATION

OR

UNITED EFFORT

Suppose the Michigan Bell Telephone Company maintained its own separate research laboratory in which to develop improvements in telephone service. And suppose each of the other 23 telephone companies of the Bell System did the same.

All these laboratories probably would be trying to solve the same problems; this would be wasteful duplication of effort and expense which would increase the cost of your telephone service.

In the Bell System, Bell Telephone Laboratories does the research work for all. Each company pays only a fraction of the cost, but gets full benefit of a research program that no one company could afford to maintain.

This economy is one of the advantages of our membership in the Bell System. It is an important reason why all America, including you in Michigan, enjoys the best, most reasonably priced telephone service in the world.

CARL W. BEATTIE RELATES TRAVELS

TELLS OF RECENT NAVY MANEUVERS IN ATLANTIC

Local Honor High School Graduate Is Now Momber of Crew of U. S. S. Tennessee

Carl W. Beattie, son of Clarence Beattie of Barnard, a recent honor graduate of Charlevoix high school and now a member of the crew of the U. S. S. Tennessee, writes in an interesting manner regarding the recent maneuvers of the fleet in southern waters. His letter is quoted, in part, as follows:

"I presume you folks are all wading in snow banks, and here I am sweating my head off. However, there is always a good sea breeze and as long as you are in the shade it is comfortable.

"Enjoyed the trip through the Panama canal very much. It is a great engineering accomplishment. Saw a number of lizards of all colors and descriptions on the banks of the canal. Went through six different locks. We stopped a few hours at Colon, but didn't go ashore.

"From Colon we went to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, where we joined the fleet. We stayed there three days. While there, we, the Tennessee, witnessed the U. S. S. Maryland shoot down a real plane which was controlled by radio. The plane crashed into the ocean just ahead of our bow. It was quite a show and I have no desire to become an aviator.

"The fleet left Guantanamo, divided into two fleets and played war for two weeks. At one time we were not far off the coast of Africa. At the completion of the maneuvers we anchored at Culebra Island and President Roosevelt was with the fleet aboard the U. S. S. Houston. From Culebra we came here to Ponce, Puerto Rico, for a liberty port. This city has a population of 126,000, but is very crowded and none too clean. Went ashore yesterday and bought some articles of apparel. Silk goods are cheaper here than in the states.

"I have my golf clobs along but haven't played but once so far. From here we go back to Guantanamo, Cuba, and remain there until the latter part of April, when we go to New York City and Norfolk, Virginia. Expect to take in the World's Fair and see the Yankees play some baseball. We get back to California on June 14 and will go to the Fair at San Francisco.

ISLAND SCHOOL GIVEN XMAS SEAL SALE AWARD

Hortnn Bay School Second in County; Rowarded for Efforts

Roosevelt school on Beaver Island wins first honors in the tuberculosis Christmas seal sale in Charlevoix county.

That was the report issued this week by the Michigan Tuberculosis association, sponsor of the campaign to raise funds for tuberculosis fighting in Michigan. Under the supervision of Giles McCann, the pupils of the Roosevelt school made a splendid record, the association declared. As a reward for their fine efforts the Roosevelt pupils were given "Healthyland," a big book of health plays, pictures, stories, verses, and letters.

Under the direction of the teacher, Dorsey Leckrone, the Horton Bay school ran the Roosevelt boys and girls a close second in the county-wide seal sale. In appreciation of Horton Bay school's splendid seal selling activities, the association awarded the pupils with "Twenty Game Combination," a combination of popular games in one set.

The association also commended the efforts of every rural school that took part in the sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals.

SPEECH CONTESTANTS ARE NAMED

HIGH SCHOOL PREPARED FOR SUB-DISTRICT CONTESTS

Mary Lou Clocklin Winner in Oratory; Ida Mitchell Takes First Place in Declamations

Charlevoix high school representatives in the sub-district declamatory and oratory contests to be held on or before April 17th at Bellaire, won the honor in local high school contests concluded last week.

Mary Lou Clocklin, a senior, took first place in oratory with her oration, "Is Democracy Doomed." Miss Clocklin was also Charlevoix high school's representative in oratory last year. Elsie Hilton and Robert Craig, juniors, placed second and third, respectively. The orators were coached by Stewart Coleman and contest judges were Harry Bingham, Frank Oleksy and Miss Hustin.

In the declamation eliminations, Ida Mitchell, a sophomore, won first place with her recital of John Lewis King's "The American Pioneer." Second and third places went to Mary Willis and Leona Struthers, respectively. Other contestants were Marjorie Wood, Ruth Edwards and Lillian King. The coaches in declamations were Miss Helen Olmstead and Miss Phyllis Hustin and judges of the contest were Miss Olmstead, Miss Ione Smith and Stewart Coleman.

The local contests were the first step in a state-wide elimination held under the direction of the Michigan High School Forsenic association. The second round will be the sub-district contest in which Miss Clocklin and Miss Mitchell will represent Charlevoix high school in competition with Boyne City, East Jordan, Mancelona and Bellaire.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By Keo Ushor

They say the older you get, the longer the winters seem. Must be that I'm getting awfully old.

The digging job now under way at the corner of Bridge and Clinton streets is to connect the Troy Laundry with the city's sewer system and eliminate emptying of wash water into Round lake. That will be good news to all boat owners. The work is under a WPA project, part of the city-wide street and sewer improvement program.

Must be that Petoskey citizens are satisfied with the administration of city affairs by Mayor B. H. VanLeuven. They have nominated him for a fifth consecutive term.

Wonder if it is cheaper to grow milk in Traverse City than it is in Charlevoix? See where the 13 dairies and creameries serving that city have lowered the price on pasteurized and Grade A milk to 10c a quart. Maybe the Traverse City cows don't eat so much.

One of the ways to find out what sportsmen think of proposed game and fish law changes is to call a meeting of sportsmen like Rep. John Guggisberg did recently at Indian River. Nearly two hundred sportsmen attended to present their views. It is interesting to note that delegates of the Emmet County Sportsman's club, representing over a thousand members, voted 100% to continue our present one buck law. The meeting opposed opening of a season on squirrels in Cheboygan county, and went on record as favoring a creel limit of 9 pounds and one fish on brook, rainbow and brown trout as a means of preventing an angler from taking a catch of 15 which might have a total weight of 75 pounds, more or less.

There is quite a contrast between the advent of spring this year and

BEAVER SEASON OPENS UNDER BAD CONDITIONS

Rivers Frozon Over, Highway Blocked with Snow; Catch is Light

The annual Michigan open season on beaver opened Wednesday under the most ndverse conditions ever encountered hy the state's trappers.

Rivers upon which the trappers in past years hnve traveled and trapped were frozen solid. An unusual combinntion of high wind and heavy snow thnt melted sufficiently to form a thick ice crust when it froze again made travel through the woods extremely difficult. One of the beaver streams, the Rifle river, was almost completely impassable and the duckboats and canoes of the trappers were useless.

All roads leading to the beaver grounds were blocked by the snow and ice and many miles of difficult walking were in consequence forced on the trappers.

Because of the extremely adverse weather conditions, the early catch was reported as very light. The season runs from March 15 to April 5 in the lower peninsula and from April 1 to April 15 above the straits.

DOGS HARRY DEER HERD IN EAST PART COUNTY

Two Deer Found Killed; Officers Warn Dogs in Woods Will be Shot

Two deer have been found slain by dogs in the county since Monday morning of last week, the Boyne Citizen reports.

Conservation officer Paul Sheponski of Boyne City headquarters Monday brought in a deer dragged down and killed by dogs in the front yard of a farmhouse three miles east of that city. The other was discovered by Officer Earl Cornett, just south of Boyne Falls, Tuesday.

The officers explained that crust on the snow in the outlying districts is responsible for the dogs being able to drag down the fleet deer. The sharp hoofs break through the crust while the dogs run on top without breaking through.

The conservatioa officials warn all dog owners that any dogs running in the woods at this time will be shot on sight. Tbis must be done to protect the deer herd.

WEATHER CURTAILS ANNUAL SMELT JAMBOREE

East Jordan Postponos Celebration to Saturday, April 1st

Continued winter weather conditions have curtailed activities along the several "smelt fronts" of northern Michigan.

Fearful that the smelt would not "run" at the early date anticipated, East Jordan has postponed their annual jamboree set for Saturday, March 25th, at the following Saturday, April 1st. Radio and newspaper announcements will carry the word to waiting sportsmen when the smelt really start up the river.

Likewise, Boyne City is holding its plans in obeyance with the weather. Their celebration will officially open when the "run" is on.

CITY SIGNS LEASE ON BATHING BEACH

TAKE OVER P. M. PARK AND BEACH FOR YEAR

Plan Installing Temporary Pier and Other Bathing Facilities—Renew Municipal Dock Contract

Assurance of bathing beach facilities on Lake Charlevoix for north side summer residents was provided by the city council Monday night through completion of contract for rental of the park and lake front opposite the Pere Marquette Railway depot from owners of The Inn hotel.

The council agreed to a rental figure of $300 for the season. Facilities contemplated will include a temporary bathing pier, raft with diving platform and diving board and provision for life guards. Towers for life guards were constructed for use last season. It is also understood the city will provide playground equipment for the park. Acquisition of a suitable site is awaited by the city council before establishing a permanent municipal bathing beach on the north side.

After considerable discussion, the council agreed to renew contract with Joseph Howard for management of the municipal dock on Round lake for another year. Mr. Howard has been in charge of the property for several years.

The council split 4 to 2 in granting a permit to Mrs. Della Jeffery, owner and operator of Moonlight Gardens, to serve beer in the dance hall. Aldermen Cartier, Erber, Hallett and Heise voted in favor of granting permit, Aldermen Wood and Hooker against.

Payrolls to the Kit Carson Lumber Co., on the electric light plant extension, and to the Clement Industrial Electric Co. for switchboard work at the light plant, were approved.

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Associatioo

Eight legislative days remain for filing of new bills for the 1939 session of the state legislature.

Pet measures of every kind are being dumped into the hopper, referred to sundry committees, and left to await their fate which, in most cases, will be oblivion.

The very fact that more than 600 bills have been introduced here to date and that around 900 will probably be the final total offers an insight into the hazards which legislation must surmount twixt introduction and passage.

More than one conscientious representative and senator has voted in favor of a bill on the say-so of a friend without giving it more than a passing glance. In the mad rush of the final weeks of every legislative session, unwise bills often slip thru, due to realistic circumstances rather than to deliberate intent.

266-Page Bill

A case at hand is Senate Bill No. 1, the probate code, representing months of work by a study commission created by the 1937 legislature.

PHELPS NEWS

We are very sorry to learn about Mr. Ecklund's illness and we hope very soon he will have recovered and be on his feet again.

The bad storms of late and the epidemic of flu in our community have cut down our attendance at school, but we hope with spring coming on they will get thawed out.

The eighth grade has received some literature concerning different memorials erected over our country. We are also studying important projects. We find it very interesting to study with our English.

Mr. Palmer, our county school commissioner, visited our school Wednesday and told us a story about a young lad school teacher in Battle Creek and how the Indians attacked their school. He showed us in the story that kindness gets one a long way in life.

CENTRAL LAKE

Marvel Knowles was the only one at Bay View school last Thursday.

Mrs. Harry Lewis called on the A. Snitseler family last Sunday. The Snitselers have been snowed in all winter.

The Spencer Arnold family all have the flu this week, and two of the boys have been kept home from the CCC camp.

Very few could get to North Holland church Sunday as the road was full of snow again, although not so bad as last week.

Well, we did get a spell of weather last week. It was the worst storm of the season, and lasted five days. No mail for two days.

Spencer Arnold's people nearly all are entertaining the grippe this week. The boys are helping out with it and are home from CCC camp.

The Walter Andersons called on the John Dawson family in town Sunday. Mrs. John Dawson is quite ill with the flu, and the local physician is attending her.

If it had not been for snow on the roof, the Liscums would have had a fire at their home Saturday. They heard the roar of the chimney, but thought it was the snow plow.

Lambert DeVries and wife arrived Saturday from Zeeland, Mich., but could not get to their home on the side road at Bay View, so had to go on to the O. N. Sage home at Central Lake.

The big sale of Otto Salchow's west of town was attended by a big crowd today (Monday). He goes on a visiting tour, he and wife, this winter, winding up at his daughter's in California.

Miss Betty Morse is ill with the flu this week. The twins, Doris and Dorothy, are better and going to school again. One had the measles and the other was hoping she would have them too, but was disappointed by only having the grippe. What one has the other wants to have.

Many were much surprised and grief stricken to hear of the death last week of Gov. Fitzgerald. He had just started a good work of saving, and getting after the gamblers, and getting through some beneficial laws. However, it is hoped that the present governor will carry on the good work just started.

Troubles never come singly. Raymond Lamereaux's little boy ate the rat biscuit and was ill, and gave some to the dog which had to be killed, then nearly the whole family was taken with the flu; then the wind separated the cow barn roof from the main part of the barn so that it nearly fell onto the cattle. Neighbors came in and braced the roof up Saturday so that it did not fall down.

A nice crowd assembled at the Gleaner hall at Eastport last Saturday to hear the grange program sponsored by Mrs. Emily Whitney, lecturer. The state police gave a very instructive talk, Jay Mudge and wife of Torch Lake furnished some fine music, and a bounteous repast was served by the ladies. Your correspondent with a number of others, got his finger prints by the police so we are in line for identification.

Fertilizer Dealers to Meet Friday Night, March 24

Already announcements have been sent to all fertilizer dealers in this particular district inviting them to attend a dealers conference to be held on Friday, March 24, in the Federal building, Boyne City. The conference will start with a banquet at 6:45 at Davis' Restaurant, after which the meeting will take place upstairs in the Federal building.

Mr. Longnecker will discuss in detail the composition of fertilizers, the standard analysis, and the various types of applications. Great progress has been made in the last five years in lessening the various formulas. Largely as a result of standard high quality fertilizers being recommended, 85 per cent of fertilizers now used in this state are of the recommended formulas. More and more each year, dealers are better able to make the proper recommendations to the purchasers of plant food.

Another encouraging development is the fact that farmers, by buying higher analysis, are receiving more value for their money. By far the majority of fertilizer now used contains not less than twenty units of plant food. All dealers or salesmen for fertilizer companies are most cordially invited and urged to attend this conference. The dinner will start at 6:45 at Davis' Restaurant.

Professor H. C. Rather, From MSC to Address City-Farmer Meetings

Professor H. C. Rather, head of the farm crops department, has been engaged as main speaker on four city-farmer get-togethers arranged for Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, March 27, 28 and 29.

His first appearance will be at the Rotary club, Boyne City, on Monday night. Each Rotarian is inviting a farmer friend to enjoy a wonderful banquet and attractive program. On Tuesday afternoon his appearance will be in connection with the annual Boyne Falls Agricultural Day. All patrons of the consolidated school are most cordially invited to enjoy a banquet at noon and the afternoon program. This day is always looked forward to with great interest.

On Tuesday night the Charlevoix Kiwanis club is staging its annual farmer's night with the expectations of at least seventy being present. Each Kiwanis member will invite as a guest a farmer friend in the Charlevoix area. Then on Wednesday night the East Jordan Chamber of Commerce, a very active organization, will entertain its farmer friends at a similar event.

Professor Rather has only recently made a tour in Europe and secured first hand knowledge of how the thrifty farmers handle their farming operations. Doubtless he will have movies to illustrate his talk. It is expected that these meetings will be greatly enjoyed. Once a year it always seems desirable to have the farmers and business and professional men enjoy an evening together.

Saturday is the last day of GAMBLE'S 14th anniversary sale.—Adv. 12t1.

Thankful that the drive was at an end, Mary withdrew her hand from Jerome's elasp, and slipped on a long white glove. "That's over—for a while," she told herself, an impereeptible shudder going over her body.

It was not over for long, however. Jerome Taylor, warmed by her appareat eneouragement, waited only until after their entree had been served to begin again. His eyes, no longer quizzieal, held a new glow of sanguinity; his voice had lowered to a new note of fervor.

"Mary," he began as snon as the wsiter had left their table, "I believe you're beginning to like me just a bit after all this time. How about it, dear? You know I've been simply mad about you ever since the first day I saw you."

"Have you really?" Mary countered. And then, desperately forcing herself, "I'm—I'm glad, Jerry."

The man plnced his fork on the side of his dinner plate. "Darling, how can you ask? You certainly have known it all along. You're the sweetest and the loveliest and the most beautiful thing I've ever seen. And, Mary, I want you always."

"My dear, you're more beautiful tonight than i've ever seen you!"

Eventually, she raised her eyes to the man, and forced a smile to her lips. Jerome, wrapped in his own thoughts, saw nothing amiss in her long silence; that cyniral twist to her lips. "Darling," he was saying, and now he had pushed aside his untouched food, and lighted a cigarette. "I want to take care of you always—give you the rare jewels that only you are suited to wear; the exquisite clothes you should have to accentuate your oeauty. We'll travel everywhere, Mary—see everything—do everything there is to be done! I'll always be proud of you. So very proud of you!"

Still unable to bring any words to her lips, she sat there; now lifting her gnblet of water to her mouth; now sipping some water; now placing the goblet back on the table.

Jerry, unmindful of the people about them, reached aeross the table and placed his hand over hers. "Dorling, why not go down to Palm Beach with me tomorrow? My yaeht's down there, you know, and . . ."

Mary glaneed sharply aeross at him. "Tomorrow? But, Jerry, haw in the world could we get married in such a short time?"

The man hastily relinquished her hand, and leoned back in his ehair. The warm glow that had filled his narrow gray eyes disappeared. "My dear," he purred, "you seem to have misunderstood me."

Mary stared at him with incredulous eyes. "You weren't asking me to marry you?"

Jerome Taylor laughed. "What a provincial little thing ynu are! Why, everybody knows I'm not the marrying sort. But, my dear, there are so many things I can do for you . . ."

Mary felt for the cape which lay aernss the back nf her chair, and with trembling fingers, pulled it over her shoulders. "You conceited old fool! I hate you! I've always hated you! I never want to see you again!" And grabbing her gloves and bag from the table, she rnse from her chair.

As unperturbed as if she had told nim she'd just remembered a telephone call she had to make, Taylor rose too, his sleek gray head inclining in a suave little bow. "Don't make a scene, my dear," he said in a low voice, his lips fixed in a sneer. "Remember, we're in a public place. Besides, you're not exactly suited to melodrama, you know."

Mary flashed him an enraged look; then, with steps which she tried desperately to keep steady, made her way blindly through the tables, and nut of the room to the lobby.

Eventually, she reached the door, and, in a vnice that was still throaty with anger, asked the doorman to call for a taxi. She wondered if she had enough money in her bag to pay for the eab, but she was so dizzy with anger, she could not even bring herself to look.

She was whirling at the Avenue—away from Jerome Taylor—closer, closer to Aunt Linnie's apartment and the safety and security which it betokened. Now, the eab was pulling up before Aunt Linnie's apartment house. Mary glaneed at the meter; then emptied her purse into the driver's hand.

She stepped to the curb, and ran across the eanopied walk to the entranee door. Her head was down, and in her eagerness to get into the foyer, she did not see the man who was leaving it. He eaught her arm in an attempt to prevent a collision; then, as they both eame to an abrupt standstill, she looked up. "Why, Umberto!" she exclaimed. "I didn't see you!"

"That is quite evident, little Mary!" he replied with a smile. "I had just dropped in to eall on you, and but now was leaving with a heavy heart."

"Mush! Mush! Mush!" thought Mary. "Why can't other men talk as sanely as Phillip Buehanan?"

"You are back early, my beautiful!" Balianci continued, his hand still on her arm. "Is something wrong?"

"No, Umberto, I wanted—to—come home."

"But then, I may go up with you, and stay a while?"

Mary frowned. "No, Umberto. No, no, no." Then, seeing the shadow that crossed his handsome dark face she said, "Oh, all right! Come on for a few moments. We'll listen to the radio."

Addie opened the door in answer to Mary's ring. "Why, Miss Mary!" she exclaimed. "I just told this gentleman you were out for the evening!"

"I changed my plans, Addie," Mary returned and, slipping Lelia's wrap from her shoulders, handed it to the woman. "Addie, I wonder if you'll make us some black eoffee. I have a headache."

"Yes, ma'am, honey!" Addie replied. "I'll have some for you in just a few minutes."

Then, as Addie disappeared into the kitchen, Balionci came towards her. "Darling," he murmured in the honeyed tones that Mary loathed, "something has gone wrong with you! Something has hurt you! I ean see it written on your lovely face. Tell Umberto, my sweet."

Mary glanced up into his somber eyes—eyes that were filled with compassion and pity. "It's nothing," she began in a voiee that was husky with emotion. The ugly shock of Jerome Taylor's wurds had left her at last, but in its place there burned a blind rage agninst the man, and a fear for all things to come. "It's nothing," she repeated. And then, bursting into wild, uncontrollable sobs, she cried, "Oh, Umberto, it's everything! It's everything! Yes, something has hurt me terribly!"

And, quite without knowing how it happened, she found herself in his arms, his lips softly pressing her eheek, her head against his shoulder.

"Darling! Darling!" he was saying softly. "Cara mia, I love you!" And, for the moment, she felt safe, supremely seeure in his arms. "Tell Umberto all about it, my sweet."

She shook her head. "No! No! No! I can never tell anyone!"

Taking a hnndkerchief from his pocket, he dried the tears nn her face. "Ynu've been erushed by something, my darling, and I could kill the beast who hurt you. Oh, Mary, my dear, I lnve you! I want to take care of you. I want you to be mine always, so that nn one can ever hurt you again. Dnrling, will you marry me?"

"Oh, nn, Umberto, I can't marry you! I don't want to marry anybody!" And then, with a badgering persistence, the thought, "But, I must marry somebody. I must do something!" again flooded her mind.

"Ah, darling," Umberto replied, touching his lips lightly to her eyes, "yuu say that tonight because you are upset by this dreadful something; but tnmorrow, tomorrow, it will be different! Ah, feratasa, say you will eonsider it! Say I may leave you tonight with my heart warmed with the hope you will marry me soon."

"I—don't know, Umberto. Let's not talk about it tonight."

Mary withdrew from his embrace, moving towards the fireplace, her cold hand against her throbbing forehead. "I—dnn't know, Umberto. Let's not talk about it tonight. Maybe . . ."

Balianci followed her. "Maybe?" he repeated softly. "Maybe! Oh, cara mia, that means you will make me the happiest man on earth!"

He attempted to take her in his arms again, but she pulled away, grateful to hear Addie approaching frnm the kitchen.

She had hardly finished pouring the coffee when a key could be heard turning in the latch of the entrance door. An instant later, Lelia Ormsby came into the room. Her eyes widened when she saw Mary sitting there with Count Balianci. "Why, Mary!" she began. "What are you dning at home? I thought—"

Umberto jumped to his feet. "Mrs. Ormsby," he exclaimed, his dark eyes flashing, "congratulate me! I am the happiest man on earth! My lovely lady has promised to marry me!"

A look of consternation flashed across Lelia's face. "Why, what do you mean?"

"But just that!" Balianci returned, with a grandiose wave of his hand. "Ynu will felicitate us, yes?"

Lelia moved towards the lounge where Mary sat, her gaze riveted on her coffee eup. "Mary," she demanded, "is this true? You're not really going to marry Count Balianci, are you?"

Mary could not look up, nor could she speak for a moment. "I—don't—know—Lelia," she finally replied in a remote voiee. "Maybe I shall."

Lelia continued to regard the girl with eyes that were cold with unbelief. "Well," she said at last, and her voice was crisp, "I wish you both happiness. Perhaps Linnie Cotswell will be satisfied now. She's down in the lobby talking to the manager of the building. She'll be up here in a minute and you can break the joyous news to her. We were planning to go on to Club Torquay tu join the Baseoms for a bit of roulette. No doubt, she'll want to make a party of it in celebration nf this—ah—happy event."

"But that is wonderful!" cried Umberto. "I shall buy champagne, and everybody will drink a toast to my bride-to-be!"

Mary finally glaneed up at Lelia. "You—you will come, Lelia?"

A pregnant silenee followed—a silence in whieh Lelia, snapped open a cigarette box that lay on the table beside the lounge, removed a cigarette and lighted it. "Yes," she finally said, "I'll go along."

CHAPTER XI

Aunt Linnie arrived on the scene a few minutes later. "Don't say anything!" Mary admonished Balianci and Lelio. "Please. Plense!" And her voice was so importunate that they both nodded their aequiescence.

If Aunt Linnie felt any surprise at seeing Mary sitting in the living room with Balianci when she had supposed her to be at the theater with Jerome Taylor, her face did not betray her. "How nice to find you and Balianci here," she exclaimed. "Lelia and I are going to the Club Torquay to meet the Bascoms and play a bit of roulette. Will you join us?"

"Thanks so much," Balianci replied. "We'd love it."

"I'll change in a jiffy," Lelia was saying, as if from a great distance. "Will you excuse me for five minutes?"

Lelia appeared in but a moment, looking slender and lovely in a frock of flame-colored chiffon, and carrying over one arm her ermine wrap, and a black velvet coat with a white fox collar. "Here's ynur wrap, Mary," she said, handing Mary the ermine cape; then proceeded to slide into the black velvet coat.

Fifteen minutes later, they were entering the crowded rooms of the Club Torquay. The scent of expensive perfumes, cigarette smoke, and food in the offing, filled the place. Men in dinner coats, women in evening gowns sat around the gaming tables, while persons wishing they had seats stood behind them, watching the play.

Two seats were finally vacated, and Aunt Linnie and Mrs. Bascom hurriedly slipped into them. "Are you going to nlay?" Miss Cotswell asked Mary over her shoulder.

"Heavens, no!" Mary answered, and glanced across the table just in time to see two more people get up, a defeated expression on their tired faces, and Lelia and Balianci slid into their little gilt and rose-velvet chairs.

Miss Cotswell opened her evening bag, extracted a fifty dollar bill, and asked the long-faced banker for fifty one-dollar chips.

The game went on and on. The placing nf new bets before each spin began! The ehirl of the wheel! The bouncing of the ball—on Black—or Red—on number twenty-seven! Here, there, until it settled on the winning number.

Mrs. Bascom had lost consistently; had purchased one batch of chips after another; but Aunt Linnie, betting, as she said, "like a piker," had been fairly lucky.

Balianci, after a brief time, relinquished his seat to Mr. Escom, and was now standing next to Mary, his moist hand encircling her elbow.

Linnie had asked her again and again if she did not wish to play; had even offered her a bunch nf counters when another seat had suddenly been vacated, and again and again, Mary had firmly refused.

Eventually, however, Linnie had risen from her chair. "Listen, Mary," she whispered, "I simply have to go to the powder room. Now here are five ehips for your very own. Play them while I'm gone. Hold them for me, or someone'll grab them the minute I leave. Whatever you win with them is yours. Go on, darling."

This manfully Mary grudgingly took Linnie's place at the table. Everybody about her was intent upon placing chips on their chosen numbers or colors before the next turn of the wheel, but Mary, never having played roulette before, just sat there, the chips Aunt Linnie had given her clasped tightly in her hand.

FITZGERALD PASSES

Governor Frank D. Fitzgerald's death Thursday evening came with shocking suddenness. Reports of his illness gave only a slight hint of his critical condition and news of his passing was hard to believe.

Fitzgerald had many personal friends in Charlevoix and Charlevoix county. They were not gained entirely through political affiliations, but because he was an affable and friendly person who made friends easily.

It is bitter irony that death should claim Governor Fitzgerald at the peak of his career. His political path had been a difficult one and he had only a few short months ago achieved victory in a return to Michigan's governorship after going down to defeat in the Democratic landslide of 1936. He was the first and only man to regain the office after once being defeated — an honor which reflects the confidence Michigan's citizenry held in his ability and administrative policies.

Michigan and the nation lost a leader.

Tooth Mortality in Elementary School Children

The term, tooth mortality, has been used in dental literature to indicate the loss of permanent teeth. The statistical data is determined on the basis of permanent teeth that have been extracted or which should be extracted because of disease. Deciduous teeth which are lost naturally through exfoliation are not considered in this classification.

"Since loss of permanent teeth due to caries constitutes an important physical defect found in elementary school children, one of the primary objectives of dental health programs becomes the prevention of tooth loss." So reads a recent report of the United States Public Health Service. The only way known today to prevent tooth mortality is to prevent the spread of the decay process by the placing of fillings in the teeth involved and as in any preventative service, this should be done in the early stage of the decay. There comes a time when the extent of the decay is beyond dental repair and the loss of the tooth follows.

Tooth mortality rates give an indication of the dental health of groups of children and indicate the group need for dental health services.

Studies recently made of children throughout the country have given us some interesting figures. Those made in an eastern coast city of approximately five thousand children show that 2,232 boys of ages from six to fifteen years had 742 permanent teeth missing, or 33 per 100. The 2,184 girls in the same group had 807 missing permanent teeth, or 37 per 100.

It is significant that in this city the girls had a higher tooth mortality than the boys, for it corresponds with data obtained elsewhere thruout the country. No adequate reason has been given us yet for the difference. The difference however became apparent at the age of ten. At this age the rate for boys was 32 per 100 while that of the girls examined was only 26.

The first permanent molars contribute 90 per cent of the total tooth mortality for each sex of any school population, which indicates that education regarding the importance and care of these permanent teeth has apparently fallen upon deaf parental ears to the detriment of the dental and perhaps physical health of our youth.

Postponed Dairy Meeting to be Held Wed., Mar. 29 at East Jordan

We are pleased to announce that the last dairy meeting of the series of three arranged for this county, will now be held at the city hall, East Jordan, on Wednesday afternoon, March 29, beginning promptly at two o'clock. This meeting will be exactly on the same subject matter as the one scheduled for the week before, but which had to be postponed because of the severe storm.

The value of pastures during the months of July and August is well known. Mr. Harrison will have some recommendations that will help to carry through this period when, ordinarily, pastures are dried up or at least cut down in efficiency.

This will be the last dairy meeting of this winter season, so please tell your neighbors, invite them to come with you, and let's have a real dairy meeting at the city hall, East Jordan, on Wednesday afternoon, March 29.

BOUNTY HUNTERS PAID HEAVY SUM IN JANUARY

63 Female Coyotes Listed in Take During Past Month

Bounties paid for predatory animals captured during the month of January totaled $2,130.

Largest single item on the bounty list was $1,260 paid for 63 female coyotes. Fifty-one male coyotes were taken and bounties totaling $765 were paid. Two female coyote pups and two male coyote pups were turned in for bounties of $40 and $30 respectively.

Only two wolves were taken during the entire month. A bounty of $20 was paid for one female wolf and a bounty of $15 for a male wolf.

True Stories of Human Interest
(Michigan Press Association)

Old Time Efficiency

Vicksburg—Horsepower and heavy duty trucks may be all right, but Clarence Hendrickson of Fulton puts his faith in the old-fashioned method of hauling—oxen. People in Fulton were surprised recently to see him drive into town with his team of brown Swiss oxen hauling a bobsled loaded with feed.

A Little Bit Late

Plymouth—Late in January city employees emptied Main street refuse containers for the first time since Christmas. One can as beside a mail box, and in it was found a large number of Christmas cards, some with a rubber band around them. They were turned over to the post office for delivery, so the absent-minded mailer is not entirely out of luck.

Neat Job

Potterville—Complete but careful might describe an accident which occurred to Mrs. Marion Bills of Grand Ledge recently. While driving near here, her auto collided with another coming in the opposite direction. The fenders and running board on one side of her car were sheared off in the collision, but neither auto was upset, and neither of the occupants was injured.

Wild Game Rarity

Romeo—Coyotes may not be unusual in northern Michigan, but they are unusual as far south as Romeo, and especially when one is shot in town. Elwood Duncan recently collected $20 bounty when he killed a female coyote with a .22 calibre rifle. The animal was crossing the street near a local gas station when it was shot.

Rolling Wheel

Williamston—When the driver of a transport truck applied the brakes for a stop light here a short time ago, his truck stopped but one wheel did not. An outside wheel on a dual trailer wheel kept right on rolling and crashed into the plate glass window of a Main street store. The driver did not notice the wheel was missing until someone called it to his attention.

Clear Conscience

Ionia—A man who visited here recently must have a clear conscience by now. While in town, he called on three merchants, admitted petty thefts at their stores, and offered to make payment. He committed the thefts 15 years ago, he said. After settling the past accounts, the man again left Ionia, his conscience cleared.

4-H DAIRY TEAM FINALS AT WORLD'S FAIR; TO COMPETE FOR $2800 IN SCHOLARSHIPS

Interest in the third annual National 4-H Dairy Production Demonstration contest, again available to club members, is greatly increased by the finals being scheduled October 21-30 at the National Dairy Show to be held at the San Francisco World's Fair. Conducted as before under the supervision of the extension service, the activity offers attractive county, state and national awards and worthwhile training.

Both boys and girls may participate and their first step should be to apply to local leaders or the county extension agent for regulations and helps in preparing and organizing their parts.

Demonstrations must relate to breeding, growing, fitting, feeding, and judging of dairy cattle and the production of milk and cream on the farm. County elimination contests must be held early enough to allow sufficient time for state selections to be made before the September 15 deadline.

In addition to the awards, boys and girls may derive many other benefits such as acquiring knowledge on the best dairy practices and passing it on; gaining experience in public speaking, and developing team work and sportsmanship.

First and second ratiog county teams will receive gold and silver medals. State winners are awarded educational trips to the National Dairy Show in San Francisco. There the two highest ranking teams in each extension section will receive scholarships, the first of $250 each and the second of $100 each, provided for the third year by the Kraft-Phoenix Cheese corporation of Chicago. No fee or obligation is required to enter.

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Psalm 111:10): "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom: a good understanding have all they that do his commandments: his praise endureth for ever."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 275): "To grasp the reality and order of being in its science, you must begin by reckoning God as the divine principle of all that really is."

Well Known Evangelists Here Sunday, March 26

Rev. and Mrs. Ralph Poole, evangelists from Anderson, Ind., will be in Charlevoix March 26th, to start a two weeks' revival campaign at the Church of God.

The evangelist and his wife are both musicians and are also bringing with them a musical director. So we are looking forward to a real treat, as they are very highly recommended for this kind of religious work.

There will be a service every night, from the very start, to the last night of the meeting. All the people of Charlevoix, and the surrounding community, are invited to come and hear these fine singing evangelists.

They will preach nothing but the pure word of God. You are invited to bring your Bibles with you and follow them. If you are a lover of the truth come and hear it.

CHAPTER XI

"Go on and play," Mrs. Bascom whispered. "They don't like it when people just sit around doing nothing."

The "guests" were again placing their bets on numbers or colors; and rousing herself to action, Mary dropped just one of her five chips on Black. Again the croupier spun his wheel, and the ball dropped on Red; bounced out and landed on another Red; fitfully leaped out and settled itself comfortably on Black. "You've won!" hissed Mrs. Bascom, who had again placed her chips on a losing number. "Leave it there! It's worth two dollars now."

"Just leave it?" Mary inquired breathlessly.

"Of course! Leave it on Black.

Again the croupier spun his wheel. Again Black won.

"It's worth four dollars now," said Mrs. Bascom. "Black's evidently your lucky color!"

"Oh, but maybe it won't win again! Perhaps I'd better try a number now!"

"Faites votre jeu!" admonished the croupier coldly, and before Mary had time to do anything at all, his wheel had again been turned, and her four dollars' worth of chips had remained, willy-nilly, on Black.

Again the bouncing of the ball here and there—and again Black won. "Mary! This is uncanny! Leave it there, darling. Your chips are now worth eight dollars!"

"But it can't go on this way!" Mary demurred. "I ought to stop now, or place those chips on something else!"

"Well, do as you like, but I'm switching to Black."

Mary grabbed her chips and looked about the table in search of a magic number. "My birthday's the fourth of April," she told Mrs. Bascom. "I'm playing number four this time. Eight dollars on number four!"

The wheel spun. The ball bounced here and there. "You'll be sorry," Mrs. Bascom whispered. "Black'll win! I'm playing on your luck, Mary—fifty dollars' worth of chips!"

The ball was still bouncing. Then, with a spasmodic jerk, it rose in the air, and fell with a brittle thud on number four. "I won again!" Mary cried, turning around and looking at Count Batianci. "How much is it now, Umberto?"

Balianci removed a cigarette from his mouth. "Two hundred and eighty dollars, fearatasa, not counting the eight dollars you played."

"Two hundred and eighty dollars!" Mary exclaimed. "Well, it is time for me to stop!"

"Don't you dare!" cried Mrs. Bascom, grabbing a fifty dollar bill from her purse, and signaling the banker for more chips. "Play just once more, Mary. If you win this time, you'll really get something worth while."

"Faites votre jeu!" the croupier commanded icily.

"I want my chips, please," Mary hastily informed the assistant croupier nearest at hand; and, with a quick motion of the man's rake, her winnings were deftly deposited in front of her.

Mary sat back in her chair in a state of hetpless indecision, casting an almost angry look at Mrs. Bascom. "If only that woman would stop urging me on," she told herself, "I might be able to figure this thing out."

The phrase "Two hundred and eighty dollars . . . Two hundred and eighty dollars!" whirled dizzily around in her mind. "How much that would mean to Dad! Yet, how wonderful it would be to double it!"

It was unthinkable, of course, that she should risk one cent of those two hundred and eighty dollars. But why not take one last chance, win or lose, with the eight one-dollar chips?

Before she could act on this decision, however, the wheel had again been set in motion, and the croupier was now calling out, "Rien ne va plus!"

Mary leaned forward, determined not to be caught napping on the next spin. She would have her chips ready when the croupier again gave notice. Suddenly, she realized that she was still gripping in her left hand four of those five original chips which had been Aunt Linnie's gift to her, and, with a feeling of complete abandon, she added them to her prospective stake. "One more play!" she told herself sternly. "Twelve dollars! Win or lose!"

"Faites votre jeu!" came the command.

Mary placed her final bet on number twenty-two. "That's my age," she told Balianci. "Maybe it'll bring me even more luck!"

The croupier turned the wheel, and with enchanted eyes, she saw it go around again and again. The ball now clicked on to four; bounced out; now dropped into number seven; popped out! Now it bounced up again and then, incredibly enough, settled on number twenty-two.

"You've won again, Mary!" Balianci almost shouted. "Four hundred and twenty dollars!"

Mary jumped from her chair. "I'm through!" she announced to the table at large, and the croupier in particular. "Take my chips off! I'm going to cash them!"

"Piker!" jibed Mrs. Bascom.

"I don't care if I am," Mary retorted. "I'd be a fool not to quit now."

"Yes, you would, Mary," Aunt Linnie who had just returned from the powder room, agreed in a low voice. "Cash in!"

"I want my chips cashed," Mary told the banker, and her voice trembled with excitement.

"Oh, Aunt Linnie," Mary breathed, "isn't it just too miraculous?"

"Yes, darling," Linnie replied. "I'm very happy for you." Then, turning to Mrs. Bascom and to Balianci, whose swarthy face was as blank as the croupier's, "We'll see you later in the foyer!"

"All right," Mrs. Boscom replied. "I'm nearly through."

Balianci bowed, but said nothing.

"Come on into the powder room, Mary," Aunt Linnie murmured, "to count your winnings, and—regain your equilibrium."

"I must have won about seven hundred dollars," Mary whispered as they made their way through the crowded room. "But, Aunt Linnie, it really belongs to you. It was your money I played with."

"Fiddlesticks!" said Miss Cotswell. "I gave you those five counters, and it was your own good luck that made them win."

"Then," said Mary, "you must, at least, take half. If you hadn't given them to me, I'd never have played."

"Hush!" commanded Miss Cotswell. "Not another word out of you about my sharing your little fortune. Every dime of it is yours! Here's the powder room. Come in and freshen up. You look as if you'd been in a cyclone."

In the meantime, Lelia, having lost all that she had intended to play, now relinquished her chair to the gaunt old man who had been standing behind her for the past half hour. Balianci appeared at her side immediately. There was a

Yesterday (Tuesday) the first day of spring for 1939 was cloudy with a temperature very near the freezing mark. It will be recalled that spring a year ago was preceded by twn consecutive weeks temperatures ranging well above freezing. A year ago March 22nd, freshets resulting from the release of swamp waters by the unusually high temperatures, caused a wash-out of the Pere Marquette Railway trestle at Barber creek, and the wash-out of culverts and a 50-foot sectinn of rondbed nt Loch ercek on M-66. Automobile traffic between Charlevoix, Ellsworth and East Jordan was stnpped becanse of flooded highways. Inland lakes were far above normal level and flood conditions never before experienced in this district were prevalent. Looking at the snow piled nlong highways at the present time provides quite n contrast, indeed.

The following communication received March 20, is self-explanatory and is qooted herewith.

"Dear Editor:

"We desire very moch to correct on impression that has arisen here in town. We feel that everyone has the right to know the troe conditions.

"Surplus foods are given to every rural school engaged in 4-H hot lunch work. They are prepared by either teacher and pupils in the school, or by interested persons. Thus, many children are benefited.

"As goods are not delivered, the teacher's car often must call for them ot welfare headquarters. The teacher herself never receives any surplus foods. The only things she does receive are additional work and happiness thot comes from trying to help others.

"Thank you.

Sincerely, A Teacher."

If you might be looking for a pleasuralde Sundny jnunt, drive over tn Chestonia on M-66 some time and walk np the E. J. & S. railway tracks to what is known as Pine Ridge. Here is one of northern Michigan's few remaining tracts of virgin pino and it is well worth the effort to view those majestic trees. The timber covers probably about a section of land. It was somewhere around t8 years ago that lumbering was started on the south end of the troct. Only n small amount was cut, however, before operations ceased and today this timber presents a wonderful sight. It is but a dot compared to the unending stands of timber which once covered this nnrthern region and n view of it will form an impression thnt words cannot express.

Remember when Lyle "Beaudy" Beandoin was winning basketball games for Charlevoix high-school and was a star on the locnl team? Well, he's still up to his old tricks. See where he was a member of the Nevada team which won the champinship of the I. B. Harrison Intra-Mural League at Cincinnoti, Ohio. Lyle was second high scorer for the winners with 13 points in a 46 to 35 victory over the Utah team. The years deal gently with some fellows

See where the "first robin" stories nre out in Grand Rapids and Traverse City. We're still waiting for the first one here in Charlevoix.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

G. Russell Parker, Pastor

March 26, 1939
Sermon Subject:
"The Teachings of Jesus Concerning Human Responsibility"
7:30 Discussion Group:
Faith Enriched by Experience

If a person is normal, mentally, he cannot escape the responsibility of keeping the laws of our government. To plead he did not know, will not help.

Because a man refuses to hear the gospel preached, and therefore does not know its demands, that will not excuse him. If he allows business or any other chosen activity to keep him from hearing the gospel, he is still responsible. To choose a philosophy of life or a religion or an interpretation of the gospel that nullifies the gospel of Jesus Christ, one will not be excused however sincere he may be. Hear this interesting subject discussed Sunday morning.

In the evening we will discuss another very interesting subject under our general theme "The Problem of Following Jesus." Jesus said in the presence of those who doubted his authority, if they wanted to know definitely whether his teaching was of God, let them sincerely follow his will. For one to merely become a Christian, will not make his Christian life interesting, he must work at it. To witness to the saving grace of Christ is not enough, he most work at it. Come over at 7:30.

The young people found a lot of mistakes in the bulletins in the bulletin board on Bridge street. You try.

REPAIRS FIT URGE OF SUN IN SPRING-TIME

Overhaul of Farm Machinery Should Be Made for Season's Work

It's an instinct for homans to get oot into the sun early in spring, but it's more profitable for farmers to link that urge with the ombition of getting machinery in shnpe to do a season's work.

At least that's the psychology of H. H. Musselman, head of the agricultural engineering department of Michigan State college.

If a farm does not have a shop equipped for repair work, that is no excuse in his opinion for not performing work that will save valuable time in planting and harvest periods. The sonny side of a building will serve as a suitable site for operations.

Plows that need new shares ought to get them now, or especially hard steel should be welded to the points. Moldboards ought to be polished and grensed.

A good supply of eveners, singletrees ond clevises and chains are in order before planting time arrives. Broken or wornout teeth in the springtooth harrow should be replaced and where frames or hinges need strengthening it is economy now to have them welded by acetylene or electrically.

For disc hnrrows it may he advisable to replace wooden bearings for these cost hut a few cents. Grain drills need to be in working order, with all hose and feed tubes cleaned and cleared, grease on the ootside of the steel tubes and the machine perhaps checked on the barn floor for rate of feeding.

The mower likely needs some new sections and guards. The cutter bar should be checked for nlignment, for this most be at right angles to the direction of travel, or parallel to the axle of the mower. And sunshine can go with all these jobs, says Musselman.

FUR TRAPS YIELD BIG CASH INCOME TO FARMER

Oakland County Ranks First With Fur Take Valued at $57,559.65

Believe it or not, trapping of fur benring animals is still primarily a farm industry yielding one and a third millions of dollars annunlly, most of which is garnered by trappers in the most populous portion of the state, the southern half of the lower peninsula.

Most recent figures on catch and value of pelts as scanned by R. G. Hill, farm game specialist of Michigan State college, shows largest incomes ranging from the top of $57,559.65 in Oakland county to next ranking counties of Kent, $48,805.95; Eaton $46.0?0.65, and Allegan, $43,424.05.

Hill reports that most of this income can be regarded as pure profit or return for labor. Any damage the fur bearing animals as a group might inflict he thinks, is likely offset by their consumption of insects and destruction of mice, rats, gophers and ground moles.

SALT USED ON ICE IS DAMAGING TO AUTOS

Thorough Cleaning in Spring Necessary to Remove Chemicals

Residents of localities where salt has been used to de-ice the streets during the winter will be wise to add another operation to those normally performed on their cars with spring's approach. The "tip" comes from Ed. Hedner, national service and mechanical manager of Chevrolet.

"Salt, calcium chloride, and other chemicals commonly used to hasten the melting of snow or ice are bad for automobiles," said Mr. Hedner. "For that reason, it is a wise thing to have the chassis thoroughly cleaned, preferably with steam, once the spring rains have washed the pavements clean of the winter's chemical deposits.

"The effect of the chemicals, especially on sheet metal, is to set up corrosion which eventually eats thro the metal unless checked.

AGREEMENT REACHED ON STATE ADVERTISING

Compromise Allows $125,000 for Resort Promotion Work

A compromise on $125,000 a year for advertising Michigan was reached Friday by a senate and house conference committee. The bill as originally introduced asked for $200,000.

The senate passed the bill after cutting the first figure to $150,000 a year. Sen. Otto W. Bishop, R., Alpena, the sponsor, argued that $200,000 would be a better investment because returns from tourists would be greater.

In an economy mood, however, the senate slashed off $50,000 and sent the bill to the house where it was reduced further to $100,000. The senate refused to concur and the controversy went to the conference committee.

Bishop sai the four tourist and resort associations will receive $25,000 a year each, with $5,000 being used by them also to advertise Michigan and the remaining $20,000 for promoting agriculture products.

Both houses are expected to accept the compromise. The measure then will go to the governor.

EAST JORDAN SMELT EVENT ON SATURDAY

RUN OF FISH NOW ACTUALLY UNDER WAY THERE

Wild Life Banquet Friday Night Precedes Jamboree Celebration Planned Following Day

East Jordan's national smelt jamboree, postponed from March 25th, is scheduled for Saturday, April 1st, with all the usual interesting features.

Coincident with this announcement is the fact that smelt have actually started "running." Harry Aldrich, district supervisor of the department of conservation, reported a fair run Sunday night at East Jordan and, with warmer weather predicted during the remainder of the week, an increase is expected nightly. Few females have been dipped as yet, indicating the run should increase for the next week or so before reaching the peak.

The East Jordan program opens Friday night with a banquet and wild life program at which outdoor writers, conservation officials and prominent sportsmen will be present. The jamboree program will continue all day Saturday with parades, street events, coronation of the King of Smeltium and other annual features.

With thousands of Michigan and out of state sportsmen awaiting the word "go," the East Jordan event lets the bars down in northern Michigan for the annual smelt celebrations.

KIWANIANS FETE FARMER GUESTS

FINE PROGRAM ENJOYED AT ANNUAL AFFAIR

Prof. Howard C. Rather, Head of MSC Farm Crops Dept., Spoke on European Farm Conditions

Rural friends of Charlevoix Kiwanians and the group of WLS radio stars appearing on the Pythian sponsored program at the high school gymnasium, were guests at the annual Kiwanis "Farmers Night" program at Hotel Charlevoix, Tuesday evening.

Prof. Howard C. Rather, head of the farm crops department of Michigan State college, was introduced by B. C. Mellencamp, county agricultural agent, as the guest speaker of the evening. His talk on the subject, "Agricultural Conditions in Northern Europe," related facts gathered from attendance at the International Gross Lands Conference at which 37 nations were represented.

From Prof. Rather's remarks it was gathered that 80% of England's agricultural area is grass land and that much emphasis is placed on stock raising; that the extremes of temperature in thut country are nearer each other than in the United States; that a rainfall is said to be a compromise between a London fog and a Scotch mist. Prof. Rather stated that many English farms are abont 60 acres in area, a few larger estates reach thousands of acres. Many are operated on a tenant basis, but much interest is displayed by both tenant and owner in maintaining productivity of the soil. Leases always include this point.

The speaker referred to Aberdeen as the source of many Scotch stories. On one occasion when he was lost, Prof. Rather explained his dilemma to an Aberdonian who asked if there was a reward offered for him.

Further information on Norway, Sweden and Germany was also given.

Among the rural guests present were Messrs. Korth, Mellencamp, Ecklund, Burns, Klooster, Straw, Price, Willis, Raymond, McGhan, Dhasleer, Hyek, Jackson, Williams, Bolhuis, Paddock, Block, Howe and Smith.

CHARLES HAMLIN WINS MENS PING PONG TITLE

Marjory Wood Women's Champ; Fred Arlen, Pat Hawley Doubles

Defeating "Pat" Hawley, Charles Hamlin won the men's singles title last Wednesday night in the finals of the ping pong tournament sponsored by the WPA recreational staff at the high school game room.

Marjory Wood defeated Doris Solomon to win the women's singles title and Capt. Fred Arlen and "Put" Hawley defeated Ed. Radle and Robert Pearl for the men's doubles crown.

In the consolation tournament, Ira Smith defeated Harold Hallett in men's singles, Billie Meyer was winner over Jeanne Zelley in women's singles, and the team of Bob Miles and Harold Hallett won the men's doubles event through default of the Ironton team of W. S. Mower and Ralph Price.

The finals matches brought to a conclusion one of the most popular winter entertainment features introduced here. A field of nearly fifty players competed and the game room was crowded nightly with spectators.

Plans are under way for a junior ping pong tournament and a Chinese checkers tournament for women.

ANGLERS ASKED REPORT MARKED TROUT

SEEK DATA IN RAINBOWS RELEASED 3 YEARS AGO

Thousand Fish With Dorsel and Adipose Fins Removed Were Released in Lake Charlevoix

With the trout fishing season but a few weeks away, Charlevoix county sportsmen are again requested to be on the look-out for marked rainbow trout.

A letter to the Charlevoix Sportsmans club from Albert S. Hazzurd, director of the division of fisheries, department of conservation, is quoted as follows:

"The trout season again approaches, and I would like to suggest to the Charlevoix Sportsman's club that the posters advertising the marked rainbow trout be distributed among the boat liveries and sporting goods stores around Lake Charlevoix. If any appreciable number of marked trout have survived, they should begin to appear in the catch this year.

"One marked fish has been reported to date, and was captured last June (1938) at a size of approximately 17 inches. No others have been reported."

Conforming with the above request, the Charlevoix Sportsmao's club asks all fishermen to watch for these marked trout and if one is caught to report it at once. The dorsel and adipose fins of about 1,000 rainbows were removed before the fish were released in Lake Charlevoix. The marking was made as a means of checking the growth and migratory habits of the fish and any reports will greatly assist in this endeavor.

CITY AND STATE ELECTION APRIL 3

ONE CONTEST ON REPUBLICAN CITY TICKET

State Election Is of Major Political Importance — Two Amendments on Ballot

Next Monday, April 3, brings the biennial state spring election and the annual general city election. Voters will be given three ballots—the state, city and an amendment ballot with two proposals.

The city ticket will present a slate of uncontested republican nominees for city and ward offices with but one exception. In the second ward, George W. Priest, nominee for supervisor at the primary, will be opposed by Darwin F. Meech, the incumbent defeated in March, who seeks election on slips.

In view of the lack of contests in the city election, the state election, from a political standpoint, emerges to the foreground. With eyes on the national election in 1940 state Republicans are urging selection of their ticket to complete the republican victory of last fall and put them in a position to present o united front two years hence in the battle for the presidency of the United States. A repetition of the republican victory of last fall would be taken as another "vote of confidence" in republican leadership.

Following are the city and state tickets:

City Ticket

Mayor—Robert Bridge.
Clerk—Ray S. Hamilton.
Treasurer—Fred V. Tyler.
Justice—H. R. Fowler.

First Ward

Supervisor—Edward E. Cross.
Alderman—Charles Bellinger.

Second Ward

Alderman—Charles Lamphear.

Third Ward

Supervisor—Clarence B. Meggison.
Alderman—Harry F. Hooker.

Justices of Supreme Court—Rep., Howard Wiest, Henry M. Butzel; Dem., Thomas J. Murphy, Clarence D. Dwyer; Socialist, Emanuel Seidler.

WARM SUNDAY BROUGHT OUT REGION'S AUTOISTS

Cars Filled Highways as Motorists Enjoyed the Sunshine

Although no arbutus was reported, Sunday has all the other attributes of a day in late April and the first great outpouring of automobiles took place on the rural roads of the region.

In a temperature which reached a maximum of 48 degrees the entire region went out to enjoy the sunshine. A cool north wind kept Sunday's temperature far below that of Saturday when a maximum of 60 degrees was registered. During Sunday night the mercury reached a low of 24 degrees.

Ice still clogs the bay between north and south points and commercial fishermen and boat operators are anxiously awaiting a heavy east blow to drive the ice fields out.

Dear Mrs. Housewife: What's in a name? Plenty! Particularly when that name is KELVINATOR. For Kelvinator, the oldest maker of electric refrigerators, is celebrating this year it's 25th Anniversary. What do you know about flowers? Well, neither do I right now, but next week I'm going to tell you all about it!

Noted where L. E. Forsytre, state director of athletics, commended the Boyne City basketball team members for their splendid conduct at the state basketball tournament at Flint. It reminded me that Ed. Scott, local school janitor, once remarked that of all the high school atbletes who came to the Charlevoix gymnasium, Boyne City's were the best behaved insofar as their conduct in the locker room, showers, etc., was concerned. That's a fine bit of praise for those Boyne City boys and reflects no little credit upon the kind of training they get from Coach Earl Brotherston.

Charlevoix voters will go to the polls next Monday to elect important state officers. Candidates of experience have been named republican standard bearers. The spring election is vital, in that victory for the republican party will strengthen Michigan's position as a leader in the fight for a return of the American form of government—a position reaffirmed last fall when the state repudiated the Murphy interpretation of New Dealism. The coming election will be, in reality, the opening skirmish of the 1940 campaign, which may materially affect the choice of a president. The Courier has consistently affirmed the chief principles of the republican party of Michigan and urges its readers to support republican candidates seeking election at the polls April 3.

Until Sunday I was strenuously opposed, as an individual, to any and all proposals to change the present deer hunting laws.

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Michigan's "man of the hour" is Luren D. Dickinson.

The new governor of the state took the oath of office at 8:20 a. m. Friday, March 17, under circumstances that were strangely similar to those under which Calvin Coolidge, tight-lipped economy-loving Vermonter, assumed officially the obligations as president of the United States sixteen years ago.

The scene of both ceremonies was a farmhouse. Simplicity prevailed to an old-fashioned spartan degree.

"I am humbled by this new responsibility," the new executive said. And being governor was not going to make any difference in his creed of living; he said he would continue to teach his Sunday school class, health permitting; he would continue to decline invitations to social affairs on Sunday, which he and his wife always observed as the Sabbath, not a holiday.

The remarks were typical of the man's personal wholesomeness which is supported by a life-time of clean living

CENTRAL LAKE

Spelling elimination contests in Friday, April 7, Traverse City, Fri-Friday, April 7th, Traverse City Friday, April 14.

Some side roads have been badly cut up during last week's fine weather. The Shearer hill north of Bay View, especially so, as snow banks were so near center of road.

Some of flu cases are improving, and some have had it the second time. William Farrel's people are having it, Mr. Farrel the second time since Christmas. Ye correspondent got in on it early, and is now about all over it, having had it since December 18th.

Harold Chamberlin, one of our pupils at Eastport school, is here visiting from California. He came last week to attend his mother's funeral. Mrs. Millie Chamberlin Wood's funeral was held at Central Lake last week. She was an old resident here, and was 77 years of age.

Lambert DeVries' people are getting settled at their farm at Bay View. The snow plow came through and made it possible to get into the side road to their home. As soon as Raymond Lamereaux, the electrician, gets over the flu, he will install their light fixtures on the new farmers' line. See they are setting poles to Kewadin, and also to Hemstreets on east side of lake.

The exodus of several farmers to new places of abode is expected to start this week. It is something like the "Old Woman and Pig." When Mr. Woodcock of Mapleville, the spring bird, moves from Carlisle farm there, John Shonk and mother will move from the Greenman farm, Bay View to the Carlisle farm. Then Jake Youngdike from Thomas farm will move to Greenman farm, and James Bedell will move onto the Thomas farm at Snowflake.

What a lot of good one can do in work on a hill with just a hoe. The streams of water from melting snow can be directed to the side of the road, and thousands of dollars saved by keeping the gravel from washing from the road. If one wants to follow out the former Governor's plan of saving, that is one of the ways it can be done. What a memorial this could be for Frank D. Fitzgerald, for every official in the state to determine that every move he makes will be to save something for the state. For you know that U. S. means "us."

James Dawson was business caller at Bellaire last week, accompanying ye correspondent that far, as we went to Green River. We had intended to call on Joseph Burkholder, but found roads too bad. Green River flu cases are getting better and Sunday school which had but two present a week ago Sunday, will improve. Mr. Batterbees have been entertaining both flu and measles. Mrs. Batterbee recalled the time 20 years ago when Rev. Batterbee was "chief cook and bottle washer" while they had the flu then, and tumbled over while stirring up some biscuits. Rev. and Mrs. W. P. Mosher made 400 visits at that time, as he was pastor at Mancelona. People were afraid that they would get sick and die, but the Moshera didn't even catch a glimpse of it. All of one family but husband and one little girl, the Elims, died with the flu, the husband shortly after was killed by a tree falling on him. All but one of a family at Finkton died, Mrs. Persons, the sole survivor. Ye correspondent was ill for six weeks with the flu then while teaching at Cedar River.

CHAPTER XII

Mary woke early the next morning, her mind filled with happy thoughts of the money she had won at the Club Torquay. She wondered just how soon she'd dare get up and speed to the nearest branch post-office. She wanted to get a money-order off to her father as quickly as possible. She wanted, too, to send a note by special delivery to Balianci She must tell him at once that her apparent acquiescence to his proposal of marriage, the night before, had been a mistake; that she did not love him; that she could not go through with the thing.

Suddenly, the door into the hall opened softly, and Addie's face appeared in the wedge. Mary raised her hand as a signal to be quiet, but Addie tiptoed in, holding up to view a Western Union envelope; quietly approached Mary's bed, and, without a word, dropped it on the coverlet. Then, just as soundlessly, she made her way to the door and closed it behind her.

Mary hoisted herself to a sitting position, and hastily removed the message from its envelope. It was signed, she noted at once, "Umberto Balianci," and it read:

. FORGIVE ME MY DEAR BUT I FEEL I SPOKE IN HASTE LAST NIGHT AND THAT OUR PLANS HAD BEST BE FORGOTTEN STOP AM SAILING FOR HAVANA TODAY ON THE IROQUOIS.

Mary slowly reread the message; then, forgetting that Lelia was asleep; forgetting everything except that this was quite the funniest thing that had ever happened to her, she burst into laughter.

"What's so funny?" Lelia inquired drowsily.

"Lel! Are you awake?"

"I couldn't very well be asleep after that wild peal of merriment you just let forth! What's it all about, anyhow?"

. Lelia took the yellow slip from Mary's hand, and read Balianci's farewell to arms. "It's just what I expected would happen," she commented, "after the little talk he and I had last night."

"Little talk? When? Where?"

Lelia told Mary of the previous night's conversation.

Mary was silent for a second; then in a low voice, "I was terribly depressed last night, Lelia. Jerome Taylor had just asked me to go to Florida with him, and I was so shocked, so stunned by it all, that when I came home and found Balianci here . . ."

"Oh, Mary! I tried to tell you about Taylor, too! He's been nothing but a roue all of his life!"

Mary leaned back against her pillow, her eyes closed. "I've been an awful fool, Lelia," she confessed.

"Yes, darling, you have," Lelia agreed unflatteringly. "I wouldn't mention any of this to Linnie. We're sailing day after tomorrow. There's no need for her to be told. And now you'll be able to settle down to writing."

"Oh, I wouldn't think of telling Aunt Linnie—ever! But, Lelia, I'm afraid my writing's gone on the rocks. I'm just no good at it, that's all."

"Don't say that, Mary. Nobody could write under the conditions that have been smothering you for the past two months. Wait till Linnie and I sail. You'll have the apartment to yourself then, darling; and you won't be seeing any more of Balianci and Jerome Taylor."

"Maybe you're right, Lelia. Maybe this is my chance to—to do my stuff! In fact, I was working up a plot while lying here waiting for you to wake up."

Within an hour after she and Lelia had finished breakfast, Mary had written her father a letter, secured a money-order, and posted them together to Hawkinsville.

Judge and Mrs. Byfield were giving a farewell lunch for Aunt Linnie at one, but there were several hours to spend between now and then, and Mary decided to walk to Central Park, sit on a bench, and make a mental outline of the plot which had conceived itself in her mind earlier that morning.

The air was brisk, and a mid-March sun shone valiantly through the clouds. Invigorated by her walk, happy beyond words to have sent her father a money-order of such substantial proportions, relieved though humiliated by the outcome of last night's happenings, she soon found a bench on a quiet path in the park, and sat down to think. "Imitation of an author creating a plot," she told herself sarcastically; but, nevertheless, found that a story was actually brewing in her mind. Finally, so enthralled by its intricacies, and wishing to set down its situations in black and white, she extracted a pencil from her purse, and began making notes on the covering of a package of face powder she had just bought.

When Mary hastily glanced at her watch it was a quarter past twelve! The morning had flown by as if on wings. She leapt from the bench, and started swiftly towards Aunt Linnie's apartment, eight blocks away. She must dress and be at the Colony by one.

The luncheon lasted, as might have been expected, until half past three. Mary sat grudgingly through it all. She was impatient to be off, to get to work; but she, Aunt Linnie's niece, of all people, could not be the first to make a move. Finally, by mutual consent, the party came to an end.

Mary, having made her proper adieux all around, started toward the apartment on foot. She felt dulled from having eaten so much food in the middle of the day, and she wanted exercise in the fresh air to put her mind back on a working basis.

Once home, she took a shower, and slipped into her woolly bathrobe. "I believe I'll call up Mr. Buchanan," she said to herself as the icy water from the shower poured over her body. "He's willing to see me again and talk over my so-called literary work, and now that a plot is actually percolating through my mind, it might be best to accept that luncheon invitation for Saturday."

Ten minutes later, she was on the telephone, Miss Hickenlooper at the other end. "Miss Hickenlooper," she began, that feeling of inferiority which the woman's voice always inspired in her now flooding through her mind, "this is Mary Loring. May I—would it be possible—for me to talk to Mr. Buchanan for a moment?"

It was, apparently, not so difficult, after all, for within a very brief moment, Phil Buchanan's voice said, "Hello, Mary Loring! How are you?"

"I'm all right," Mary replied, her self-possession having returned. "How's Oscar?"

"Oscar's swell now. All his heaves have left him. Did you get my note? Are you lunching with me Saturday?"

"Yes, I . . ."

"All right. That's fine. I'll be waiting for you at the Brevoort at one."

And without the formality of a good-by, he hung up.

Mary regarded, for an instant, the telephone instrument still clutched in her hand; then, with a smile, placed it slowly on its hook. "Well," she told herself, "he certainly doesn't waste words! Maybe that's because he has to pay five cents apiece for them when he buys them!"

Aunt Linnie and Lelia were being speeded on their way. A noisy crowd had come to the boat to see them off, and cocktails were being drunk; hasty kisses exchanged. Their stateroom, with the double beds, and yellow silk curtains bedecking the portholes, was filled to capacity with flowers and books, boxes of candy and baskets of fruit.

Lelia, looking smart in a jaunty hat of dark blue and suit of blue to match, pulled Mary to one side. Three incomparable orchids perched gaily on one lapel of her jacket. "Mary," she whispered, "I simply must tell someone! Jim sent these orchids to me!" She was dewy-eyed with excitement; lovelier than Mary had ever seen her.

Aunt Linnie caught Mary in her embrace. "Good-by, Mary, my dear little girl. Have a good time, darling, and write your silly little head completely off, if you like. But remember, my dear, Aunt Linnie still thinks you're far, far too pretty to get yourself in a dither about plots."

Phil Buchanan was sitting at a table near a glass door in the Brevoort cafe when Mary arrived.

He saw her, looking very spring-like and smart in her green wool suit, as she approached his table. "Hello there," he said, rising from his chair as if the action were something of an effort. "You're late. I thought you'd stood me up, or whatever the expression is. Sit down. And what'll you have to drink? I've just meandered through three highballs."

"Nothing, thank you," Mary returned, sitting down. "I had to gallop up an 'old fashioned' while bidding my aunt and Lelia bon voyage. They sailed for the West Indies at noon, and, naturally, quite a party was held in honor of their departure. Then, everybody seemed to think we ought to wave to them till they'd practically disappeared from view. That's why I'm late."

Phil grinned at her. "All right, Miss Mary Loring. All is forgiven. Now let's order some food. I haven't had nourishment for hours."

Their order given, Phil got out his usual crushed package of cigarettes, and offered Mary one.

"No," she replied. "I can't smoke and think right now; and I gathered from your letter that you wanted to give me a proper call-down today."

Buchanan regarded her with amused eyes. "Yes, I do."

"Well, go ahead! I'm prepared for the worst! The stuff I've been handing in is tripe. You're disappointed in me and . . ."

"Yes, I'm disappointed in you, but I still have enough faith in your ability to want you to keep on trying. Listen—those last two stories were—trash! You've fallen down terribly since you did 'At Sea.' In fact, it's hard to believe the same person wrote 'Their Son' and 'Concerning Anne.' What's the matter, Mary? Been too busy running around New York? You know, you can't be a socialite and an author at the same time."

Mary looked down at the table, the dark curtain of her eyelashes hiding the tears that were near the surface. "I hate him," she was thinking, stung by his words, 'yet maybe he's right. Maybe he's trying to help me!" Aloud, she said, "Perhaps I'll be able to do better work now. I'm to have Aunt Linnie's apartment while she and Lelia are on the cruise, and I shan't be going out at all."

"Well, that ought to help," Buchanan replied dryly. "Have you written anything since I last saw you?"

She raised her eyes to him. "I haven't exactly written anything," she finally said, "but I've formed an idea for a new story, and I've typed the outline."

"Got it with you? . . Here's Ben with our shrimps."

"Yes, I have it here in my purse. I thought perhaps you—that you might . . ."

Mary took the two typed pages from her purse, and silently handed them to him. He unfolded the sheets, and, with a shrimp poised in mid-air, hurriedly began to scan them.

Several minutes of silence followed; then Phil Buchanan looked across the table at her. "You have something there, Mary," he said quietly. "You've really found yourself. That's an excellent plot—human, realistic, different enough to be fairly new."

"You really think it'll make a good story?"

"Not a good short story. Not a story for The National Weekly. But material for a novel."

"Oh," Mary replied, crestfallen. "I supposed it was too involved for a short short, but I'd hoped it'd please you sufficiently to . . ."

"It pleases me enormously," Buchanan broke in. "It's great stuff, but we never publish serials—and that's what this should develop into. After that, book publication. After that, Hollywood production, perhaps. You know, Mary, there are far bigger opportunities for this tale than mere publication in The National Weekly. Now, if your style of writing just measures up to the grand plot you've conceived, you'll have a sure-fire hit on your hands."

"But won't it take me ages to write a full-length novel?" Mary asked, thinking of the all-important matter of working against time—of making money in a hurry.

"Not necessarily," Buchanan replied. "Your outline having been created will facilitate matters; and you say your aunt and Lelia Ormsby have flitted to the South, and you'll have the apartment to yourself for several weeks."

Mary nodded. "At least four. Maybe longer. They're thinking of leaving the ship at Jamaica, if they find they like it awfully well, and staying there a while."

"Well, even four weeks is a lot of time, if you'll only make the best of it," Paul said, looking ridiculously serious, businesslike and boyish all at once. "Make up your mind to cut out the frivolity. Go to bed early. Get up early. Stick to your typewriter at least six hours a day, and forget New York's a swell town in which to have a good time."

"Maybe I can do it!" Mary exclaimed, too excited to eat. "Maybe I really can do it!"

Looked Like a Fight

While Cloud—Lloyd Towne left home one evening with intentions of fighting. When he returned, it looked as if his objective had been accomplished, but there was another reason. Lloyd wanted to "clean up on the guy" responsible for publishing an item about himself and his girl-friend in the school news of a local paper. When he arrived in town to look for his "enemy," he slipped and fell on the ice, sprained his wrist and bruised his face. There was no fight that evening.

Extension Telephone saves Four Lives

BECAUSE Robert Wochholz had an extension telephone on the second floor of his home in Albion, his family is alive today! Here are excerpts from his tribute to the protection an extension telephone affords, published with his permission.

"In addition to the extension telephone having saved us many, many trips downstairs, it proved the best investment I ever made when, on the night of January 23, 1939, our house caught fire, trapping my wife, our two children, and a maid on the second floor.

"After calling the fire department over the extension telephone . . . they crawled onto the porch roof and were taken down by the firemen.

". . . If it had not been for our extension telephone upstairs, it would have been virtually impossible for my wife to summon the fire department."

The low cost of an extension telephone . . . 2 to 3 cents a day . . . places its protection and convenience within reach of every family. A small connection charge applies. For complete information, call the Telephone Business Office.

SOCIAL SECURITY TAX RATE IS SAME AS IN '38

In response to numerous questions received from employers recently, Clifton H. Little, manager of the social security board field office in Traverse City, today said that taxes under the social security act are the same as they were during the year 1938. This is true both in the case of old-age and unemployment compensation insurance taxes which are collected by the federal government, Mr. Little said.

GAME LAW VIOLATIONS VARIETY IN FEBRUARY

Possession of Black Squirrel and Bald Eagle Most Unusual

A total of 157 arrests were made by conservation officers during the month of February with only three cases later dismissed in court.

Fines imposed on law violators totaled $608.80, costs amounted to $941.15 and jail sentences were imposed for 320 days.

Among unusual arrests made during the month was that of two violators who had in possession black squirrels and a bald eagle taken without a permit. Three arrests were made for taking caddis fly larvae from trout streams and one for the possession of rainbow trout during closed season.

Leading the list of total arrests were 39 made for fishing without licenses.

TWELVE MILLION TREES READY FOR PLANTING

Hugh Spring Program Planned by Conservation Department

Planting of 11,800,000 trees is planned as a part of the spring program of the department of conservation which will start as soon as weather conditions permit.

Included are 10,000,000 white, jack and Norway pine from the Higgins nursery on the north shore of Higgins lake and 1,800,000 hardwood trees from the Hardwood nursery near Wolverine. All have been propagated under forestry division supervision by means of CCC labor.

The plantings, a step in the long range plan to bring back Michigan's once vast forests, will be carried on in state forests by ten CCC camps. A number of WPA plantings in the Fife Lake forest have also been approved and will include experimental plantings of game food species.

CALL STATE FERRY BOAT CREWS TO WORK MAR. 27TH

Two or three boat crews of the Michigan state ferry fleet will begin fitting out about March 27. It is believed that the Straits of Mackinac and one of the two small boats, the Mackinaw City or St. Ignace, will be used. The City of Munising is being worked on at present.

TRUCK LOAD RESTRICTIONS NOW IN FORCE

Spring Break-Up Brings Measures to Save State Trunk Lines

Special spring truck loading restrictions were ordered by the state highway department this week on all state trunkline highways.

State Highway Commissioner Murray D. VanWagoner's order for general application of the restrictions followed by several weeks the original order placing them in effect on all trunkline highways south of the Bay City-Muskegon line. The spring regulations call for load limit reductions of 25 per cent on all concrete roads and 35 per cent on gravel roads. They may be applied or lifted by the state highway commissioner as conditions warrant during March, April and May. The commissioner said that the restrictions would be lifted as rapidly as conditions on individual highways permitted.

These measures are designed to protect the highways during the period of "spring break-up" when the frost leaves the ground and subgrades are soft.

GOOD FRIDAY WILL BE OBSERVED HERE APR. 7

Union Service from 1 Until 3 at the Congregational Church

Charlevoix business places will be requested to close from 1 until 3 o'clock on Good Friday, April 7, in conformance with the usual custom.

Behind the closing request is the fact that local churches will have their usual Good Friday program in the Congregational church. Although complete plans have not yet been announced, the service will follow closely that of other years with continuous prayer, music and sermons from 1 o'clock until 3 in the afternoon. This permits worshippers to attend at any time during these hours.

"The Secret of the Strong"

We pause in our series of sermons on "The Teachings of Jesus" for Palm Sunday and Easter. When Jesus rode into Jerusalem amid the shouts of the people about Him, He was presenting Himself in a final effort to be accepted as Israel's spiritual king. Since that time Jesus the Christ has continuously urged man to accept Him.

If one is interested in a successful and effective Christian life he should attend our services next Sunday evening and hear presented the secret of such a life.

Thursday, April 6 we will hold our annual pre-Easter communion service. At that time names of prospective members will be presented.

Union Good Friday services will be held in our church from 1 p. m. to 3 p. m.

Office supplies of any description may be obtained quickly through this office Charlevoix Courier.—Adv.3tf.

4-H Club Council Met Last Week in East Jordao

The recently appointed Charlevoix county 4-H club council, consisting of seven representative club leaders, met in the new Jordan Inn, East Jordan, last Tuesday evening, March 21. After a most delightful and enjoyable banquet, the council discussed 4-H club projects and the spring achievement day in particular. Committees were selected to make the final plans. A tentative program was set up in preparation for the biggest achievement day yet to be held in the county.

Over 600 projects are now in the process of completion. This is well over one hundred more than the previous year. Every school in the county, with the exception of Beaver Island, is carrying on a 4-H club project.

The club council consists of W. Garnet Rickard, superintendent at Boyne Falls; Mrs. Addie March, Walloon Lake; Elvin Leckrone, Boyne City; Miss Muriel Tobin, Charlevoix; Mrs. Anna Warner, Charlevoix; Lester Walrutt, East Jordan; and Mrs. Leatha Larson, East Jordan. Also O. F. Walker, district club agent, was present and acted as chairman of the session.

The achievement day will be held on Tuesday, April 18, in the East Jordan high school auditorium. Watch the papers for future announcements, but don't forget to reserve the date of April 18 for you will want to see the wonderful work accomplished by these many young boys and girls.

O. I. Gregg, Landscaping Specialist, to Speak in Boyne City Mar. 31

The second and last meeting on landscaping will be held in the Boyne City library on Friday afternoon, March 31, starting promptly at 2:30. O. I. Gregg will show a good many slides to illustrate his lecture and these slides will be actual photographs of shrubbery and ornamentals used in Michigan in carrying out landscaping plans.

Any person interested in beautifying his home surroundings will certainly want to attend this lecture. Not alone this, but March 31 in all probability, there will be spring in the air and all of us will have the urge to get out and spade up the good old earth. You doubtless will be thinking about putting in some ornamentals and some new shrubbery this spring.

Come to this lecture and you will get some ideas and suggestions that will be of great assistance to you in carrying out any beautification projects. The public is invited. Hope to see you.

True Stories of Human Interest

Valuable Oysters

Lincoln Park—When G. M. Geoffroy bit down on one of the morsels in an oyster stew he was eating in a local restaurant, he hit something hard. While he reprimanded the proprietor for almost causing him to break a tooth, his wife discovered that the hard morsel was a pearl. There were two of them in the oyster. The proprietor offered $50 each for the jewels, but Geoffroy refused, preferring to have their value checked.

Storm Nullifies Hard Work

St. Louis — Hours and hours of tedious labor were cancelled in a brief and freakish prank of a snowstorm. A mailpouch, bound for Greenville and containing 2,000 Montcalm county tax sale descriptions, was thrown from a moving train, slid down a snow bank onto the tracks, and the 2,000 descriptions were pulverized under the train wheels. Now the job has to be done all over again.

Clean Sweeping Thief

Plymouth—A recent robbery here, which caused a $300 headache to a local salesman, seems to have been done by a man with a desire for cleanliness. Five used vacuum cleaners were stolen from salesman Henry Hanchett's parked car. The thief overlooked a set of valuable tools, and other valuable instruments, worth just as much as the sweepers.

River in Reverse

Trenton — James Holden was watching the ice, snow, and water in the Detroit river, driven by a northeast gale, racing down the river. Suddenly, the ice seemed to stop. Then the river actually went into reverse, picking up speed against the northeast blow. Engineers explained that such a thing happens once in 30 or 40 years, when the water in Lake Erie becomes higher than the water in Lake St. Clair.

As the facts come out, it becomes apparent that politics has been made the biggest racket of them all.—Thomas E. Dewey.

Jane Withers Brings Fun and Thrills in "Arizona Wildcat"

Jane Withers brings her own brand of law and disorder to the west in "The Arizona Wildcat," 20th Century-Fox production which opens Wednesday, April 5, at the Palace Theatre, and it's Jane's brand of fun and excitement at its best. This is just about the best Jane Withers picture the popular young star has ever made.

Here is the type of picture Jane does best and the kind of role her faas are eager to see her in. What with gold missing from the mine, the stagecoach stuck up, a whole town shot up und the sheriff in eahoots with the crooks, there is enough action for a dozen pictures—and Jane's right in the middle of it. There's so much going on in "The Arizona Wildcat" that you'll miss something if you even blink your eyes.

In addition to brilliant performances by Jane Withers and Leo Carrillo, aa excellent supporting cast, featuring Pauline Moore, William Henry, Henry Wilcoxon, Douglas Fowley and Etienne Girardot contributes splendid performances. The film was directed by Herbert I. Leeds with John Stone associate producer. The screen play by Barry Trivers and Jerry Cady was written from an original idea by Frances Hyland and Albert Ray.

Sternness in Morality

In matters of public morality, Governor Dicklnson will he stern and unyielding.

As vice-president of the National Anti-Saloon league and a prominent layman of the Methodist Episcopal church, he will countenance no compromise with gambling. In his inaugural address before the state senate, Dickinson warned that America may invite the fate that befell ancient Greece and Rome if it tolerates corruption and immorality.

"The vehement outcry from every loculity of our own state," he said "are uttering vociferous demands that we purge our state of these gambling leeches, habitues of our fairs, races, resorts and roadsides."

Much us he favors home-rule responsibility, the governor will not tolerate gambling. In fact, it is almost inconceivable that the question would ever have arisen in 1939 if he had possessed supreme executive powers.

Economy to he Emphasized

A man who has alwaya lived simply, Governor Dickinson exemplifies the watchword of economy which Fitzgerald carried to the capital city.

It was noticeable that in the first legislative session, after the tragic loss of the party's leader, the House of Representatives voted almost unanimously to curtail the spending of the four tourist associations, reducing their appropriations from $25,000 to $20,000 a year. At the same hour the senate sliced more than a million dollara from appropriations there, essily outdoing their colleagues in a staunch stand for economy.

Again Michigan's "Coolidge" may he well expected to hew closely to the economy line.

Home pressure groups, no matter what their iaterests may be, will be treated alike by the governor. His whole lifo has been predicated on economy whieh will hold in all his offieial aetion.

Liquor Control

Although the new governor hates the liquor business, legalized as it is, yet he will probably take a realistic viewpoint on the course of wisdom for 1939.

The state treasury now receives on an average of eight million dollars revenue for the state's part in controlling the sale of liquor. In a year when an administration is struggling to overcome a big deficit and to balance the budget, thus putting its finaacial house in order, the loss of eight millions would be a major blow.

The new governor is known to look with disfavor on the state's participation in the liquor business, even if nominally for the phrpose of control. While he would not trade morality for money, it is believed that the pressing demand for economy will be given temporary preference at this time.

The governor took delight, as one of his first acts, ia signing a bill requiring temperaace education in the public schools. Education of the evils of alcohol, toge'her with strict enforcement of the present law, will likely form his 1939 policy on this question.

No Political Debts

In the field of political action, the new governor is singularly free of political debts.

It is being said freely at Lansing that he owes no obligations to vote manipulators such as Edward Barnard, wealthy attorney in Wayne county, and Frank McKay, influential industrialist in Kent county, who pooled their delegate strength at the Grand Rapids and Flint conventions.

To that extent, it now appears that these gentlemen are out at the end of the proverbial limb.

The legal possibility that a succession of responsibility might impose the mantle of official duties on Harry Kelly, secretary of state, has not been received joyously by the Wayne county Republican boss. Kelly owes his job solely to the insisteace of Fitzgerald that he (Kelly) be given a place somewhere in the slate-making. Reliable information is that Kelly is iadependent. A front-line fighter in France during the World War, the Detroit secretary of state likes to scrap. It all fits nicely ioto the rapidly changed picture at Lansing.

Canny Observer

Legislative leaders who know the new governor intimately agree that he possesses remarkable mental prowess for a man of nearly four score years.

His ability to haadle detail work has always been apparent. He has a memory for names and faces that is distinctly above the ordinary. More than one veteran legislator 20 to 25 years his junior has declared: "Dickinson's mind is a lot keener than mine."

From his long experience in public affairs, having been lieutenant governor so many years that he has become an "institution" to the people in amall towns and rural areas—in general, Michigan's middle class, Dickinson has acquired a canny sense of reacting to public opinion.

He may be expected to proceed cautiously. He has already indicated that it might be wise to concentrate legislative attention to four major problems: Civil service, labor relations, welfare and budget-bnlancing.

Just as the legislative trend two years ago was sharply to the left, leaving an $18,000,000 red-ink mark for Frank Murphy to worry about, so the 1939 legislature appears to have swung the other way. The net result, umong the four issues, may well be a conservative lahor law (taking udvantage of the Lewis-Nartin CIO feud) and a sharp alash in state spending. The economy trend, if continued, would justify in the eyes of administration leaders u lessening of civil service control, putting fewer state employees under its rules, and a tightening up of the purse strings for welfare expenditures.

Dependence an Advisors

Because of the physical limitations imposed by his age, together with the general desire of party leaders to protect him against strains of the offiee, Governor Dickinson will depend to a greater extent than recent executives on administrative assistants and advisors.

The brunt of work is being divided among such men as Emerson R. Boyles, legal advisor; Leslie B. Butler, secretary to the governor; Gilbert Shilson, "secretary without pay" pending outcome of the utility commission case in court; and the ranking chairmen of important eommittees in both the senate and house.

Senator Felix H. H. Flynn, president pro tem of the senate, is one of the governor's intimate friends.

The moving finger writes, and Michigan's octogenarian governor, Coolidge-like in his credo of life, is the new man of the hour. Interesting history is still in the making.

Yesterday a Baby Was Born

On your block, or a short way down the street, is a new baby to help make Charlevoix a better place in which to live.

The proud parents months ago began planning for the extra clothing and furniture needed for this new citizen. You can be sure advertisements helped! Now they are reading the advertisements carefully for the baby food the youngster will need—for his crib and blankets.

All mothers can rely on what the local merchants say because these business men are not afraid to put their names to announcements of their goods! They can be trusted to do the honorable thing in every transaction. It's a good idea to deal with folks who keep their word—as successful advertisers must.

us both that it is very necessary the conservation department be given discretionary powers to cope with overpopulation and food shortage situations if the deer of that district are to be saved from total extinction.

Leaving Charlevoix, we drove to Atlanta and were joined by Charles A. Eagle, district conservation supervisor, who was our most courteous guide and companion for the remainder of the day. We were directed to the Beaver Creek swamp district, driving off M-65 through a farmer's field to the edge of the swamp where a portable sawmill was located. We observed numerous deer before leaving the car. As we entered the swamp on an old logging road, deer began to scatter like rabbits, running off a few rods and stopping to look at us. Nick and I went to the swamp's edge and Mr. Eagle followed down a swamp road, whistling to frighten the deer out of the heavy cover. They passed us in droves of 6 to 12 as we advanced. Within 20 minutes time we had seen an estimated 200 or more deer and could look in any direction and see them either moving slowly or standing still watching us.

We returned to the swamp and there witnessed conditions unimaginable. Lumbering had been carried on in this 40-acre tract during the winter. The ground was covered with tree tops from which every twig had been eaten. Cedar trees fallen a few days before were completely stripped of foliage as if burned by fire. Hundreds of cedar trees cut by 4-H Club boys and trucked into the swamp were stripped. Nine tons of hay hauled in to the deer was gone. All standing trees, cedar in particular, were browsed off up as far as the larger deer could reach standing on their hind legs. This bough-line looked like someone had used a straight-edge to cut off the branches at a certain height. The condition was apparent throughout the area.

Despite the fact the deer did not yard until February 9, were fed cedar boughs and tons of hay, we could count the ribs on many of them standing several rods away. Many seemed weak and in poor condition. Others looked good. The swamp appeared like a sheep yard. It was estimated a week previous, before the spring break-up started, there were a thousand deer in this 40-acre tract. One party from Cheboygan actually counted 750. That's a lot of deer.

We next visited a deer yard located in a jack pine thicket several miles from the Beaver Lake swamp. Jack pine is not considered good deer food but the animals had browsed off the limbs as high as they could reach. Two mammoth hay racks, provided by members of the Robin Hood club, on whose property the thicket was located, were observed. They had been kept full of hay during the winter and conditions indicated plenty of deer had taken advantage of the free meals afforded.

Our next stop was in the Flynn creek district where we observed appalling conditions. The area in which the deer had yarded was completely devoid of cedar or any other type of suitable feed. About the only food available was white pine tops left from lumbering operations and in almost every one of these tops we found a dead fawn. Upon casual observation the dead animals appeared in fair condition. Closer examination, however, revealed merely a skeleton of bones covered by thick hair. Their back bones were as sharp as a razor blade. One dead fawn was lying upon the skeletons of two deer that had died the previous winter. We found in the neighborhood of 20 dead fawns in a very small area.

At this point we were joined by other sight-seers, several conservation officers and department officials. Some photographed and dissected the dead deer to determine the cause of death. It all proved interesting to obtain such information first-hand from experts.

An interesting side trip was provided by a visit to the Robin Hood Club, where we met Carl Allen and George Hunt, who together with Stanley Petinger, have been carrying on live trapping operations for the conservation department. Carl and George showed us true camp hospitality by cooking our dinner and then took us over into a jack pine area a couple miles away to see the traps. They were box-like affairs into which the deer were enticed with alfalfa hay. When the deer touched a wire trigger concealed under the hay on the inside, the slide doors at each end dropped, trapping them inside. They had a small buck, caught for the third time in a short period, in one of the traps. He high-tailed for the woods when released.

These fellows have trapped 158 deer during the winter. They took 101 from Fletcher swamp, 50 near the Robin Hood Club and 27 near Atlanta. These deer were taken to areas near Rogers City and Alpena for release in swamp district where feed is plentiful. The boys said it cost $10 apiece to trap the deer, that the plan was a feasible one with exception of the fact that private land owners where most of the heavy concentrations existed, would not allow trapping on their property. (We were trying to make a deal to have some caught for removal to Charlevoix county and met that argument.)

Most sportsmen have probably read about the Geyer farm where so many deer were shot by the owner because they ate up his crops. We saw the Geyer farm. It is comprised of over 100 acres of completely cleared land, located right in the center of miles of deer cover. There is little wonder the deer, in view of the food shortage there, were picking on Geyer's crops. The sad part of the situation, however, was the fact that the Robin Hood Club, located directly across the road from the Geyer place, was spending thousands of dollars to feed the deer Geyer was killing. We were told Geyer wants $4,000 for his property which is worth only a few hundred. Looks like a racket to this writer. The conservation department issued Geyer a permit to kill the deer in order to gain possession of the carcasses which they distributed among charitable institutions. Geyer had a right to kill the deer eating his crops without a permit, but issuance of a permit was necessary to obtain the deer after being shot.

All in all, the trip was one of the most interesting and educational I have ever experienced. It is my hope that the information passed on in this article will give some other fellows an insight into the deer problems confronted by the conservation department. My reaction is to recommend to our representative and senator that they vote in favor of giving the conservation department discretionary powers to handle such situations. The department proposes a 13-day buck season, followed by a 3-day doe season in areas where over population and starvation is apparent. Any hunter who had not killed a buck during the 13-day buck season would be privileged to hunt doe in these designated districts. It appears to be the only solution to a problem which threatens total extinction of the deer herds in certain areas.

See where the E. J. & S. railroad is acting in conjunction with other railroads in providing school children the novelty of a train ride. A trip to Bellaire and return between March 28 and June 9th is offered. It is quite true that a train ride would be a novelty to many children in this day of automobiles. Have some kiddies of my own who have never been on a train.

Sure did stick my neck out last week by remarking about "first robin" stories from Grand Rapids and Traverse City, but none from Charlevoix. The telephone started jingling Thursday morning with first reports. Mrs. Jay Adams, out Marion Center way, was the first, telling about robins and killdeer. Mrs. Geo. Brown was next, reporting two robins seen under her window that morning. Friday I saw meadow larks, robins, crows and black birds, so guess our feathered friends are really back with us and the long anticipated spring has arrived.

When Republicans of long standing recommend splitting one's ticket to vote for one Republican and one Democrat candidate seeking office at the April 3 election, there must be some good reason for it. We refer to the action of a state-wide group of University of Michigan alumni who have aligned themselves against the election of Harry G. Kipke as Regent for the University. It is their claim Kipke had the backing of the Barnard-McKay-Bennett group in his nomination and under such circumstances a partisan political influence which they fear and abhor was created. They want the office kept free from partisan politics and thus recommend the election of Kipke's Democratic opponent. There apparently is a fear that Kipke, recently removed as head football coach at the University, is seeking the office from a spirit of revenge, which is not entirely impossible, and they don't want any of that kind of business.

G. O. P. VICTORIOUS THROUGHOUT STATE

EXCEED NOVEMBER LANDSLIDE TO WIN EVERY CONTEST AT MONDAY'S ELECTION

Control of All But One Elective Office is Returned to Republicans

Continuing the trend of last November, all republican candidates for state office were elected at Monday's biennial spring election.

Showing unexpected strength in Wayne county and the upper peninsula, traditinnal democratic strongholds, Republicans swept the entire ticket to gain control of all elective offices except that of State Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagoner, whose post was not up for election. Republican majorities exceeded those of the G.O.P. landslide last fall.

Leading the republican ticket was State Superintendent of Public Instruction Eugene B. Elliott with approximately a 100,000 majority over his opponent, Thomas Thatcher. Despite a concerted opposition to his candidacy, Harry Kipke, former University of Michigan grid coach, outdistanced his running mate, J. Joseph Herbert of Manistique, as both carried the state by heavy majorities.

The two republican incumbents, Henry M. Butzel of Detroit, and Howard Weist of Lansing, were elected to the supreme court; Melville B. McPherson, Lowell, and Forest M. Akers, Detroit, took the two positions on the state board of agriculture over B. H. Halstead, Petoskey, and Albert LaLonde, Genessee county; Mary Farnsworth, Detroit, defeated the incumbent, Edna Cornell Wilson of Saginaw, for a post on the state board of education.

The proposed amendment for nonpartisan election of judges won by a decisive majority, while the second proposal to give increased power to circuit court commissioners was defeated.

William C. Palmer was re-elected county school commissioner without opposition.

Darwin F. Meech Chosen Second Ward Supervisor Over Nominee George Priest

All present office-holders were re-elected at Monday's annual spring election, continuing an unbroken precedent of placing republican nominees in city and ward offices.

With but one contest to arouse voter interest, about half a normal vote was cast in contrast to a near record vote at the March primary. The five hundred and some odd votes was less than half of the March vote and was considerably under a year ago.

In the only contest on the ticket, Darwin F. Meech, the incumbent, defeated George W. Priest, primary nominee for the office of second ward supervisor, by a margin of 201 to 123. Meech was a slip candidate.

As the result of Monday's vote, Robert Bridge was elected to the mayorship for the second year. Other city officers re-elected were Ray S. Hamilton as clerk, Fred V. Tyler as treasurer and Horace R. Fowler as justice of the peace.

Edward E. Cross returns as first ward supervisor and Charles Bellinger succeeds Karl Erher as first ward alderman. Through Monday's victory Meech remains as second ward supervisor and Charles Lamphear was elected to succeed Fred E. Cartier as alderman. There was no change in third ward officers. Clarence B. Meggison was re-elected supervisor and Harry F. Hooker returns as alderman.

MRS. GEORGE SWAIN IS TAKEN BY DEATH

Was Director of Kamp Kairphree, Girl's Camp on Lake Charlevoix

Charlevoixans will greatly regret henring of the death Friday at Ann Arbor of Mrs. Louise Rice Swain, 65, wife of George R. Swain, photographer to the University of Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. Swain were co-directors of Kamp Kairphree, a summer camp for girls which they had operated on the north shore of Lake Charlevoix the last 18 years. The camp was attended by girls from many midwestern states. The outdoor activities Mr. and Mrs. Swain arranged for their own children led to the establishment of the camp. Mrs. Swain's great interest in a program for girls resulted in the camp being opened for girls.

Mrs. Swain was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1898 and was a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority. She was a member and active in the Congregational church at Ann Arbor.

Besides her husband, she is survived by a daughter, two sons, four grandchildren and two sisters.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at Ann Arbor.

SOIL COMMITTEES BANQUET APRIL 12

POSTPONED EVENT TO BE HELD PENINSULA GRANGE

(By B. C. Mellencamp)

Arrangements have been completed for holding the county wide soil conservation banquet and program for Wednesday night, April 12th, at the Peninsula Grange hall starting promptly at 7:00. It will be recalled that, originally, March 15 was the date set for this meeting but, due to a most severe snow storm, it had to be postponed.

It is expected that each township and county committeeman will invite in a guest for this most enjoyable occasion. The ladies from the Peninsula Grange hall have promised one of those old time farm banquets and anticipate serving at least eighty plates. Following the banquet movies pertaining to the soil conservation program will be shown by James A. Porter, member of the state committee. Also, a discussion, pertaining to the operation of the program, will be guided and supervised by Mr. Porter and others who administer the program within the county.

This is the first time that such a get-together has been arranged and it is hoped that each committeeman will be present with his selected guest and have a wonderful time. Please keep in mind that the tickets already purchased by committeemen will still be good for April 12. In case they have been destroyed, new tickets will be issued.

MAIL PLANE BREAKS THROUGH ICE ON LAKE

Pekrul Plane Escaped Damage in Mishap Monday Morning

A final landing on Lake Charlevoix ice before moving operations to the airport field nearly proved disastrous Monday morning for Rudy Pekrul's Charlevoix-Beaver Island mail plane.

The under carriage broke through the ice off the Ferry avenue bathing beach where ice harvesting had left thin ice. Coast guardsmen under Capt. Oscar Smith assisted in raising the ship with block and tackle outfit. Only slight damage resulted and Monday's scheduled trip to the island with mail and passengers was cancelled.

The County State Bank is getting all dressed up. Walls have been repaired and the entire interior redecorated. It presents a fine appearance

Have you noticed Bill Wallace's new oil tank truck? It's a new Dodge chassis with enlarged tank and storage space. Carl Kohler engineered the iron work, stream-lining, etc., and did a job of master workmanship.

There was an interesting item recently in the Detroit Free Press column "Turning Back the Pages." Referring to 25 years ago March 24, 1914, it read Roland Cioni, Rodney Peters and Rollie Birkemier have won their way into the grand final in the world's championship roller skating meet at Palace Rink. Albe Moore and Fred Martin also are expected to qualify. Which all reminds me of when Moore was training for his last championship race here. He used the second floor in the south end of the old beet sugar factory for practice. It had a good hardwood floor and Allie skated there by the hour and myself and the other kids used to watch him. Allie also trotted cross country to big Rock Point and back each day to work up an appetite for dinner, I guess. Used to wonder how any man could have his endurance and, if you ask me, he's no slouch even at his present age. Allie is a one-time world's champion skater and his experiences in many parts of the world would fill a mighty big book.

I haven't been in this old world as long as Editor Al Weber of the Cheboygan Observer and therefore have not had time to accumulate as much wisdom as he, but even despite this handicap, I cannot agree with him on certain aspects of this controversial deer control situation. LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

To tax or not to tax, that is the question.

Once again an administration at Lansing is confronted with the very distasteful prospect of imposing additional taxes. If the estimated $25,000,000 deficit for the current fiscal year is to be reduced and if expenses and receipts of the forthcoming fiscal year are to be balanced, the state administration must obtain more money from one source or another.

And there's the rub—who is going to pay the Piper?

State Treasurer Miller Dunckel believes that the sales tax should be increased from 3 to 4 cents. The revenue from the additional cent would be segregated for the sole purpose of paying off the $25,000,000 deficit. Treasurer Dunckel would have it tagged the "Murphy tax."

"And maybe Aunt Linnie'll decide to lengthen her stay in the West Indies!" Buchanan offered lazily "If she does, well—so much the better! You haven't touched your food, Mary. Go on and eat! Don't ever, no matter what happens, let genius spoil your appetite!"

"I am rather excited," Mary confessed, and cut into her steak

"So am I."

"Yuu?"

Phil grinned at her. "Because my first glowing opinion of your ability hasn't had to be thrown into the heap of lost hopes. When yuur first story came in, I went about telling everybody in the office I'd made a find; but, later, when I read 'Their Son' and 'Concerning Anne,' I was a little stymied, as you would say. I thought I'd fallen down as a hunting dog in search of rare game. Now, I believe I'm about to be vindicated."

Mary smiled at him. "Yuur liking my outline'a made me forget everything else in the world! I'm going to get busy on it the minute I reach home."

CHAPTER XIII

Mary wrote all that evening, and far into the morning. Now freed of the loathsome complex that she must marry somebody, now spurred on to new literary ambitions by Phillip Buchanan's approval of her outline, and temporarily relieved of financial worries, she had started her novel with a light heart and a clear head. Phil Buchanan had given her any number of valuable suggestions; she remembered them all, and put them into execution

Situation after situation presented itself, and satisfactorily worked out. Word after word. Page after page. "Storm on the Mountain" was coming to life!

Physically exhausted, yet mentally elated to an almost abnormal degree, Mary glanced at the chromium and blue timepiece on the mantel. It was three o'clock in the morning. "Perhaps I'd better stop," she told herself "Mr. Buchanan said not to write too long at a stretch in the beginning, or my thoughts would go sluggish on me. And I've been at it since eight o'clock last night!"

She piled her typed sheets together in numerical succession, covered her typewriter, and turned out the lights. Everything could be left just as it was, ready for work on the coming day.

The next few days flew swiftly by, undisturbed by outside interests, the apartment devoid, hour after hour, of all sound except for the tap-tap of Mary's typewriter. Then, on Wednesday morning, came a telephone call from Phillip Buchanan. "Thought I'd call up and see how you're getting on with 'Sturm on the Mountain,'" he said without preamble.

"Oh, hello, Mr Buchanan," Mary returned "Why, I believe it's going along fairly well. I've finished four chapters."

"What? Really? Well, I'd call that swell! I'd like to read them."

"Would you—honestly?"

"Yes, I want to see if you've introduced your characters properly, and if you're bringing out the high spots of those opening chapters with the force that you should. Are you doing anything tonight? Will you have dinner with me, and go over the chapters afterwards?"

Mary hesitated. "Go over the chapters?" But where? She couldn't read them to him in a restaurant! Did he mean Aunt Linnie's apartment or his own? And would her mother approve? Yet, this was New York, not Hawkinsville, and it would be silly and provincial to go "prissy" on this man who usually acted as if he positively disliked her. "Yes," she finally replied, "I'd like to have dinner with you tonight, and it's generous of you to want to help me with the novel."

"All right," Buchanan replied "I'll tell Spike to scare up something for us to eat, and I'll drop around for you at seven."

And as usual, he hung up without the formality of a good-by.

The dinner Spike served was delicious, and it was fun to be at Phillip Buchanan's apartment after four solid days of no companionship other than Addie's. Both Spike and Oscar greeted her like a long-lost friend, Spike smilingly taking her hat and jacket, Oscar offering his great paw in a handshake of welcome

The evening had turned cool, and a bright fire of channel coal crackled on the hearth. A table was already set before it when she and Phil arrived, and, shortly after, they were sitting down to English lamb chops creamed new potatoes and buttered peas. Phil, himself, mixed a spring salad in a wooden bowl, while black coffee percolated in an electric pot on a side table.

"I've already spoken to Anthony Porter about your novel," he said, adding a dash of olive oil to the dressing he was making.

"Is he—an agent?" Mary asked, biting into a piece of spongy French bread.

"Best in New York," Phil replied. "If your work's good enough for Porter to handle, you'll go to town."

Eventually, dinner was a thing of the past, and a well-fed Oscar lay asleep on the rug before the fire. Mary settled herself in one corner of the couch, and began "Storm on the Mountain" in a voice which she knew was a bit shrill with excitement.

Phil Buchanan, slumped into a deep chair nearby, filled his pipe from an oilskin pouch, and listened with half-closed eyes On and on she read, able at last to overcome her nervousness; calmed yet puzzled by Phil's failure to make any comment whatsoever. She hadn't the vaguest idea what he was thinking, and, finally, at the completion of the third chapter, unable to stand his silence any longer, she put down the script.

"Are you thirsty?" Phil asked immediately. "How about a liqueur?"

"Well, yes, I am thirsty—for some water, but that's not why I stopped. I think I'll scream in a moment if you don't say something—anything! Tear the story to pieces, if you like—only don't keep me in such suspense!"

Phil puffed slowly, maddeningly, at his pipe; then removing it from his mouth, smiled lazily at her "Do you really want to know what I think of 'Storm on the Mountain'?"

"Yes! For heaven's sake, say something!"

"Well," he returned slowly, "it's great! I'm crazy about it. The only thing that worries me is—can you carry on with the same style throughout the story? There's something almost breath-taking about your way of telling this tale. Frankly, I'm—fascinated with it; it's held my interest from the very first page."

Mary looked at him incredulously. "Do you really mean that?" she asked.

"My dear child, haven't I told you the truth about everything else you've written? Why on earth should I suddenly go soft? Naturally, there are a few rough spots that need polishing up; occasional sentences to be interchanged; here and there a word to be substituted; but fundamentally, it's darned good. Wait a second before you go on with that next chapter; I'll get you some ice water."

Phil returned shortly, a tall silver pitcher in one hand, and a tray, holding two tumblers, in the other.

"My dear child, haven't I told you the truth about everything else you've written?"

He poured some of the cold water into one of the glasses and handed it to her, and she drank from it swiftly, greedily.

"You were thirsty!" Phil said, smiling at her. "More?"

"Yes, please. And then I want to go on with the next chapter."

"All right. And when that's finished if you still crave a few comments, I'll make 'em."

Mary picked up her script, and began to read. At last, the fourth chapter completed, Phil left his chair and came over to sit on the couch beside her "Now, let me look at that," he said, and Mary obediently placed the script on a table he had drawn up before the couch. "There's a paragraph in the first chapter—about page four . . ."

And pening over the script, their heads almost touching, they worked over the typed pages for the next two hours. Notes on the margin, notes on the back of each page; whole lines crossed out, and, the thoughts of the man and girl working in unison, new lines substituted.

"You don't mind my tearing this to pieces in pieces, do you?" Phil asked, looking askance at the pencil marks that defiled one of the sheets.

"Mind?" Mary returned, her eyes filled with gratitude for Phillip Buchanan who bothered to rewrite the sentences she had composed. "Mind! Why, Mr. Buchanan, I can't tell you how grateful I am! You're terribly nice to help me . . ."

Phil picked up his highball and, with head thrown back, drained its contents. "Don't be silly! I'm not 'terribly nice' at all. I'm a mean, grasping old man, taking great pleasure in indulging in my favorite sport—the business of discovering new talent! And, Mary, I believe you've got the goods!"

"Well, you've done enough 'discovering' for one night," Mary replied, a smile curving the corners of her mouth. "Look at that clock over there! It's twelve o'clock, and I must go home!"

CHAPTER XIV

The weeks slipped by—weeks that were almost identical in their pattern, yet strangely thrilling for Mary Loring. She was making excellent progress on her novel; the letters from home were fairly cheerful although her father had not yet found a position; she was seeing Phillip Buchanan two or three times a week, and he was, invariably, enthusiastic over each group of the newly-finished chapters which she read to him. This spurred her on to even greater efforts

They usually dined at his apartment, the nights on which these readings and the criticism to follow took place, but he had, on several occasions, come to Aunt Linnie's for what he termed "one of the incomparable Addie's swell dinners."

March had slid into April, and April had brought the publication of "At Sea" in The National Weekly. With it had come a number of fan letters, a glowing article about her in the Hawkinsville evening paper; and a small but significant spot in Phillip's circle of friends.

Anthony Porter had now read the first fifteen chapters of "Storm on the Mountain," and agreed with Phillip Buchanan that it was "good stuff." "Yes," he said, "I'll market it for you, providing the remaining chapters come up to what I've seen."

Postcards and letters from Aunt Linnie and Lelia constantly poured in upon her. How was she getting along? Was she lonesome? Was she really and truly writing a novel? "How clever!" etc. They were having a marvelous time. They wished she had come with them They had found Jamaica so enchanting that they'd decided to stay not only through April, but also part of May.

More than "changing the number"

when you change to OIL-PLATING

MAYBE any station would have oil that's at least of the right Summer grade . . . let's say No. 20, No. 30, or No. 40.

And possibly anyone would know your right amount—5 or 6 or more quarts.

But it takes the Conoco station—it takes Your Mileage Merchant—to give your engine the oil-change that brings you the plus of OIL-PLATING . . . at an everyday price.

You must choose patented Conoco Germ Processed oil to know that the engine parts—as if "magnetized"—will attract and hold a shield of OIL-PLATING. This shields and smooths the bearings, piston rings and cylinder walls—bottom to top of your engine. Like the chromium-plating that shields and smooths the bumpers, OIL-PLATING holds ever-fast . . . it's drain-proof . . . never leaves a precious part naked to friction, during all your thousands of starts and thousands of miles this Summer. You'll see your heat indicator staying down safely; you'll see your Conoco Germ Processed oil staying up economically. Then see Your Mileage Merchant today for the plus of OIL-PLATING. Charlevoixans will learn with regret of the death at Flint on Wednesday, March 29th, of Thomas Shapton, former Barnard and Charlevoix resident.

Mr. Shapton was born August 12, 1863 near Stratford, Perth county, Ontario. He married Margaret Ann Bennett of Central Lake, March 21, 1889. They moved from the Barnard district to Charlevoix in 1906. Mr. Shapton was agriculturalist with the old Charlevoix Sugar Co. and moved with this firm to Ottawa, Ohio, in the fall of 1912. He had made his home at Flint since August 1914.

Mr. Shapton was the last of eight children of the late John and Sarah Shapton. Mr. and Mrs. Shapton observed their golden wedding anniversary March 21, 1939 at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Paul B. Purdy, where they resided.

Surviving besides the widow are two daughters, Mrs. Paul B. Purdy of Flint, and Mrs. Charles Hatch of Toledo, Ohio, three grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Funeral services were held Friday, March 31, at Flint. The many floral tributes showed the esteem in which Mr. Shapton was held by his many friends.

Several local residents attended the junior play in East Jordan Tuesday evening. Two of our local boys, Paul Hanson as an inn-keeper, and Bill Sanderson as an Englishman, made us feel that we have real talent in our little community as the boys did exceptionally well.

The ferry is still at the dock as there is still 16 inches of ice in the channel.

Last Friday afternoon Hilda Jackson and Dale Clark of East Jordan were married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Jackson. Near relatives were the guests with Rev. and Mrs. Parker of Charlevoix. A wedding dinner was served at five o'clock when the bride and groom went on a short trip. Mr. Clark left Monday for Lansing where he will graduate from Michigan State college this spring. Mrs. Clark will remain with her parents. The community extends its congratulations.

Egg Marks The Spot, Officer

Patrolman Harold Nickerson of the Detroit Police put his ticket book away when Betty Dane, Wayne University student, explained that her driving with an egg was only part of a sorority initiation stunt. She did it, too, without breaking the egg, by using a Chevrolet, in which vacuum from the motor supplies nearly all the power necessary in shifting gears with the new steering-column shift lever.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT

Why Blame the Climate?

If statistics mean anything [illegible] north central region of the [illegible] States in general, and Michigan in particular, is actually more healthful than the country as a whole. Yet many residents of the singularly favored areas frequently complain of the "bleak" winters, prone to lay in the salubrious climate of some other state where what is pre-cher- actually be a "cold" condition, the fact, place upon local conditions the blame for all their aches and ills.

Recently published figures indicate a death [illegible] in Michigan for 1938 of 9.9 [illegible],000 of population as compared with 11.2 per 1,000 for the United States. The birth rate for Michigan was 18.7 per 1,000 as compared with 17 per 1,000 for the nation. There were 15.14 deaths of infants under one year of age per 1,000 live births in Michigan for 1938 as compared with 57 for the United States in 1933, the last year for which complete figures are available.

The 10 principal causes of death, in order of their importance, were: Heart disease, cancer, apoplexy, coronary disease and angina pectoris, pneumonia, nephritis, accidents other than automobile injuries, tuberculosis, prematurity, birth and intracranial lesions. Only pneumonia may be said to be directly influenced by climate although even there the dependable.

Dr. Paul D. White of Boston recently expressed his beliefs that high blood pressure, coronary disease, neurosis, fatigue, insomnia, constipation and headache ills most common to the average community, are due less to the strain of climate than to the demands made daily and hourly upon the individual. The ceaseless drive of modern business or profession, family cares, pursuit of entertainment and social engagements appear to exact a far higher toll than barometric pressure, humidity, temperature, rainfall and the like. Attempts to correlate weather and good or ill health have been made but are not convincing to medical men.

In an inventory of the nation's health, completed in 1936, the United States Public Health Service interviewed 6,000,000 sick persons and found that 2,500,000 or 42 per cent were suffering from a chronic disease, 250,000 were afflicted with acute diseases of the stomach and liver and 500,000 were recuperating from accidents. Thus, more than half of those figuring in the survey could attribute their ill-health to [illegible] faulty diet, work, worry, infection [illegible] and familial and racial factors while only one-fourth of the remainder, [illegible] food, influenza and [illegible] economic, could be [illegible] climate.

It is significant that in the age group, 65 years and over, one person in eight was ill as compared to the [illegible] group, 25 to 64 years, and the childhood group, under 15 which had only one representative each in every 24 who were sick. The youth group, 15 of 24 years, inc. only one in 10 [illegible], the invalid and convalescents.

It is doubtful whether the condition of the older group will ever improve, in any [illegible] unless its mental processes and daily habits are made to conform more closely with hygienic laws.

AT THE MOVIES

Joan Crawford as "Cinderella" in Gay Mother Goose Ballet of "Ice Follies"

There is such a thing as the Land of Make-believe. It was especially created for "The Ice Follies of 1939" starring Joan Crawford with James Stewart, Lew Ayres and Lewis Stone, coming to the Palace Theatre Saturday, April [illegible] engagement of two days.

The cast surrounding Toler in the picture includes Phyllis Brooks, Sen Yung, Eddie Collins, John King, Claire Dodd, George Zucco, Robert Barrat and Marc Lawrence.

Boland-Ruggles Return in Man-and-Wife Roles

Mary Boland and Charlie Ruggles are having "boy trouble!"

The famous pair, who have been in every other kind of hot water during their many pictures together, are cast as the foster-parents of two obstreperous lads and the heads of the screen's zaniest family in their new picture, "Boy Trouble," Paramount will present it to the many local Boland-Ruggles fans beginning next Wednesday, April 8, at the Palace Theatre.

1. Abolish payroll increases ordered by the civil service commission, and thus save "at least" $1,000,000 a year.

2. Abolish most commissions, boards and bureaus created by 1937 legislature, thus saving "more than" $1,000,000 a year.

3. Revise formula for distribution of state aid to public schools to equalize districts that raise no school taxes locally and other districts which get more than they need, thus saving $13,000,000 a year. School aid this year was $28,000,000.

4. Revise property tax law and tax intangible property at a special low rate. Intangible property is now taxable at the same rate with real estate property, the rate being higher than the yield and hence not being enforced. The 1937 state tax commission started a movement to enforce the intangible property tax, but Governor Murphy called it off.

5. Plug sales tax loopholes, thus collecting "several millions."

Hope on Sales Tax

The auditor general is confident that efficient enforcement of the state sales tax, together with certain changes contemplated to aid collection, would result in many millions more for the state treasury.

Senate bill 114 by Senator George McCallum of Ann Arbor, chairman of the senate taxation committee, would require auto dealers of new and old cars to pay sales tax to secretary of state at time of registration or transfer.

This bill is expected to net approximately $5,000,000 more annually in sales tax collections.

6. (Point in Brown's program): "Adopt a sane and sensible welfare plan."

7. Strict economy by the administration to the end that there is "severe pruning of every item of public expense."

McCallum's Tax Plan

Senator George McCallum, taxation committee chairman, has introduced a bill requiring the state tax commission to assess personal property at either of the following rates: 5 per cent of the annual income derived from stocks, bonds, etc., or one quarter of 1 per cent of the par value, whichever is the greater.

The present personal-property tax (now unenforced) averages 2.7 per cent of the par value, or 19 times as much as the McCallum proposal.

Exemptions: Government bonds, armory bonds, possessions of benevolent institutions, G.A.R., Y.M.C.A. and similar groups, banks and trust companies, and insurance companies and utilities that now pay a specific tax.

State-Owned Autos

For many political moons an unwritten law has permitted state officials and employees to obtain and to use at public expense, expensive cars for personal as well as business purposes.

Representative Arthur U. Odell of Allegan and six other members of the house have just introduced a bill to curtail the car-buying practice by requiring approval of a state emergency appropriations commission before a car could be purchased.

A check-up revealed there are 683 state-owned machines, of which 116 are 1939 models.

The late Governor Frank Fitzgerald always declined to use a state-owned automobile for official business. He provided his own car and charged mileage expense. Furthermore, he had an Eaton county license plate. Luxurious machines, used by former Governor Murphy and George Gundry, now repose unused in the state garage.

Governor Dickinson has been provided transportation to and from the capitol and his home near Charlotte by state police.

To Extend Payroll Tax?

A last minute attempt will be made in the Michigan legislature to extend the unemployment compensation tax to all employers.

The present act exempts "small employers"—those who hire less than eight workers.

This year the social security taxes include an employer levy of 3 per cent to support a system of unemployment insurance and a levy of 2 per cent, divided equally between employer and worker, to support a system of old-age insurance. Next year the old-age insurance tax will go up one cent, borne one-half by the employer and one-half by the worker.

David Lawrence, Washington observer, points out that the 1939 payroll tax total will equal the entire amount paid by corporations in income taxes during the prosperity year of 1929, and that this cut into purchasing power will be in addition to a corporation income tax that is almost as high as in 1929.

The plight of the small business man, already badly tax-harrassed, will receive careful consideration at Lansing. We forecast that the Dickinson administration will not lend encouragement to further extension of the payroll tax.

Liquor Jitters

Liquor interests are slowly recovering from a bad case of jitters.

Because Governor Dickinson is an ardent dry in his personal life, many retailers and vendors of alcoholic beverages jumped to a hasty conclusion that Dickinson would try to return prohibition to Michigan.

The governor, president of the Michigan Anti-Saloon league, has let it be known that it was his duty as governor to carry out the will of the people to the best of his ability—in other words, to permit sale of liquor under rigid control.

"Control," however, may be tightened up to require midnight closing for roadhouses outside of municipalities, enforce the prohibition of sale of liquor to minors, and perhaps to ban Sunday liquor sales.

Mass production methods in industrial centers complicate the liquor enforcement picture somewhat. A worker whose "day" begins at 4 p. m. and ends at midnight usually abstains from taking a drink prior to going to work. When he finishes work at midnight, he is often in a mood for "relaxation"—a glass of beer or so.

Murl DeFoe of Charlotte, "personal representative" of Governor Dickinson on the state liquor commission, formerly was convinced that the state store system was wrong and that the state should get out of the "liquor business." Today, looking from the inside out, he finds that he has changed his mind—that state monopoly is the only sure way to effect decent control.

Democrats' Policy

Democratic leaders at Lansing have adopted the republican policy which has prevailed at Washington: Lay low, wait for opponents to make mistakes, and then capitalize on the issues.

Spokesmen in the senate and house have already indicated that some of the 1940 issues may be the following.

Labor—A "Cossack" labor relations law, clamping severe restrictions upon workers and employers who are not covered by the Wagner act for interstate commerce, would provide Democrats with welcome campaign material. Civil Service—Effort will be made to show that the legislature has virtually "annihilated" civil service in its insistence that many workers should be exempt and that less money should be spent in administering the act. (Bill has passed the house).

Will the conservative pendulum swing too far to the right? Democratic leaders are secretly hopeful that it will. The old game of politics is still being played.

Map 1939 Battle Against Hoppers

Grasshopper control campaigns in 45 Michigan counties are being mapped out by cooperating agencies to insure efficient use of funds, materials and labor.

Hoppers may not be as numerous this year as in 1938, says C. B. Dibble, extension specialist in insect control at Michigan State college. Yet he believes an efficient poison baiting program will be necessary to save crops and cut down numbers of the pests so that the effects will be apparent this summer and in successive cropping seasons.

In Charlevoix county it is planned to hold meetings of agricultural committees and township supervisors to study participation. Subsequently, there will be farmers' meetings for lectures and movies. Plans provide for safety posters to be displayed at mixing and distributing points. A square mile demonstration of control of hoppers may be set up in the county.

The greatest damage for several years has been inflicted on crops in the upper half of the lower peninsula and in several counties in the upper peninsula.

The effects of the baiting have led to estimates that approximately $1,118,000 in crops were saved from hopper loss in Michigan last year.

Baiting materials in 1938 cost a total of $34,000, shared by counties and the federal government.

Sunday morning service, 10:45.
Sunday school, 12 o'clock.
Meets first Wednesday evening each month at 7:45 p. m.

We cordially invite the public to our service and reading room.

"Are Sin, Disease and Death Real?" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, April 9.

The Golden Text (Exodus 15:26) is: "I am the Lord that healeth thee."

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Acts 17:24,25): "God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands; Neither is worshipped with men's hands, as though he needed any thing, seeing he giveth to all life, and breath, and all things;"

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 472): "All reality is in God and His creation, harmonious and eternal. That which He creates is good, and He makes all that is made."

He was rushed to the doctor, who was able to save the toe from being amputated.

The young people of the community gathered at the home of Ralph and Oliver Duplessis last Friday evening to celebrate their birthday anniversaries. The evening was spent in playing games, after which refreshments of ice cream and cake were served.

The Burgess Extension club meeting scheduled for Tuesday, April 18, has been postponed until Wednesday, April 19, so as not to conflict with the 4-H achievement day program. The meeting will be held, as before mentioned, at the home of Mrs. Joe Duplessis.

The election Monday was a very quiet affair, only about one-third of the voters turning out. A little variation from the usual procedure was an auction sale held directly after town meeting to dispose of the township road equipment. Everything was sold at a reasonable price by J. R. Struthers, who acted as auctioneer.

CLARK SCHOOL

Edward Boss has returned home from the hospital.

Mr. Walker was a caller in our school this Thursday.

We are going to study wild flowers in science this month.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Wilbur and children visited at Marlette this week end.

We are learning a new song in music, "God Bless America." It was written by Irving Berlin. We heard Kate Smith sing it over the radio Thursday night. We liked it so much that Mrs. Waraer got a copy.

PHELPS NEWS

Alice McElroy spent Sunday with her friend, Miss Sybil Balch.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilber Himebaueh were Sunday visitors of the Stevens family.

Herman Himebauch spent Sunday with his daughter, Mrs. Earl Balch and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Milford McElroy were Sunday afternoon callers at the Blanchard home.

Howard Peters is working for Mr. Blanchard helping at the saw mill and making maple syrup.

Miss Shirley Balch and her grandfather, Al Balch, were Sunday forenoon callers at the McElroy home.

We are glad to say both the girls' sewing and the boys handicraft clubs are progressing very nicely and all expect to be finishers this year.

Mr. Blanchard has had fairly good luck with his maple syrup. He finished the first batch Sunday afternoon and expects to be making it all this week.

We are very glad to have Herman Himebauch in our community again. He returned Friday afternoon from South Carolina, where he has been staying all winter.

CENTRAL LAKE

Sap's running!

Wm. Farrels and Guy Whites are making maple syrup.

Maurice Dawson was an East Jordan visitor Monday and Tuesday.

Wonderful meetings were conducted by Rev. Scott and wife at Pentacostal church here last week. Dedication night the church was crowded to the doors.

Attendances at Sunday school last Sunday were: Jordan 14, Green River 30 and Bush 14. The Hatterbees are out again, except the little boy, who is ill with flu.

The little boy of King Smith living east of Bellaire, was seriously burned and had to be taken to Petoskey hospital last week. The family were up to see him Sunday.

C. H. Morse, recently returned from spending the winter in Florida, left Monday to take Phil Mudge and wife to Lapeer where the funeral of her sister, Mrs. Waffle, will be held.

Miss Phyllis Swanson, a popular young lady of Bay View, will be married at high noon Friday to Chas. Neal of Ann Arbor. The bride has been employed at State Hospital the last year.

Alfred Christensen, we are sorry to hear, is leaving for Star Community club, Albion, a boys' camp, to work this summer. He will be unable to help with the Sunday school work. Success to him.

Mr. and Mrs. Freely Potter were callers at the James Dawson home at Bay View Sunday. They have recently returned from Chicago since the death there of her father, George Austin, former bank cashier at Stevens bank here.

Word comes that Mrs. W. P. Mosher, who with her husband, spent the winter in Florida and at Glen Allen, Virginia, fell last week, fracturing her hip bone, and is now convalescing at a hospital at Richmond, Virginia. They would like to have many friends here write post cards to her there.

The funeral of William Dawson, an old time resident of this place, occurred at Central Lake M. E. church last Friday afternoon. Interment was in Southern cemetery. Mr. Dawson was a fine Christian gentleman, and leaves many relatives and friends here. He was a member for years of the M. E. church here, and at one time was a member of the Crusade Band.

So many church suppers are being held this week that it almost gives one indigestion to read about it. One has a pork supper, one a fish supper, and one a pot luck. One play is being put on by Sunday-school people. One church may be commended by having church services each evening for the whole of Holy week. "God is in His Holy Temple, let all the people keep silence." Would like to attend the Good Friday services at Elk Rapids, but have an invitation to the Swanson wedding at Bellaire. Still may be able to get there after the services. The meeting last year was especially a spiritual one.

expense of feeding deer in such overpopulated areas as I described in this column last week. I would be wholeheartedly in favor of the expense of feeding deer starving on public hunting grounds but I'll be darned if I want any of my license money spent to feed deer starving on the property of private hunting clubs. If these fellows have money enough to grab off thousands of acres of our game cover, they should also have enough to feed the deer on their property if the animals starve. The proper solution to game control is to place authority in the hands of a single agency, and that agency in Michigan is the conservation department. Hundreds of thousands of dollars go to the conservation department yearly for study, protection and management of our fish and game. No individual or scattered groups of individuals, have the knowledge gained by the department of conservation through its constant and painstaking research. The legislature should give the department of conservation authority to handle all such matters.

Did you knnw that they call the Ironton ferry "Cinderella's Ferry?" I never did until the other day. The reason is that the ferry stops operating at 12 o'clock midnight and if you are on the opposite side from which you should be, it's "rags and mice" or (really a 20 mile trip around the south arm of Lake Charlevoix) if you're not on hand at the stroke of the curfew. Better mark that down in your book.

If Cong. Fred Bradley voted as he said he would in remarks before the House of Representatives at Washington on March 7, he voted "No" on the reorganization bill which passed both houses and is now ready for presidential signature. I quote Mr. Bradley, in part, as follows: "I favor reorganization. Who does not when he drives around this city of Washington or who does not when he drives around any city—large or small—yes; even the smallest of hamlets and sees, hanging on pillars or post or painted in gilded letters on the windows for all to see, the magic alphabetical insignia of some government agency or bureau. Who does not favor reorganization when he can hardly drive 5 minutes on any highway in the country without passing one or more of the one-hundred-thousand-and-odd government cars carrying bureaucrats hither and yon to pry into your affairs and mine—while we are living in this beneficient age of planned economy. Yes; I favor reorganization — reorganization was a vital issue in my campaign last fall when I received a mandate from my constituents back home. That mandate was economy, to do my part toward restoring this government to a sound financial basis and restoring to this congress the powers that belong to it and which it has so carelessly given away during the 6 years of the New Deal. Yes, Mr. Speaker, I favor reorganization for economy and efficiency, but I do not favor giving to this president the right to play a game of solitaire chess with government bureaus as the pawn. This bill, to my mind, is being offered at this time with but two purposes in mind. It is a weak and puny attempt on the part of the majority to put us on the spot, on this side of the house, for 1940, by saying we refused to approve of a bill to provide for economy in government and, secondly, and foremost, it is being introduced in this session to satisfy the whim of the gentleman in the White House who is determined that his will must continue to prevail over this congress. Mr. Speaker, here is one new member of this body who is not afraid of being put on the spot and who is always going to vote for the best interests of his constituents and the country as he sees it and who is determined that insofar as he is able to promote it, this body shall take back unto itself the powers granted it by the constitution, and, therefore, I am going to vote "no" on this reorganization bill." If a few more men of Bradley's caliber could be sent to congress, the people, instead of the president, would have the voice in governing our country.

LICENSING OF ALL DRINKERS PROPOSED

House Measure Presented to Prevent Sales to Minors

Seven house Republicans came forward last Thursday with a proposal to license drinkers as a means of preventing minors from purchasing beer and liquor.

The licensing provision was made part of a general revision of the liquor law. It was sponsored by Reps. Nelson A. Miles, Holland; Dora Stockman, Lansing; Walter F. Remer, Saginaw; Joseph E. Werner, Ypsilanti; Ruth Thomson, Muskegon; Ate Dykstra, Grand Rapids and Bert J. Storey, Belding.

Under their proposal it would be necessary for every person who wants to buy beer or any other kind of intoxicant to obtain a license costing 50 cents. Such licenses, Miles said, are issued in Oregon, Virginia, Iowa and Utah.

Licenses could be revoked for drunkenness, non-support of family or dependents, desertion of family or conviction of a misdemeanor of felony in which the use of liquor was involved.

SPRING BURNING MENACE TO GAME

INVESTIGATION SHOWS LITTLE GAIN FROM PRACTICE

Destruction of Wild Life Beneficial to Farmers More Than Offsets Any Value Received

Spring marsh and roadside burning, long a question of controversy among farmers and sportsmen, has been tested at the forest fire experiment station at Roscommon and benefits have been found to be practically none.

Many farmers, according to Gilbert Stewart, station director, burn areas largely as a matter of custom with no definite reason in mind.

Worst feature of the burning, according to Stewart, is the toll taken from wild life. Birds are nesting in the areas to be burned, rabbits are too young to escape the flames and many creatures beneficial to the farmer such as spiders, toads, and rodent-eating snakes are destroyed.

Spring fires are the most destructive agency known as far as song birds, quail, pheasant, partridge and small game animals are concerned, Stewart declares. Those who burn over lands ought not to expect to find game birds or animals there; neither should they expect to find trillium or anemone in their woodlands. But they will find an abundance of insects in their gardens and orchards and weed plants in their truck patches.

All forest growths are more rapid if fires are kept out, Stewart's experiments reveal and fertility is huraed out of the soil.

NEW CITY COUNCIL HAS FIRST MEETING

TWO NEW ALDERMEN TOOK OVER DUTIES MONDAY

Oakley J. Hammond Named City Assessor by Mayor Robert Bridge —Beach Improvements Planned

With two new members assuming their duties, the city council met Monday evening for its first meeting following election.

New members of the administration of Mayor Robert Bridge, beginning his second term, were Charles Bellinger, succeeding Karl Erber in the first ward, and Charlea H. Lamphear, succeeding Fred E. Cartier in the second ward. Aldermen continuing their terms were Harry F. Hooker, re-elected, and J. J. Hallett of the third ward, Charles Heise in the second precinct and Clarence Wood in the first. The old council held its final meeting last Thursday evening.

Regular routine business of the initial session included approval of applications for tavern beer licenses by Min-Eva Cafe, Della Jeffery, Harold Bedford and Goldie Pant. The application of the latter for permit to hold dances in her beer tavern was rejected.

Mayor Bridge appointed Oakley J. Hammond, deputy city clerk, to succeed Darwin F. Meech as city assessor. The appointment received unanimous approval by the council.

Continuing plans to establish a satisfactory bathing beach on the north side of Lake Charlevoix, the council instructed City Superintendent Don Herrick to make application to the War Department to build a bathing pier at the end of Chicago avenue. The city has leased the adjoining Pere Marquette park for the current year and construction of the bathing pier is one of the improvements contemplated.

EASTER EGG HUNT WAS FINE EVENT SATURDAY

Over One Hundred Kiddies Took Part In WPA Recreational Event

An Easter "egg hunt" supervised by Ed. Radle and Bob Pearl of the WPA recreational staff, provided an enjoyable event for 125 kiddies Saturday.

Races, with baskets of candy eggs as prizes were held for all lower school grades. The winners were: 1st grade, Dwight Smith; 2nd grade, Beverly Looze, Robert Russell; 3rd grade, Marjorie Johnson, Phil Martin; 4th grade, Katherine Shores, Frank Martin; 5th grade, Marian Lewis, Ray Whitley; 6th grade, Barbara LaSalle, "Bug" Russell; 7th grade, Joha Chambers.

Appreciation to local merchants who donated the prizes has been expressed.

EXPERIMENTS WITH "HUNKY" PARTRIDGE

New Stock Brought In By Department from Alberta

A shipment of Hungarian partridge from Alberta has been received by the conservation department and released in two nearly equal plants on the Shiawassee and Genesee county line south of Flushing and in Sanilac county.

The birds are of the stock which met with such amazing success when first planted in Calgary, Canada. They were ordered by the department of conservation in an effort to determine whether this strain is superior to the type now being raised by the department.

April 21 and May 5 have been set aside as Arbor Day in the lower and upper peninsula respectively by proclamation of Governor Luren D. Dickinsoa.

DELAY DECISION ON DEER LAW CHANGES

Request for Regulatory Power on Hunting Up This Week

The house late Thursday agreed to delay until this week consideration of a bill authorizing the conservation commission to declare an open season on antlerless deer.

The bill was returned to the conservation committee at the request of Chairman Alexander M. Mackay of West Branch who said he wanted to give a group of Alpena sportsmen an opportunity to be heard.

The open season on deer and bear last year was November 15 to 30. Mackay's bill would give the commission full authority to regulate deer hunting without statutory restrictions.

Another bill making numerous changes in bag limits on game birds and animals and making several amendments to the game law also was returned to the conservation committee for consideration along with the deer bill.

COURSE FOR RESORT EMPLOYES PLANNED

OFFER TRAINING FOR HOUSEHOLD, HOTEL DUTIES

Registration Open from April 19 to May 1st—Mrs. Irving Hallett in Charge of Classes

Inauguration of a special training course at the high school for the purpose of teaching residents of Charlevoix county the duties of domestic employes, has been announced by Gordon B. Todd, secretary of the Board of Commerce.

The project, sponsored by the board of education and board of commerce, will be under the supervision of Supt. O. P. North, with Mrs. Irving Hallett in charge of the classes. The plan, worked out through the cooperation of Miss Evelyn Yeiter of the state department of vocational education, will provide training in such duties as waitress, chambermaid, bell-hop, bus-boy, housemaid and other occupations about the home and hotel so that they may be better qualified to secure employment.

Inauguration of the course here and at other points in the resort area followed a survey which revealed that owners and managers of hotels, restaurants and other resort establishments have found it difficult to obtain help in the region qualified for such work and that they would be willing to employ local labor with proper training.

As outlined by Mr. Todd, the course will last 30 days, with each class period four hours per day, from Monday through Friday. There will be a $2 tuition charge and upon successful completion of the course the graduates will be given a certificate and an effort made by the instructor and sponsors to place graduates in positions. Applicants must be at least 16 years old to qualify and 30 is the maximum number permitted in one class. Should the number of applicants be sufficient to warrant it, two classes will be established.

This course is expected to furnish a supply of skilled, trained employes for private homes, hotels and summer resorts of the region. It is expected the classes will start about May 1st and daily class times will be adjusted later.

Mrs. Hallett will be at the board of commerce office every afternoon from April 19 to May 1st to take registrations. Those desiring information regarding the course are requested to contact O. P. North, superintendent of schools, or Mr. Todd at the board of commerce information bureau.

NAVIGATION EXPECTED ON LAKES OPEN MAY 1

Ice Conditions in Straits Indicate Late Start for Season

Great Lakes shippers, who expect a marked increase in freight business during 1939, predict that the navigation season will open about May 1st.

A solid wall of ice, wider than the eye can see, blocks the Straits of Mackinac. Navigators said it probably would be at least three weeks before the first freighters go through that channel.

The U. S. Weather Bureau ice reporter at the Straits said the ice there is 14 to 22 inches thick and that navigation "can not possibly open before April 15." Ship line officials generally believed the season would open to all types of boats May 1st.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By Ken Usher

Out of an armful of measures proposed in the state legislature to control the sale of liquors comes one which appears to have considerable merit. Made a part of the general revision of the liquor law, the proposal would require every person who wants to buy beer or any other kind of intoxicant to obtain a license costing 50 cents. Licenses could be revoked for drunkeness, non-support of family or dependents, desertion of family or conviction of a misdemeanor or felony in which the use of liquor was involved. The purpose behind the proposal is to prevent minors from purchasing beer and liquor. That minors are now served is no secret at all and is the cause of the oft heard expression "We would be better off with the old-time saloon." Nobody wants saloons, nor do they care to see youngsters served intoxicants. Just off-hand, this licensing proposal looks like a solution to present problems. Certainly licenses would not be issued to minors and without a license they could not buy as they do now in public places. A multitude of other abuses such as sale to habitual drunks, drunken motorists, etc., could be solved. It looks like sensible legislation which does not interfere too much with the privileges of a public which voted for the return of liquor, is now having trouble with its regulation, but which would resent unnecessary and dictatorial regulation.

Yeah! It's just exactly 17 more days before the trout fishing season opens, and it looks like we'll need our snow shovels.

Officials of Michigan's tourist promotional groups are worried no little by the prospect of resorters being drawn away from Michigan this summer by the two World's Fairs now in progress. It's really something to think about, too. One way Michigan newspapers can help the situation is

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Whether the state of Michigan should fix milk prices—just like it fixes prices for electricity, telephone, gas, and other utility services—is one of the numerous controversial issues before the legislature this month.

As you consider the matter at this moment in reading this column, your attitude will probably be influenced largely by whether you are a producer or a consumer.

The producer has genuine grievances. The price at wholesale is too low; it should cover (at least) cost of production; milk is a utility commodity because it is a public necessity; and so on.

The consumer is concerned, however, in price, quality, and service. "Quality" in this case includes safety to his health through sanitary safeguards. If the adult consumer considers the price to be high, or if he lacks the ability to pay, he curtails consumption or eliminates it altogether. Thus, milk must compete to a certain extent with bread, fruit, and

UNIFIED FOR Economy

One of the many advantages of our membership in the Bell System is the substantial saving to every customer of this Company . . . a saving that grows directly out of the centralization made possible by the Bell System.

For example, we get our equipment from the Western Electric Company, manufacturing unit for all Bell Telephone Companies. This assures us of the finest standardized equipment at a lower cost than we could buy it elsewhere.

Instead of conducting our own research department, we pay a fraction of the cost of maintaining the centralized Bell Telephone Laboratories, "Home of Telephone Progress." In this way we have the use of the improvements developed by a complete research program which no one associated Bell Telephone Company could afford to maintain.

This efficiency . . . avoiding wasteful duplication . . . is one reason why your telephone service is better and costs less than any other telephone service in the world.

It wss during the last week of April that Mary heard something rather startling about Jim Ormsby, and ofter several days of hesitation, decided to write Lelia an air-mail letter, and tell her what she knew.

Phil Buchanan had been her informant. "So Lelia's having a time for herself in Jamaica, is she?" he had asked, using that belligerent tone which he invariably employed when speaking of Jim Ormsby's ex-wife.

"Yes," Mary replied coldly. "Why shouldn't she?"

Phil scowled at her. "Well," he retorted, "it seems n little unfair when Jim's having such rough sledding."

"'Rough sledding?' What's the matter with Jim Ormsby?"

"Don't you know?"

"Know what?—How should I know anything about Mr. Ormsby? Lelia hasn't mentioned him over three times since I've known her—and then, of course, only casually."

"Jim Ormsby's just dropped a lot of money in the Barstow Amalgamated failure," Phil returned, "yet he's kept on paying thnt ridiculously large allimony he signed up for when they got their divorce."

A shadow passed over Mary's face. "I'm sure Lelia doesn't know about Jim's losses," she said defensively. "She's one of the squarest, fairest women I've ever met, and, what's more, I believe she's still terribly in love with Jim."

Phil Buchanan's chin thrust forward angrily. "Well, if she is, now's the time for her to show it! Jim's not only almost completely down and out as to finances, but he's also a very sick mnn. Ulcers of the stomach, or something. And he's up at his Connecticut place, sick and broke and alone except for that Japanese houseman who's been his devoted slave for years."

"Perhaps Lelia ought to know," Mary had thought at the time, "I wonder if I should write and tell her. She might think I'm an officious little prig—yet I just know she's still in love with Jim, and she'll want to do something about it."

It was almost a week, however, before she could make up her mind to write Lelia, and, even then, it was with trepidation that she sent off the air-mail letter.

She and Phil had been seated on the lounge in Aunt Linnie's living room, and, finished with the reading of the last sentence of the last chapter, Mary looked up at the man, a shy unspoken question in her eyes.

"It's great, Mary!" Phil exclaimed. "Tony Porter can't help liking it. He'd be a tool to turn it down. It's got everything a popular novel should have—love and hate, revenge and vindication, conflict and suspense. And it's beautifully written, my dear."

The girl's eyes filled with sudden, unwanted tears of relief and happiness, and, looking at her, Phil thought, "Those eyes are like shining dark pools." Quite without warning, he put his arms about her, and drew her to him. "You little nut!" he said brusquely. "What in the world are you crying about?"

"I'm—I'm so happy!" Mary returned, smiling through her tears. "It's so wonderful to have the novel finished and to hear you say it's all right."

The man's arms tightened about her. "But," he protested, "I've said all along that it was good stuff!"

"Well—yes. But you were so terribly insulting about those short stories!"

Phil extracted a big sheer handkerchief from his pocket and dried two shining tears that were sliding down her face. "I was frank about those stories, Mary," he said, and his gray eyes had grown serious, "because I wanted to help you. I suspect I was in love with you even then, but I didn't actually realize it until tonight."

"What!" Mary exclaimed, and, apparently aware for the first time that Phillip Buchanan's arms were about her, hastily drew away from him.

"Yes," he said in a low voice, making no effort to hold her, "yes, I'm in love with you, Mary, but never having been in love with anybody before, I suppose I didn't recognize the symptoms! Darling?"

"Yes, Phil?"

"Will you marry me? I need you awfully. It's just dawned on me how important a part of my existence you've become; how alone and lonesome and lost I'd be without you."

Mary regarded him silently, her eyes dusky with bewilderment and surprise. This man was so different from—the others; so unlike Jerome Taylor and Umberto Balianci, even Christopher Cragg. He was so honorable and straightforward. He loved her; he was, well, rather a wonderful person, and she should be elated over his wanting her for his wife—yet a vision of Chris precipitated itself before her mind's eye.

"Phil," she finally began, "I hardly know what to say. I——"

He leaned towards her, and quickly took one of her hands in his. "Then don't say anything just yet," he replied, his speech blurred with a gruff tenderness. "Don't give me, editorially speaking, a rejection slip tonight! Wait a while, dearest, and think things over. I shan't even ask you if you csre anything at all about me. Perhaps I'd rather not hear. Perhaps I'm just a little afrsid."

Mary tried valiantly to regain her equilibrium. "Phil," she began again, "I——" But her speech was halted by another blinding thought of Christopher Crsgg.

Phil flung aside her hand, and, jumping up from the couch, started to pace the length of the living room. "Don't answer me now," he sdmonished shortly. "Give yourself some time! I won't force things, my dear. I'll simply wait until you're quite sure—one way or the other . . . Listen! You'll have to get 'Storm on the Mountain' typed, and into Porter's hands right away. I'm going to trot along now. It's twelve o'clock."

Mary got up from the lounge, and followed him into the entrance hall. "You've been so good to help me with the novel, Phil," she said timidly. "I can't tell you . . ."

He opened the entrance door; then wheeled about and looked at her intently, a worried frown between his eyes. "I hope I haven't upset you, Mary," he said, his voice taut, "but remember I'll be waiting for your decision. There'll never be anyone else in my life, darling!"

Abruptly, he caught her in his arms and kissed her warmly, tenderly, on the mouth. "I love you, dearest!" he murmured.

Then, almost roughly, he released her, stalked to the door, and slammed it behind him. Mary stood where he had left her, as if rooted to the floor.

Unconsciously, her hand went to her lips. Phil had kissed her for the first time—and she had liked his kiss! "Yet how can I," she asked herself, "I'm in love with Christopher Cragg?"

Mary took "Storm on the Mountain" to a public stenographer's to be typed the next morning. Yes, she was told by the efficient young man behind a desk in the outer office, they'd charge twenty-five dollars for three copies, and they'd bind it for her if she wished.

A few minutes later, she was back on Forty-second Street, and the rest of the day before her. She didn't know just what she wanted to do, or where she wanted to go. She was utterly satiated with writing. She felt as if she'd scream if she had to look at another word—even in someone's else novel—for at least another week. She'd like to make a sort of holiday, a gala affair, of today, but a girl can't be particularly festive all by herself.

She wished that Phil had invited her to have lunch with him, but he hadn't even mentioned a future engagement when they had parted the night before. A deep red suffused her face as thoughts of that parting recalled themselves to her mind, and a pleasant sensation flooded her beart as she remembered his kiss. "I've never felt quite like that before," she admitted to berself, "yet it's so silly for me to be—touched at all when I can't possibly be in love with Phil Buchahan. I wonder if he'll call tonight."

But "Mr. Phil" did not phone, and after eating dinner and reading the Sun, Mary, feeling lonesome for the first time since Linnie Cotswell's departure, went to bed.

The next morning she wandered about the apartment, and eventually settled in her own room. Her clothes needed a good looking-over, and now, if ever, was the perfect time to do it. There were stockings to be mended, gloves to be washed, several things to be sent to the cleaner. It was while her hands were deep in soapsuds that the telephone rang, and, in an unconscious attempt to beat Addie to the instrument, she ran to answer it.

The Mulatto, emerging from the kitchen, and observing Mary's haste, grinned wisely, and let her win the race.

"Mary?" asked the voice at the other end of the line.

"Hello, Phil," she returned, and was surprised to find that it was an effort not to appear too eager.

"Doing anything tonight?"

"Um—no, I'm not."

"Would you like to go to a party? The Archibalds are celebrating something or other, with a couple of theatrical stars as the drawing cards, and they want me to bring you along. How about it?"

"I'd love it, Phil. What time?"

"Well, the party doesn't begin until eleven, but let's have dinner together somewhere, and take in a play afterwards."

"All right, Phil. Evening things, of course."

"Yes, unless Spike's forgotten to remove the paw marks Osc'r plant ed on my dinner coat the other night! I'll be around for you about seven. Oh, by the way, did you take 'Storm,' et cetera, to be typed?"

"Yes. Yesterday morning. They say everybody in New Ynrk's writing novels and that they're an swamped they can't have it finished till Thursday noon."

"Well, nobody's writing a novel like yours! Supposing I get Tony Porter tn lunch with us at the Algonquin Thursday, and you can turn the script right over to him while we're there?"

"Could you really do that, Phil? That'd be rushing things right along in a perfectly miraculous manner! Only I didn't know that literary brokers ever stooped to break bread with a grass-green author!"

"They do, my child, when the editor of America's biggest weekly happens to ask them! Besides, Anthony Porter's more enthusinstic about your novel and its author than the old poker-face lets on."

"All right, Phil. You shnuld know!"

"I do, darling. See you later."

"See you later, Phil! Good-by."

CHAPTER XV

She took more pains than usual in dressing that night, and was shyly pleased with the reflection the mirror threw back at her, as, giving it one last glance, she made ready to enter the living room. Phil, looking big and somewhat austere in dinner clothes, jumped up from the chair in which he'd been lounging, to greet her. "Darling," he exclaimed, "you look lovely tonight!" And then, as if fearful of having been lush, he hastily asked her where she wanted to dine.

Nor did he show, by any word or sign throughout the whole evening, that Mary Loring meant anything more to him tonight than she had the first day they had met. In fact, she might have thought that she had only dreamed he'd asked her to marry him—that he didn't care anything at all about her—had he not said, "If there's nothing more exciting in your life tomorrow night, Mary, what about having dinner with me? I could call all bets off at the office around four o'clock, and, if you'd like, we could drive somewhere on Long Island. The dogwood trees are in bloom now."

"Thanks, Phil, I'd love it," Mary replied, and realized, an instant later, that she had experienced a moment of disappointment when she had thought he was not going to say anything about seeing her before their luncheon engagement on Thursday.

"Do I feel—keen about seeing him simply because I'm not busy writing now?" she asked herself, "and am rather lonesome? Or do I really care for him in the way he wants me to? But how could I? People don't fall in and out of love so quickly. I'm in love with Chris... I've always been in love with Chris."

But she was destined not to know for some time whether her eagerness to see Phil, to be with him, and listen to his clever, lazy talk, was due to lack of other interests, or not. The days went on. The luncheon engagement with Anthony Porter became an accomplished fact. "Storm on the Mountain" was now in his hands; he had already submitted it to a popular magazine for women. She was writing a new short, her feeling of distaste for sentences and situations having deserted her at last. She was seeing Phil every day now—a Phil still as cold and aloof as if he had never spoken those words of love to her, yet a man deeply, undeniably, devoted to one girl. A radiogram had come from Lelia. She had received Mary's letter, and she and Linnie would sail on the first boat that was heading for New York. They would be home on the twenty-fifth of May.

It was on the night of the twenty-third that Mary, coming home with Phil from an evening at the Van Wurkens', found a telegram for her beneath Aunt Linnie's door. Phil switched on the hall light and followed her into the living room as she tore open the message. She stood there for an instant, reading it, staring at the slip of paper as if the words she read were too startling to believe; then, as they at last penetrated her benumbed senses, she uttered a low, hurt cry.

Phil was at her side instantly. "Mary! Is it bad news?"

She silently handed him the yellow sheet; then, like a little girl tno stunned to cry out, covered her face with her hands.

Phil glanced apprehensively at the telegram. It read:

FATHER JUST PASSED AWAY PLEASE COME HOME IMMEDIATELY ELLEN.

Dropping it on the table, he went to her, and tnking her, unresisting, in his arms, held her tenderly, protectively there. "Poor little Mary," he said sniftly. "Darling, I'm so sorry! So very sorry! Rest your head against me, my sweet, and cry. Let the tears come. It'll help, darling."

And standing thus, within the safe warm circle of his embrace, she wept—wept for the loss of the dearest friend she'd ever had—wept for the sacrifices Jomes Loring had made for his family—wept for the defeat and heartache that had seared these last few months of his life.

At last, struggling for composure, she raised her tortured eyes to Phil. "How soon csn I get away?" she asked. "Is there a train tonight? I have to go by way of Chicago, you know."

Phil's hold about her relaxed, and seeking in his pocket for a cigarette, he fnund one and lighted it. "It's too late tonight, but I'll phnne the New York Central and the Pennsylvania, snd find out what time you can leove tomorrow; how aoon you can get to Hawkinsville. And I'll aend Miss Cotswell a radiogram. Mary?"

"Yes?"

"Would you like for me to go to Hawkinsville with you? I hate ta think of you making the trip alone."

Mary averted her haggard young face. "No, Phil dear. Thank you. You're so good—so very good to offer, but—I want to be alone."

Silence, and then, "All right dear. Hsdn't you better telephone or wire your family right away?"

"I'll wire," Mnry returned huskily. "I—I—couldn't bear to talk to them tonight."

"Write out the message then, and let me send it for you. I know you don't even feel like giving it to the telephone operator."

Mary automatically moved towards the desk, sought pen and paper, and scribbled a pitiful message to her mother. Then, again, overcome by her loss, compassion for her mother, heartache for her father, to whom of all his children she had been closest, she buried her face in her arms on the desk.

SENIORS IN REHEARSAL FOR CLASS PLAY SCHEDULED ON MAY 4

The seniors of Charlevoix high school are having a rip-roaring time rehearsing their play, "The Next Door Neighbors," to be given Thursday, May 4.

Of course, it is perfectly understandnble considering the fact that there is a squeaky chair, a deaf old lady who is always interpreting things incorrectly, a prize rooster whose life is in dire peril; and Johnny, the dear younger brother, who keeps everyone informed as to the fate of the rooster.

The dialogue and situations are clever and funny but not half as funny as the incidents that arise during rehearsal. When Clure McGhan called Marjorie Knudsen big toed instead of bigoted; and the line "I refuse to budge" was read "I refuse to bulge," practice was completely stopped by guffnws. Nor nre mispronunciation and misinterpretations the only things that cause delays. Mnnday night, the rising of an enormous mellow moon afflicted the cast with the sickly disease "moonstruck."

Sh! Miss Scheur looked too!

Pheasants, early nesting birds, are particularly hard hit by the spring burning practice with hundreds of eggs being literally roasted by fires. Food supply of the older birds is also damaged by the flames while cover, always scarce in regions of intensive farming, is in many areas completely destroyed.

Fires, Stewart points out, destroy the habitat and food supply of all resident game and insectivorous birds and small game animals. High winds act as a continuous and serious threat to human life and property in certain areas even with the closest possible supervision. This, together with its apparent uselessness in heightening productivity of an area, finally condemns the practice of spring burning.

other food commodities. In the case of babies and invalids, milk is an outright necessity.

Welsh Milk Bill

A case at hand is the Welsh milk bill, sponsored by the Michigan Milk Producers' association and backed generally by the Farm Bureau and the Grange.

This measure was debated pro and con for two hours at Lansing last week with Rep. Stanton Welsh of St. Clair county and Rep. Maurice Post of Kent county leading its defense and Rep. Joseph Warner of Washtenaw county and Rep. Floyd E. Town of Jackson county leading the attack. Wayne county legislators, typified by Rep. John Hamilton and Rep. Chester Fitzgerald, both Democrats, were critical of milk price fixing on the grounds that it violated consumer interests.

By a vote of 43 to 35, the bill was sidetracked to the house ways and means committee despite a warning by Rep. John Espie of Clinton county, chairman, that it might be re-reported out.

Warner and Town, both dairy farmers, took the position that price fixing of milk was not the duty of state government and that as long as three-fifths of all Michigan produced milk today does not go into bottles, being classified as surplus, the basic problem would still remain unsolved.

The milk problem has two sides, as most problems have. Legislators are perplexed—the 43-35 vote clearly indicating the division of thought.

Cleaning Price-Fixing

Before the senate state affairs committee is Senate Bill 314 which would put the state into the price-fixing business for dry cleaners.

Persons who are in the dry cleaning business complain of "ruinous competition." The wolf in sheep's clothing is the so-called "chiseler" who cuts prices and otherwise engages in what his competitor terms "unfair" trade practices.

Recall your "Blue Eagle" NRA days. The argument is strangely familiar.

Senate Bill 314 would create a state dry cleaning and dyeing commission of five members, one of whom as chairman would receive $5,000 a year and the other four would get $4,000 a year. This commission would have broad power to say what are "unfair" trade practices, to limit underselling claims, fix regional minimum prices at both wholesale and retail, and even determine minimum wages and maximum hours.

Expenses of the commission could not exceed $60,000 a year, and business license fees would range from $25 to $100 a year in addition to a flat 25 cents monthly fee for each employee.

Licensing Cooks

The last minute rush of new bills further substantiates our earlier observation of a trend toward further state centralization, whereby everyone and his brother would be regulated in some way by Lansing.

Many of these bills are reasonable in their objective.

It is not our intent to belittle their motives, but rather to present the facts for what they are. It should be pointed out also that some of these measures will probably die in committee, having been introduced as a legislative courtesy to a constituent or some special group.

Here are some examples of state centralization:

Senate bill 332 creating a state commission to examine and license registered and student cooks.

Senate bill 271 creating a state warm air heating and air conditioning board for examinations, licensing, fees, etc.

Senate bill 285 creating a state board of boiler rules; chief inspector to get $3,600; deputy inspectors to get not less than $2,400 each.

Antique Dealers, Too

The innocent and unlightened collector of antiques, who is the prey of unregulated antique dealers, would be protected against "unfair" trade practices by Senate bill 304.

Following the trend of setting up a new bureau for each field of business activity, this measure would create a state board for antique dealers; three members would get $10 per diem and 5 cents mileage expense; dealers would pay a fee of $15 for a license and $10 annually for renewal; non-resident fee would be $25.

And then there are unscrupulous photographers whose unfair trade practices victimize the public. Senate bill 406 would solve this problem. It would dignify photography thru a state board of photographic examiners, licensing photographic employers, issuing certificates and so on. Exemptions would include camera men working for newspapers or news syndicates, authors and writers, and amateurs.

Each of the above groups has a just grievance. Each group desires to improve standards, etc., and to curtail the "chiseling" competitor through the power to revoke his state license.

And why not?

What Price Regulation?

Possibilities of state regulation are almost unlimited.

Among other bills introduced to date are the following:

Licensing of automobile salesmen, gasoline dealers, real estate title abstractors, billboard builders, decorators, painters, paperhangers, tourist cabins, trailer camps, auto wreckers, watchmakers, collection agencies, practitioners of naturaopthy, makers of butter substitutes, fight promoters, and business agents for labor unions.

Further trade or professional regulations are proposed on these groups:

Barbers, cosmetologists, chiropodists, dentists, electricians, embalmers, funeral directors, plumbers, retailers.

Several bills seek to regulate the making of bread—sizes, standards, etc.

Another bill would require grading of gasoline and oil.

Nearly every one of these regulatory measures would require payment of an annual fee to help maintain the cost of a state commission and its additional policing duties. Indirectly the annual fees constitute special taxes which must be paid either out of private incomes or ultimately out of the consumer's pocketbook. Indirectly, too, each measure is distinctly monopolistic in its objective, justified by sponsors as being for the protection of the public—the consumer.

"Below-Cost" Printing

Since this Lansing news letter appears in newspapers which as a rule sell job printing "on the side," several readers may wonder if anyone in Michigan has proposed licensing of printers with a code of ethics and unfair trade practices and all the rest.

Since January 1 we have received suggestions from two newspaper publishers who propose such licensing.

A weekly publisher in Barry county wrote March 31: "Have we a fair trade law in Michigan that checks these home printers from cutting prices below a reasonable profit for a regular shop? Please advise."

If every other business group obtains legislative sanction at Lansing for state regulation, printers may seek the same privilege. Newspapers must be printed. For the average small paper at least, job printing is an integral part of its business. A danger to democracy lies in the possibility that a dictator like the late Huey Long, might try to circumvent constitutional freedom of the press and thus to control newspapers by using a threat of higher taxes or licensing fees as a coercive club on editors.

Home Beautification Project Gaining In Interest

The landscaping program arranged for this past winter was concluded the last day of March when O. I. Gregg, landscape specialist from the Michigan State college, gave his last illustrated lecture.

As a result of his wonderful assistance we have now made landscaping outlines for close to one hundred different homes throughout the county. Eight more new outlines were added this winter. In addition, Mr. Gregg is cooperating with the East Jordan arboretum project. This month arrangements have been made for two and a half days of his time in making out planting plans and for the actual planting of all specimens of native trees and shrubs that can be obtained.

Wouldn't this county be so much more attractive if all home owners would clean up around their homes and set out a few shrubs and flowers? Contrary to the opinion of many, it isn't so costly to purchase the specimens.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT

Annual Report of District Health Department No. 3

The District Health Department No. 3, conducting public health work in the counties of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego, completed its eighth year in this area. During this past year our department was greatly hindered by the withdrawal by the state health department of our two nurses, one clerk, and our resort inspector during the summer months, our nurses having been stationed in East Jordan and the other in Petoskey. The East Jordan nurse worked in six townships of Antrim county and three in Charlevoix county. However, the state health department restored the nursing service in the Petoskey area in September 1938.

Despite the loss of this personel, a great deal of health service was accomplished throughout the four counties. In Charlevoix county, the following nursing services were rendered by Miss Lawrence in 1938:

Total diphtheria immunizations	102
Total vaccinations given	253
Tuberculosis home visits	229
Prenatal home visits	210
Postnatal home visits	121
Infant medical examinations	51
Infant home visits	507
Preschool medical examinations	210
Preschool home visits	758
School medical examinations	861
Parents present at school examinations	242
School home visits	312
Total communicable disease visits	485
Total all home visits	2701

Our dental program was greatly aided this past year by the aid of WPA assistance which enabled the dentist to perform more operative work, and the clerical work was then carried on by the clerical assistants. The following dental service was rendered by Drs. Nelson and Laubach in Charlevoix county during 1938:

Prophylactic treatments	44
Cases completed	24
Clinic visits	811
Total extractions	398
First and subsequent examinations	1437
Fillings	1187

This section of the state is defialtely known as the resort area of Michigan and more and more work is being placed in the hands of the sanitarian in order to keep abreast of the camps that are being erected every year. Because of the vast amount of work to be done during the summer season, it is impossible for one sanitarian to carry on the work alone. In 1937 we were fortunate in securing the aid of an additional state sanitary inspector. However, in 1938 Dr. A. R. Renwick, sanitarian of District Health Unit No. 3, was obliged to carry on alone. Nevertheless, at least one inspection call was made on all resort and camp owners, and in some cases two calls were made. The following represents the total inspection work conducted by our sanitarian throughout the four counties for the year 1938:

Sanitary inspections, including schools and resorts	1721
Dairy inspections	802
Milk plate counts taken	508
Sediment tests taken	457

All of this work would have been impossible to carry on had it not been for the constant cooperation and affiliation with different organizations and groups throughout this district. Especially do we appreciate the efforts and assistance given us by the county judges of probate, county school commissioners, county supervisors, Red Cross, men's and women's clubs, county agents, county welfare associations, school teachers and superintendents, physicians and dentists. Each in their own way have helped to contribute to the accomplishment of this department.

1940 License Plates to be Black on Silver

License plates for the year 1940 will be black numerals on a silver aluminum background. The silver aluminum paint used, will bondarize the metal of the plate and the plate will not be subject to chipping as with the enamel now used, making the new license plates more durable; also this color background will tend to eliminate reflections and minimize glare.

New Motor Vehicle Director Named

Lee C. Richardson, a former Lansing resident has been named by Harry F. Kelly, secretary of state, to be motor vehicle director, succeeding Frank W. Carney, who has served for the past two years in this capacity. Mr. Richardson, a former member of the editorial staff of the Lansing State Journal, was in charge of the Detroit area of the Department of State under Orville E. Atwood, for several years. Mr. Richardson has been secretary of the Detroit Real Estate board and for the past two months has been acting deputy secretary of state in the absence of James G. Frey, deputy secretary of state, who is convalescing in a Battle Creek hospital.

Mr. Richardson brings with him to this position a thorough knowledge of his work, gained through close association with the department for a number of years.

Motorists Warned of Junk Car Racket

Motorists who junk their cars, either by design or as the consequence of an accident, may unwittingly be aiding car thieves, Harry F. Kelly, secretary of state, points out.

The possibility of motorists being an involuntary party to auto theft rings, exists more often in the case of new or nearly new cars that have been wrecked. If car thieves can acquire a fairly new model car, wrecked and about to be junked, and acquire its title as well, their path is not difficult. It is necessary then only to obtain a car of like make and design, make alterations such as exchanging motors, to have a car and title, to which no one could challenge Kelly advises.

Motorists can protect themselves against such a possibility if they will note that the only instance in which a title does not "follow the car" is when the car is to be junked.

The motor vehicle law provides that a motorist disposing of his car to a junk dealer, must assign the title of the car to the junk dealer, but not deliver it to the junk dealer. Rather, the title must be sent to the secretary of state, together with an application for a certificate to junk which can be secured from liconsed car junkers. A junking permit is then sent to the dealer by the secretary of state.

Reports from police departments and department investigators have definitely shown that car theft operations have been carried on. Wrecked cars may be "snatched" in any part of the state. In every instance, such operations would be impossible if junked car titles had been sent to Lansing in accordance with the law.

Everyhody concerned, please remember that on Sunday, the 23rd of April, Rev. G. A. Weaver, missionary, will reorganize Sunday school at the Turner school house at 2:00 p. m. Everybody invited. He will be at Creswell at 10:30 a. m., same Sunay, but Creswell will reorganize next Sunday, at 10:30 a. m. All come.

The big Connie Klooster sale at Atwood was billed for this week Wednesday, when he goes out of the farming business. Have not heard who will work the farm this summer. Postmas on the Fales farm, east side of the lake, are having their sale this week Wednesday. Wm. Byers, veteran auctioneer, is one of the salesmen.

The writer witnessed Friday one of the most beautiful wedding services. Miss Phyllis Swanson of the Bay View neighborhood, and lately of Ann Arbor, was united to Chas. Neal of Ann Arbor, in marriage at the Bellaire Holiness church. Rev. Ellsworth Swanson, pastor of the Ellsworth Holiness church, performed the wedding ceremony. Mrs. Lester Nelson sang. The church was pleasantly decorated. Congratulations, and best wishes.

Rev. G. A. Weaver, missionary from Petoskey, was down and visited Jordan River and Green River Sunday schools last Sunday, and also called on Joseph Burkholder, who is holding his own splendidly this winter. Mr. Weaver's talks at the schools were along the Easter line of Christ's birth, and he brought out the fact that the world would be much better if it had the love for its fellow men, as Christ did when he said, "Forgive them Lord, for they know not what they do." He has been a great help to his father, who has been ill for several years.

Sunrise Easter services at the Alden M. E. church will be one never to be forgotten by those participating. The church was nearly filled. It was some task for the Atwood Reformed church's thirty young people and their pastor and wife, Rev. and Mrs. Meengs, to get out so early in the morning, drive 25 miles, and attend a service of this kind at 7 o'clock in the morning, but they were equal to the occasion, and the program was carried out without a mistake. At a signal from the pianist, Mrs. Meengs, the choir of 30 voices arose, marched to the platform and rendered some very fine music. Mrs. James Vandenberg, former pupil of the writer, and her son Lester, sang a duet. Rev. Dorr Garret offered prayer. Rev. Helrigle, district superintendent, gave an interesting sermon, and Rev. Meengs closed with prayer. Then the Atwood young people had to rush back to North Holland church to begin services at 10 o'clock. The Atwood young people and pastor sang to a crowded house at Bellaire Thursday evening also. Ole Anderson, member of the church board at Williamsburg, was present, and brought over two of his young people. Rev. Garret and Rev. Meengs are two of our most spiritual leaders of the young people of Antrim county, and deserve much praise for the Christian work they are doing.

Forty-seven yuung people, according to our count, were present at Bellaire Friday to take part in the Antrim county spelling contest. It made a fine array of young people when this crowd stood in a semi-circle in front of the judge's desk. No such crowd has assembled there since Lyle Talsey was commissioner of schools. We remember we had most of our Grand View school of 64 pupils there at that time, and they took part in the singing of two songs from our school. One was a song in spelling, in which a pupil pronounced Egypt "egg-wiped." A queer coincidence was that Prof Jeffry told the same joke Friday. Mr. Jeffry, as referee, was satisfactory, apparently, to all concerned, and his decisions not questioned. Miss Delia Emury, the winner, pronounced her words before she spelled them, in the good old-fashioned way, as did Jennie Chanda, 8-year-old third grader. Both girls spelled their words in a loud enough voice so all could hear. Jennie held her own up to the time that half the contestants had been spelled down, which was wonderful work for a girl of that age, and showed effects of the good training that her teacher had given her. Many parents were there, and we noticed Mrs. Deevy of the register of deeds office, and the county clerk, Mrs. Mohrman, came in for awhile to witness the contest. Many pupils whose parents had been pupils of the writer were there, among whom were Beulah Hooper of Eastport, Elsa Batterbee (whose father has been director of ours), Eula Bradly (sister of a pupil of ours) and Miss Morris of Rockery, Gloria Barnes (her father a pupil of ours, and grandfather a director).

to turn "thumbs down" on the reams of free publicity they receive weekly extolling the attractions of these fairs which are bound, to some extent, to steal away the summer tourist business that means bread and butter to us. Show me New York or California papers telling what a wonderful resort state Michigan is, and I'll take back what I said.

A year ago, the ice cleared from Lake Charlevoix on March 30th, setting a 20-year record. The earliest opening prior to that time had been April 4th in 1925. Navigation between Charlevoix and Beaver Island had been under way for a week or more. Under existing conditions, this year will fall way short of any records. Lake Charlevoix is still a solid field of ice and Lake Michigan ice floes, while believed not to be particularly heavy, clog the north end of the lake.

Kansas dust storms would be nothing new to those of our citizens residing on Park avenue, Clinton and Mason streets. They have one in miniature proportions every day it happens to be dry. The new surface placed on these three streets scatters thither and yon every time a car passes, covers the porches and windows, seeps into the house and is tracked everywhere by the youngsters. It's a tolerant age we live in, I guess—or is it?

Someone ought to tell the Weather Man it is spring. Here it is the 12th of April, the ground is covered and the woods and swamps are full of snow.

Smelt dipping is under way in smaller streams emptying into Lake Charlevoix. Loeb creek is the nearest for Charlevoix sportsmen and a crowd of dippers is out there nightly. Without meaning to discredit those cities who promote annual smelt celebrations with the accompanying fanfare and thousands of visitors, will bet a plugged nickel that when it comes to actually getting smelt—coming home with fish in the basket—these smaller streams beat the Jordan and Boyne rivers. And I still maintain Charlevoix is losing a good bet by not promoting a perch festival. What I mean is that perch are real fish, can be taken in the daytime under ideal conditions and that the spring "run" is more certain of repeating as it has done for an untold number of years than most of us are of waking up tomorrow morning.

AT THE MOVIES

Slambang comedy and rollicking romance will be the order of the day when 20th Century-Fox's "Wife, Husband and Friend," which co-stars Loretta Young and Warner Baxter, comes rolling into the Palace Theatre on Saturday, April 15.

Reported to be a delirious romance filled with unrestrained gayety and sparkling wit, the new film finds the lovely Loretta Young teamed with Warner Baxter for the second time by Darryl F. Zanuck, production chief of 20th Century-Fox. They last appeared together in "Wife, Doctor and Nurse," one of last season's outstanding comedy hits. It was in response to thousands of letters received by the studio that Mr. Zanuck decided that only an encore would satisfy the fans.

The supporting cast of "Wife, Husband and Friend" features Binnie Barnes, Cesar Romero, George Barbier, J. Edward Bromberg, Eugene Pallette and Helen Westley.

The first "Hopalong Cassidy" outdoor action picture ever to be inspired by a popular song is "Silver on the Sage," which Paramount will present to local fans next Wednesday, April 20, at the Palace Theatre. Taking its tag from the well-liked number featured in "The Texans," a song which really captured the true spirit of the Old West, "Silver on the Sage" brings back the familiar threesome, William Boyd, George Hayes and Russell Hayden in a punch-packed yarn from the pen of Clarence E. Mulford.

Laugh Hit Coming

Starting off with the premise that a girl must live and, if possible, live very well, "Pardon Our Nerve," 20th Century-Fox production which comes Wednesday, April 20 to the Palace Theatre, is reported to be one of the laughing-est films to come along this season.

The cast is headed by Lynn Bari, June Gale, Guinn Williams, Michael Whalen and Edward Brophy, and H. Bruce Humberstone directed the film from a screen play by Robert Ellis and Helen Logan.

The Literary and Sewing Club will hold a cafeteria and chop-suey supper at the Methodist church April 13. —15t1.

The camp will entertain their guests from 2 to 6 p. m. with guides prepared to conduct visitors about the buildings and on trips to the projects.

The stimulation to business and the welfare of the region through increased tourist trade, has aroused a keen interest in this work and business leaders are seeking first hand information on the progress of the work of the Civilian Conservation Corps. The men of Pigeon River camp have spent a long, hard winter in the woods and are looking forward with pleasure to meeting their many friends.

ANNOUNCE SOIL CONSERVING LOAN PLANS

FSA Supervisor at Boyne City Reveals Application Rules

Farmers unable to participate in the 1939 AAA soil conservation program because of lack of funds for material to carry out soil building practices, may now secure farm security administration loans for this purpose through the local AAA committee, Supervisor Pemberton of Boyne City announced today.

According to the county supervisor the entire amount of the loan must be used for alfalfa or clover seed, lime, fertilizer or other supplies which will be needed in carrying out approved soil building practices. The amount loaned will not exceed sixty per cent of the approximate AAA payment and will be secured by an assignment of that payment, he added.

In order to be eligible for these FSA loans, an applicant must be recommended by the AAA county committee and unable to secure the necessary credit elsewhere, Mr. Pemberton stated.

This is in line with the FSA's policy of making loans only to farmers unable to secure credit from any other source. The borrower who can get the financing which he needs from his bank or any private institution, is not eligible for FSA loans, the supervisor said.

All applications for loans must be made at the Charlevoix county AAA office in Boyne City.

According to the eligibility requirements outlined by Mr. Pemberton, loans to cooperate in the AAA program will be made only to farmers who meet he following qualifications: (1) farmers who without such a loan would be unable to participate in the program because inability to finance purchase of the materials necessary in order to carry out soil-building practices; (2) farmers whom the county AAA committee recommend from the standpoint of character and integrity; (3) farmers who agree to use the full amount of the loan for the purchase of materials to be used in carrying out approved soil-building practices; (4) farmers who have not executed and agree not to execute an assignment of their payment other than to the farm security administration.

CHICKEN COOPS NEED OIL TO LICK MITES

Old-Time White Wash Method Ineffective in Killing Pests

Oldtime whitewash of Tom Sawyer's day has little place in effective control of mites and lice in modern poultry coops. An oil spray application inside is more effective if less attractive.

Those who seek appearance can apply paint to coop exteriors, advises C. B. Dibble, Michigan State college extension specialist in insect control. Interiors should be sprayed this spring with a half and half mixture of crankcase oil and kerosene for controlling mites. A thorough coop cleaning should precede the application.

Another operation takes care of the lice. Dibble recommends treating the perches with nicotine sulphate, also known as black leaf 40.

One ounce of this is considered sufficient for 30 to 40 feet of perch. The liquid should be dropped on and spread in a thin line. If a brush is used the material usually only treats 6 to 8 feet of perch.

This application for lice is to be made just before the birds climb onto the roosts in the evening. A second application 14 days later is recommended to control any lice that hatch after the first nicotine sulphate is applied.

RECORD HERRING HAULS MADE AT GRAND HAVEN

Year's Biggest Catch of Blueback Herring Was Three Tons

Record catches of bluebacked herring have been made at Grand Haven by commercial fishermen despite the handicap of nearly continuous high wind.

The year's biggest catch was reported by Capt. Bill Verduin fishing the "C. J. Bos," one of the larger tugs. He came in with a haul of 6,000 pounds of herring. Daily hauls have been averaging from 2,500 to 4,000 pounds. Price has been forced down by the big catches.

THREE-HEADED TROUT HAS TROUBLE MAKING UP MIND

Among hundreds of thousands of baby trout now reaching maturity at state fish hatcheries was one, recently pickled for posterity, which hatchery employes think died because it couldn't make up its minds. It had three heads.

Another of the little trout was born with a head at both ends which also probably resulted in considerable confusion when the trout tried to make up its minds as to which direction it would take. Another came equipped with two tails, less of a handicap than an over abundance of heads.

April 23rd

After the events of Passion and Holy weeks with the resurrection as the crowning act we turn again to the practical results. If the crowning event of our Lord's passion and death does not issue in righteousness that exceeds the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, Christ's sacrifice was for naught.

Sunday morning we use for our subject the much-discussed and misunderstood obligation of all Christians, sanctification.

Last Sunday evening we looked on both sides of the fence to our profit. So intent did we look that we decided to look further next Sunday night. To those who would like to look behind the scenes and get a closer view of Christianity, we suggest that you attend.

PERCH FESTIVAL PLANS UNDER WAY

FIRST ANNUAL EVENT TO BE MAY 13 TO 21ST

Board of Commerce and Veterans of Foreign Wars Sponsoring Entertainment Program

Joining other west Michigan communities in providing early-season entertainment for tourists and sportsmen, Charlevoix this year will step into the field with a Perch Festival.

Sponsored by the Board of Commerce and Veterans of Foreign Wars, the event is scheduled for May 13 to 21, inclusive, and will mark the first effort of this community to publicize for the benefit of Michigan and out-state sportsmen a spring perch spawning run which has proven as certain over a long period of years as the change of seasons. In the past Charlevoixans and those few down-state sportsmen who were aware of this annual run of yellow-bellied perch from Lake Michigan into Round lake and Lake Charlevoix have had the sport pretty much to themselves. The festival is aimed to publicize the event for everyone.

It is the plan of the committees in charge to offer first, second and third prizes for the largest perch and catch of greatest weight. These prizes will be awarded at a festival ball to be held Saturday evening, May 20th, at a place to be designated. An effort will be made to provide reduced rates on rooms and meals during festival week and also to insure an ample supply of perch for the tables of restaurants, hotels and other places catering to visitors.

The event will be advertised in Michigan metropolitan newspapers and to thousands of individuals by direct mail from the board of commerce and operators of Charlevoix trolling camps, hotels, etc.

Perch fishing here is more or less unique from other communities due to the fact Great Lakes regulations providing a daily limit of 50 fish of 7 inches in length apply without seasonal restrictions. Unadvertised, the perch run has in past years attracted hundreds of sportsmen who have been rewarded with consistently good catches. The festival atmosphere is expected to make the event one of Charlevoix's principle annual attractions in the future.

Committees are proceeding at once with plans for entertainment and to provide ample fishing facilities during the festival week.

CROSS FISH TUG OPENED NAVIGATION HERE MON.

Arrival of Jackie C. from Northport First of 1939 Season

Arrival here Monday of Capt. John Cross' fish tug Jackie C. from Northport marked the 1939 spring opening of navigation into Charlevoix harbor. It was the first boat to enter port in nearly two months.

Fishermen who had not moved their operations to lower lake ports during the winter set nets for the first time and are now anxiously scanning the movements of ice floes which might be brought in by unfavorable winds to block the harbor again.

Heavy easterly winds of Sunday and Monday completely cleared ice out of the bay in Lake Michigan off the pier heads, shoving it out into open water.

Operation of the mail boat Mary Margaret between Charlevoix and Beaver Island will not begin until after the boat is taken to Manitowoc shipyards for spring overhaul, it is understood. The boat will be taken to Manitowoc as soon as conditions permit.

SPORTSMEN SKAN TROUT PROSPECTS

LATE SPRING THROWS DOUBT UPON OPENING

Season This Year Begins April 29 and Closes September 4—Outlook Not Too Good

The annual guessing contest on what kind of an opening the trout season is going to have is underway in earnest among that anxious group of sportsmen who have been counting the days until April 29 since the first of the year. Boiled down to its final analysis they all seem to agree that "it all depends on the weather."

But even that much of agreement doesn't seem to mean very much for there are those who will point to the fact that nature seems to be rushing the season in the southern part of the state, so much so in fact that the twin cities of Benton Harbor and St. Joseph moved the observance of their Blossom Festival ahead a full week, to start on April 30.

Some of the others will remind you that weather conditions were so backward recently in the northern part of the state that it put the smelt runs at least a week behind the date anticipated.

The boys that follow the fish calendar will point out to you that the calendar shows good fishing for the opening week-end, and the boys that put little faith in long distance prognostications scoff "so-what."

SUPERVISORS ADJOURN WEDNESDAY

71ST ANNUAL SPRING SESSION OCCUPIED TWO DAYS

Chairman Named, Committees Appointed and Other Routine Business of Meeting Completed

Following organization and transaction of routine business, the 71st annual spring session of the Charlevoix county board of supervisors adjourned last Wednesday afternoon.

Re-election of Barney Milstein, East Jordan, as board chairman and appointment of committees for the 1939-40 year was announced last week.

Through motion adopted, the board voted to exempt the property of soldiers and sailors or their widows from county tax for 1939.

A finance committee artion providing the county school commissioner furnish his own automobile and be allowed $250 a year for maintenance and operating expenses was adopted. In the past the county furnished the automobile for the school commissioner.

Claims aggregating $37.50 for damage to sheep and poultry were allowed. Claims totaling $60.45 were rejected.

Following discussion of plans for entertainment of the Michigan County Clerks' association at its annual convention scheduled here July 18, 19 and 20, members of the board's advertising committee were named to work with County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow.

A ways and means committee resolution concuring with action of the Cass county board of supervisors to establish the length of residence in the state for a period of one year without receiving relief assistance, was adopted.

The advertising committee, which is conducting the county's efforts in resort promotional work, has placed order for another attractive folder depicting the recreational facilities of Charlevoix county.

A tentative budget aggregating $80,425 for the 1939-40 fiscal year was adopted. The budget figure a year ago was $83,850.

ENGINEER INSPECTS UPPER CHANNEL PIER

Insecure Foundation Caused Damage Along Belvedere Club Grounds

Repair at an early date this summer of the south revetment of the channel between Round lake and Lake Charlevoix will result from a visit here Tuesday of Gilbert L. Jents of the U. S. Engineering Department, Grand Haven.

It is understood that a large portion of the concrete revetment is in danger of collapse due to faulty foundation. Filling behind the pier had drifted badly, it was revealed by investigation conducted by Mr. Jents, whose visit was at the request of the Board of Commerce.

DICKENS CLUB BANQUET FINE AFFAIR

CLOSED CLUB YEAR LAST WEDNESDAY EVENING

Members Entertained Husbands and Guests at Annual Function at Home of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Lewis

On Wednesday evening, April 12, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rollie L. Lewis on Park avenue was the scene of the annual Charles Dickens club banquet, held by members in honor of their husbands and guests.

Guests were seated at small tables decorated in the club colors, Chinese blue and yellow and at each place were found hand-made place cards and nut cups. Clever conundrums were at each table for the guests to solve.

During the dinner an orchestra composed of Martha Craig, Rosann Partridge, Marjorie Wood and Robert Craig furnished selections appropriate for spring and at the end of the first course Mrs. A. L. Livingston sang "Daffodils" by German, and passed among the tables distributing daffodils to the ladies as favors.

Following the banquet, Mrs. Arthur Ranger, chairman of the program committee, introduced Miss Minnie Payton, the retiring president, who gave a greeting and presented a summary of the work covered during the past year. Miss Payton called for a report from Mrs. Clair Webster, who had been absent from club for two months, and her answer was cleverly given in verse. A telegram was received from Mr. and Mrs. Clinton G. Cooper, who were out of town.

A one-act play, given by Mesdames R. F. Sloan, A. L. Livingston, Harry Ladd, Joe Dissette, Charles Emrey, A. L. Fochtman, W. S. Mower and Arthur Ranger caused a great deal of merriment. Following the play movies taken of the club members at a recent meeting by Mrs. H. W. Ladd were shown. The banquet closed a happily completed club year.

Officers for the coming year are: President, Mrs. H. W. Ladd; vice-president, Mrs. Clinton G. Cooper; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Arthur Ranger; librarian, Mrs. W. S. Mower.

BOY SCOUT SUMMER CAMP BEING PLANNED

Charlevoix Scouts Will Be Given Opportunity to Attend

Plans for a northern Michigan Boy Scout summer camp are being pushed by the newly formed Northwestern Michigan Area Council of Boy Scouts of America and formal announcement of the time and place for the camp is expected shortly.

Charlevoix boy scouts will have an opportunity to attend and also will have an opportunity to earn their own way. The officers of the new council are anxious that each boy earn the money for his camp trip and to further this plan are offering scout camp stamp books.

Scouts may purchase camp stamps at 10 cents each as he has the money to spend. These stamps are pasted in the scout camp saving book and each book is valued at $8 when filled. This will be accepted at face value toward camp fees and other camp exposes.

A supply of these books has been placed in the hands of the Scoutmasters throughout the area and the stamps will be on sale in Charlevoix.

MSC SCHOLARSHIP TO ROBERT STRAW

RECOGNIZED FOR 4-H CLUB FARM MAPPING WORK

Seven Other County Club Members Honored With Places on State Honor Roll

In recognition for attainment in 4-H Club work, Bobby Straw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Straw of Marion township, has been given a scholarship award to a four-year course at Michigan State college by the state board of agriculture.

The awards are made to members whose achievement has been outstanding over a period of years and provides substantial aid toward tuition expense of an agricultural course. Bobby's recognition came as a result of his work on a farm mapping project. He had been previously recognized for ability and rewarded with trips to Detroit and representation in national 4-H Club competition. He has not only been prominent in club work, but also as a leader.

In addition to Straw's recognition, seven other county 4-H Club members received state-wide honor by being placed on the honor roll.

Those receiving such honor were: Dolores Burnett of Bay Shore, 2nd year clothing; Glen Trojanek of East Jordan, electrical; Raynor Olstrum of East Jordan, junior potatoes; A. G. Reich of East Jordan, forest fire study; Marjorie McDonald of East Jordan, 5th year canning; Marian Burnett of Bay Shore, 6th year canning; Eleanor Howe of Charlevoix, 3rd year food preparation.

In view of the fact only a few receive scholarships in the state, Straw's accomplishment in particular is very worthy and reflects credit upon his activities.

BASEBALL, TRACK PRACTICE OPENED

FIRST BASEBALL GAME APRIL 28 AT HARBOR

Class C Conference Track Meet Here May 13—Practice for Dual Meet May 5th at East Jordan

Charlevoix high school's spring athletic activity opens Friday, April 28th, with the first competitive event, a baseball game with Harbor Springs at Harbor.

The contest will open an 8-game schedule which includes two games each with Harbor Springs, Petoskey, Boyne City and East Jordan.

While Charlevoix was the class C conference runner-up last year, losing in the championship play-off to Grayling, prospects for the present season are not viewed with much optimism. In addition to losing almost the entire 1938 team by graduation, weather conditions held up practice until the initial session Tuesday afternoon of this week, leaving little time for preparation.

Listed among experienced candidates for the team are Lewis Brown, Max Smith, Elmer Crain and Bruce Henley. Among others seeking positions are Harry Withers, Kenneth Wilson, Ernest Nowland and Don Stevens. All are new men. Henley had had some pitching experience. Brown played last year at first base and Smith and Crain were fielders. Coach Kipke would give no indication of a starting line-up.

Trackmen also put in their first session of outdoor practice under the tutelege of Coach Stewart Coleman Tuesday afternoon. The first meet scheduled is an invitational affair May 5th at East Jordan between Charlevoix, East Jordan and Boyne City. The conference track meet will be held here May 13th, the regional is at Cadillac on May 20 and the state meet at Lansing on May 26. Charlevoix last year won the conference, regional and placed second in the state in class C. They also copped first honors at the East Jordan invitational and defeated Mancelona in a dual meet.

Only a small group are available this season from last year's championship team. They include Bob Goss in the broad jump, high jump and hurdles; George Light in the dashes; James Martin in the mile; Ernest Nowland and Bert Pearl in the shot put; Don Tillotson in the quarter-mile and Harry Withers in the pole vault. A sizeable group is out for practice and another week, favorable weather permitting, should bring considerable development.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By Ken Usher

Lighthouse men who spend the winter in Charlevoix were at their stations a year ago this time. Unless there is a radical change in weather conditions, it appears they will not report for duty for some time yet.

The Board of Commerce has issued and now has in distribution a fine resort folder extolling this city's attractions as a summer resort. The advertising committee of the board of supervisors is sponsoring a similar folder, only covering the entire county, with illustrative views and a very comprehensive and detailed county map. These endeavors are indeed creditable efforts to increase our tourist trade.

It is gratifying to observe that the house conservation committee has agreed to recommend passage in the legislature of a bill giving the conservation committee limited authority to declare an open season on antlerless deer. The bill would retain the present open season on bucks from November 15-30 and would permit the conservation department to declare open seasons on antlerless deer are starving due to over-population.

Such a piece of legislation would place this particular problem of game management in the hands of the conservation department where it belongs. A majority of unbiased sportsmen have confidence in the department's ability to handle the matter.

And while on this topic I can't pass up defending myself from the thrusts last week of Editor Al Weber of the Cheboygan Observer, who dubbed me the "architect" of the Courier's "Shot at Random" column, intimated I was a meat hunter and cast reflections upon my appreciation of what private hunting clubs have accomplished in restoring deer to northern Michigan.

While I will always admire a person who is consistent and fights for

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

In this day of double-header movie attractions, Michigan's capital city is being enthralled by two sensational thrillers.

First—"The Mystery of Frank McKay, or Why Did He Get $92,060 for the Blue Water Bridge?"

Second — "The Enigma of State Buying, or Why Were State Orders Cancelled for Higher Prices?"

With investigations under way by order of Governor Luren D. Dickinson, the two thrillers promise to become serials. Capital citizens, accustomed to official probes, are wondering what the final chapters will be like. At any rate, the suspense here is breath-taking.

The McKay sensation involves two state administrations — Fitzgerald's term in 1935 and 1936 when the financing was arranged and Murphy's term in 1937 and 1938 when the structure was built.

The bridge project was fathered by a special state commission and financed by a $2,300,000 bond issue

MAY FIRST IS LAST DAY TO SIGN ON AAA

Charlevoix County Farmers Urged to Express Their Intentions

Charlevoix county farmers have until May 1 to express their intentions to participate in the 1939 AAA program by completing and signing their individual farm plans, Charles Shepard, chairman of the Charlevoix County Agricultural Conservation association, announced this week.

"Farmers cannot request inspection for determining performance and obtaining payments in this year's farm program unless they sign farm plans by May 1," Mr. Shepard said.

Through April 3, 1939, community committeemen had called on 1,000 farmers in the county, and of these 900 or 85 per cent, had signed their farm plans, indicating that they intend to participate in the 1939 farm program. Last year, approximately 911 Charlevoix county farmers cooperated with the conservation program.

Mr. Shepard urges all farmers who plan to participate in the 1939 farm program to see their local AAA committeemen and complete their farm plans as soon as possible. No farm inspection for the purpose of determining performance and payments will be made on farms for which farm plans are not executed by May 1, 1939. It will be impossible to obtain payment on farms for which no performance has been requested by the first of May.

YOUR MICHIGAN—AND MINE
True Stories of Human Interest
(Michigan Press Association)

Accommodating Firemen

River Rouge—Local firemen don't mind putting out another city's fires, when they only have to go across the street to do it. When there was a roof fire at the C. E. Mat residence in Ecorse, someone went across the boundary line and pulled a River Rouge alarm box. Part of the street on which Mat lives is in Ecorse, and part in River Rouge.

Copious License

Harrison—Charles Butts has no sympathy with modern nimrods who complain about deer licenses being too bulky. He has one issued in 1895. Printed on manilla cardboard, it is six inches wide and 18 inches long. Attached to this are five coupons, to be used in shipping deer to any point in Michigan.

Pulls, Replants Teeth

Allegan—Replanting teeth is an accomplished feat of Dr. C. W. Messinger, Houghton, a former Allegan resident. He pulls them, cleans them, and after making necessary repairs, replants the teeth in the patient's jaw, where they become as good as ever. His process has been worked on abscessed teeth, with 65 cases being reported successful.

"Cop" Scares Council

Iron River—Six Stambaugh city commissioners received a sudden scare during one of their evening meetings when the police chief was called out to investigate a report that someone was flashing lights around the commissioners' parked cars. While they hurriedly searched their pockets for their keys, the chief returned to report, "There's nothing to it; some youngster thinks he's a cop and is protecting the cars."

Following Popeye

Mt. Morris—The Genesee Herald bowling team has adopted Popeye's recipe for strength, and it has brought results. Going on a spinach diet before a big match with another local team, the newsmen took the first game by a 10-point lead, the second by a 160-point lead, and the third by a 214-point lead. The bowlers are well convinced that there is nothing like spinach for real "muskle."

Down the Wrong Way

Eaton Rapids — Little Beverly Anne Zentmyer swallowed a nut meat while eating candy. A short time later she was rushed to a hospital where she underwent an operation. Instead of sliding down her throat like all food should, the nut meat lodged in the little girl's lung. The operation to remove it was successful.

Elusive Porker

Mt. Pleasant—When State Trooper Horvath saw a pig dashing in front of cars and being chased by children and pedestrians in Clare, he stopped to give aid. The pig, however, had little respect for law, and attempts to catch him turned into a game of tag. Finally the pig gave up, not to the officer, but to a garage employee. As there are no facilities for keeping pigs at the State Police post, the problem of disposing of it was bothersome for a while, but was finally solved.

Phil, speechless with understanding, watched her for a moment; then turned, and went towards the kitchen, and Addie's room that led off from it. "Addie!" he called, knocking on the door. Eventually, Addie's sleepy voice responded, and the door was opened.

"Addie," Phil said in a low voice, "Miss Loring's had bad news. Her father's passed away."

"Oh, my God!" the woman exclaimed. "My poor baby! I'll be there right away, Mr. Phil—soon as I get on my robe and slippers."

"Stay with her while I do some telephoning," Phil whispered.

A second later, she joined Mary, and, all thought of caste and color thrown aside, had her arms about the girl. "Poor lambie!" she was crooning. "Poor little lambie. Had your Daddy been sick, honey? Did you know he was ailin'? What did your sister say it was that took him?"

Mary's hand fell to the woman's shoulder in a convulsive grip. "He was terribly worried, Addie. Terribly unhappy. He had been for several months—and Ellen didn't say what . . . Oh, Addie, could my father have committed—suicide?"

"Hush, honey! Hush! Don't say such a thing! No, he couldn't have done that. He . . ."

"I must get there as quickly as possible," Mary went on as if in a daze, "and, Addie, I don't know what it'll cost. Maybe I haven't enough money . . ."

"Don't you worry 'bout that, honey. I have plenty money in the bank—and everything I got is yours."

"Oh, Addie, you're so good. I'll pay you back soon. I'll sell my novel some day. But, Addie, right now, I've only about thirty dollars . . ."

"Don't worry, baby. Addie'll take charge of things. Hush, honey—here comes Mr. Phil."

Phil Buchanan came into the living room. "There's a New York Central train leaving at ten forty-five in the morning," he announced. "It reaches Chicago at seven-ten the following morning. It's the first one out, Mary, and I'm afraid that's the best you can do, unless, of course, you want to go by plane."

"Oh, no!" Mary returned, thinking of the extra expense which flying would involve. "I can't fly. That morning train'll have to do. I can catch the eight-thirty train for Hawkinsville the following morning, and reach home about one."

"Then, I'll call for you at ten, Mary," Phil said. "Try to get some sleep, my dear. You'd better give her some brandy, Addie, or hot milk—or something."

"I'll take care of her, Mr. Phil," Addie replied proudly. "Don't you worry. I'm goin' to get her to bed right now."

"Then I'll be running along," Phil said, and, coming to where Mary sat, he stooped and kissed her gently on the mouth. "Good-night, my dear," he said tenderly. "Try to get some rest."

For one mad instant, Mary wished she might put her arms about this big kind man, and tell him not to go, not to leave her—that she needed, and needed terribly, his comforting presence. But he was making for the door now, and saying to Addie in the tone a father uses when entrusting his child to another's care, "Watch out for her, Addie, and call me immediately if she wants me."

Addie left Aunt Linnie's apartment an hour ahead of Phil Buchanan's arrival the following morning. She needed time to stop at the bank, draw out some money for Mary, get to the station and pay for the ticket before Phil and Mary should reach there. This she had accomplished, and, by Mary's arrangement, was waiting for them at the information desk when they reached the concourse.

Phil looked troubled. "I wanted to get your tickets, Mary," he said.

"I couldn't let you do that," Mary returned proudly, wondering what he would think if he knew Addie was financing her trip.

He glanced at the reservation to see the number of the car that she was to be in. "Mary," he began, "you have a lower berth. Don't you want a compartment, dear? It'd be so much more private. Won't you let me give you this little—comfort, at least?"

"No," Mary replied dully. "A lower's all right. I don't mind."

"But . . ."

"Please, Phil. I couldn't let you . . ."

"All right," he agreed tersely. "Come along, then."

But once in the Pullman, he began again, "I wish you'd let me get a compartment for you, and I wish someone were making the journey with you. If you won't let me go along, Mary, what about Addie?" His worried eyes sought the Mulatto's face.

"No!" Mary said shortly. "No, Phil. I really want to be alone. There are so many things to think about. Phil, I received a letter from Anthony Porter in this morning's mail. The first magazine to which he submitted "Storm on the Mountain" has offered five thousand dollars for the first American serial rights."

"Mary! That's great! That's wonderful! I knew . . ."

"But it's come—too late," Mary returned, her voice almost inaudible.

"Too late!" Phil repeated, bewildered.

"Yes, I'm afraid—it's come—too late."

"But I don't understand," he returned. "What . . .?"

"All aboard!" shouted the conductor. "All aboard!"

"You must be getting off," Mary warned. "Good-by, Addie, and thank you—for everything."

She rose from her seat, and throwing her arms about the woman, gave her an affectionate, fleeting embrace. Then, turning to Phil Buchanan, she held out a black-gloved hand. "Good-by, Phil. You've been so good, so very good."

The house on Concert street was in darkness when she arrived the following afternoon. Mr. Anderson, next door neighbor of the Lorings for the past ten years, had met her at the station and brought her home. The window shades were drawn to the sill, and the heavy fragrance of lilies and roses assailed her as she stepped into the dim, cool hall—and her mother's arms. The women, benumbed by their mutual tragedy, greeted each other wordlessly, embraced, drew apart, then impulsively embraced again.

Ellen, a new maturity in her bearing, came softly down the bare steps, and, with a convulsive sob, kissed Mary first on one cheek and then the other. "Oh, Mary," she breathed, "thank God you've come! Our father—Mary—our father . . ."

Mary held her sister tightly in her arms, unable to speak, yet struggling inwardly to force the question to her lips. She must know at once how her father died.

If only Ellen wouldn't cry like that! The girl's body, racked by choking sobs, was shaking hysterically.

"Darling! Ellen!" she cried. "Dearest . . ." Then, "Oh, Ellen! What was it? How did Dad die?"

Why didn't she answer? Why didn't . . .

"It was a terrible accident, Mary," her mother broke in gently. "Dad was working on the car in the garage, and the motor was running . . ."

Mary felt a shudder pass through her. With the motor running? Oh, no! He wouldn't have . . . Why, one of the first things he told her when she was learning to drive was never, never to do that! And yet she fought the thought—the painful realization. Her heart refused to believe what her mind told her was the truth.

"Where—is—he?" she asked.

"In the living room, dear," Mrs. Loring answered gently. "Do you want to see him now?"

Mary, pleading for understanding, looked into her mother's eyes. "Yes, Mother," she said. "May I go in—alone?"

Mrs. Loring nodded compassionately. "Of course, darling. We have all wanted to do that."

For one appalled moment she stood there gazing at her father's dear face.

She walked slowly into the flower-banked room where the body of James Loring lay. The casket flanked the fireplace at the south wall, and a great piece of sheer netting lay over it. For one appalled moment, she stood there gazing at her father's dear face, so strangely young and peaceful in death; then, lifting the veiling, she tenderly touched his clasped hands. "Daddy darling," she whispered, "you were always so good to me! If only I could have eased your worries, my darling! If only I could have saved your life! I love you so, Daddy. I love you so!"

Gently, she let the transparent cover fall back in place, and, squaring her shoulders, turned away.

There was something mysterious about the whole thing. Even the friends who had come to condole seemed strangely quiet on the subject of Jim Loring's sudden death, and as the hours wore on, Mary grew more and more apprehensive. His going was spoken about as "tragic," "a great loss to Hawkinsville," and "terrible for the family"—but the spirit of evasion as to how his death had come about was always there.

"Ellen," she began that night in the privacy of their room, "was dad's death really an—accident?"

Silence—a long silence, which answered her better than any words could have done.

"Ellen! Was it—did he—?"

Ellen stifled a sob. "Yes, Mary. Dad—took his own life."

"Oh, my God! I was afraid he had! Something told me at the time your message came, and then, today, when I simply couldn't get to see anybody alone, I began to feel sure . . ."

How the plus of OIL-PLATING brings you more than an oil-change

YOU KNOW right off that the fresh oil needed in your crankcase today, isn't to lubricate the crankcase. Either your oil is in the bearings and up to the cylinder head every turn of your engine, or your lubrication isn't 100%.

Now what's the chance for any of the general run of oils to stay up while you've parked the car, for instance? Just about as much chance as there is for a geyser to stay up all by itself! Then every time you start, don't pistons get up to the top before oil gets up from the crankcase? You kill that risk by changing now to OIL-PLATING.

The "magnetic action" of Conoco Germ Processed oil—patented—makes OIL-PLATING stay on inner engine surfaces throughout all your stops, starts and runs this Summer. Your Germ Processed oil keeps a steady hold on the "Full" mark, too, as you'll see—by changing today to Your Mileage Merchant. Continental Oil Company

ONLY A DAY

We frequently regard a day as an inconsequential period of time, consoling ourselves that " a day will not make much difference."

Perhaps a century ago this might have been true, but not now. Recently this fact was conclusively demonstrated.

Europe was all set for another world war in a single day—1,000,000 men with equipment were moved into into fighting positions.

Science and invention have reduced time as a factor in big undertakings to a point where a day is of more importance now than at any period in the world's history.—Frank B. Craig.

LOSS AND GAIN

Representative Bruce Barton of New York, writer and speaker of note, is quoted in a recent report as saying he has figured that every time President Roosevelt has gone on a trip, business has realized a large gain, whereas every time he has made a speech business has suffered a loss. Barton says that by reason of 47 trips taken by the president, business has scooped up an advantage of $14,481,000,000. From that huge sum he deducted $3,162,000,000, loss due to fireside and other talks, leaving a net gain of $11,322,000,000. Barton reached his conclusions by calculating gains and losses in stocks on the New York exchange. "Tragic as it may sound," says Barton, "it seems none the less clear from the figures I have cited that when the president goes away and lets the country alone, the people are better off." Thus, to restore confidence and recovery, it would appear advisable to encourage the president to take more trips, and make fewer speeches.—Wayne, Neb., Herald.

TYPICAL BOY

It is interesting to note that the typical American boy for 1939 is a Kentucky farm boy, aged 13, and that he was chosen from 25,000 entrants. This lad gets up at 5 in the morning to feed the cows and do other chores, and rides a bicycle to school. Selection of an early riser for such national distinction rather discourages the theory offered by the fellow who recommended sleeping late in the forenoon to insure health and longevity. The one who rises early must retire early to secure normal rest, and thus he misses any worth-while night-life sociability that happens along. The choice of a farm boy as the best American specimen is an appreciation of farm character. It places a premium on habits cradled amidst nature's richest gifts — the great outdoors with producing fields, and with herds, droves and flocks. It recognizes fixed responsibility and regular hours as contributing to finest qualities of growing youth.

SAVING OUR SCENERY

There can be little argument that one of Michigan's greatest selling points is its scenery. And no one can argue the point that anything that detracts from this feature should be eliminated.

Objectionable billboards are obstacles in the path of enjoyment for all tourists. In making a feeble attempt to compete with the natural beauty of the roadsides, they accomplish nothing but confusion and distraction.

Of course there is a place for everything, but the scenic highway is definitely not the place to read advertising. Advertisers can exploit their products with safer and far less offensive methods.

The present legislature will act on an amended version of the Baldwin bill, which would ban signs and billboards along scenic highways, thus aiding the safety problem and eliminating the unscrupulous methods of fly-by-night advertising operators.

We do not say that all signs should be taken from highways, as there are many that have a legitimate place there, serving as directional and educational background for the motorist. But the hazardous, selfish sign that is dumped anywhere in the midst of anything, just to satisfy the whim of a selfish interest, should be removed.

The proposed legislation is only of a regulatory nature, and has no drastic measures or revolutionary aims. We favor common sense and moderation in any field—particularly when it will add to the value of our state's greatest industry, the tourists.

WHERE IS THIS DESTRUCTION?

One of the chief criticisms of Representative Wright Patman of Texas, whose proposed bill would drive chain stores out of business, is that chain stores destroy independent merchants, slash farmers' prices, and take capital away from local enterprises.

The inconsistency of Representative Patman's argument is easily proven.

Since the American system is based on competition in all forms of commerce, and since any factor that raises the standards of a business is considered favorable, abolishment of the chains would be as impracticable as reverting to the horse-and-buggy, or covered wagon.

Facts and figures, too numerous to mention here, prove that chain store groups do not concentrate their profits in one center, take millions from employment, or crush labor standards.

Independent stores have not been destroyed, but rather have increased in numbers during recent years. Employment certainly has not been hampered by chains and any attempt to prove that 1,000,000 additional jobs would be created by eliminating chain stores, sounds like another New Deal nightmare.

Most persons are aware that the only salvation of our nation is thru progress. Moving the clock back 50 years won't help a bit. Any factor that raises commercial standards and keeps a steady march forward cannot be termed a destructive influence.

WAR PERILS

The internationally famed attorney, Dudley Field Malone, addressing an alumni meeting of the University of Southern California, suggests the impeachment of President Roosevelt "if he persists in an aggravating policy of mixing up in the European situation up to the danger of our being put into war."

The American people have told the president by overwhelming opinion and on many occasions that they want no economic or other alliances with Europe, and they will take no part in any European war," Malone declared.

"The president is an internationalist who still believes in the dead body of the League of Nations.

"If he persists in aggravating policy of mixing us in the European situation up to the danger of our being put into war, congress should draw up articles of impeachment and remove him from office.

"No leader, president or citizen, should be permitted to gamble with the lives and the comfort of our generous and trusting people!

"The American people lent the allies $11,000,000,000, which we will never get back, spent $22,000,000,000 on our part of the enterprises, left tens of thousands of our boys on the bloody battlefields of France.

"We have a nation today with a deficit of $59,000,000,000 without any signs of recovery, and yet the president and his advisers are making irresponsible and futile declarations which may involve this country in a European war."

SIX YEARS OF THE NEW DEAL

The New Deal took office on March 4, 1933, flying this banner: "The only thing we have to fear is fear."

After six years of New Deal experimentation, extravagance and waste the country has something more substantial than fear itself to fear.

The administration's reform-recovery program has completely collapsed. The wheels of industry are still bogged. The number of unemployed is undiminished. After an upturn that culminated in the summer of 1937, we are back in the depression again. And at what a price!

The national debt will reach $45,000,000,000 during the next fiscal year, an increase of $22,500,000,000 since June 30, 1933.

The average American family that paid federal taxes of $66.16 in 1933 will pay $169.60 this year.

Corporation taxes have similarly increased.

Governmental expenditures, which totaled $3,800,000,000 a year when the New Deal came into power, will amount to $9,500,000,000 this year.

And there is in a sight neither a balanced federal budget nor a cessation of the administration's demands for further appropriations to finance its extravagance.

The drain which current federal taxes and debt charges make upon industry is less of a brake upon recovery than the uncertainty regarding the future, which springs from the continued recklessness of the most spendthrift administration in all history.

After six years of the New Deal, Americans have more to fear than fear itself.

They have also to fear the certainty that the present administration, if not checked by congress this year and by the voters at the polls next year, will bankrupt the nation. —Detroit Free Press.

Simplicity Wins

Cassopolis—Remember the picture of a ragged boy with a tree branch and bent pin selling a fine string of trout to an angler loaded down with gadgets and equipment? Something like that happened here, when 100 men and a pack of hounds chased a fox for several hours, only to find that it had been shot by a boy riding on a bicycle and carrying an unloaded shotgun. When the boy saw the fox, he got off his bike, loaded the gun, and fired just once. The chase was over.

Dollars From Heaven

Dearborn — Not "pennies from heaven" but dollars fell in Dearborn's streets one day this winter. A grocery company collector was leaving a store with a handful of currency and checks, worth more than $500. Suddenly a gust of wind snatched the money from his hand and whirled it high in the air. As it fluttered to the surrounding snowbanks, nearby persons recovered all but $243. Currency was still being found in the vicinity for several days afterward.

Rabbit fanciers are claiming business is "looking up." In a recent meeting of the Michigan State Rabbit and Cavy Breeders' association on the Michigan State college campus, the 10th annual spring show attracted a record number of entries. Sponsors claimed a slightly better fur price and an appreciably improved price for meat has increased interest in rabbit breeding and rabbit showmanship.

Fired by fascist victories in Spain we find other fascist dictators rattling their sabers as a warning to democracies. Hitler an Mussolini indicate that they want peace, but they do a great deal of blustering in expressing the idea. Their threats suggest more of a fear of peace than of war. They act like fellows uneasily anxious to fight.

The magic eye of the x-ray is a sure way of determining whether the tuberculosis germ is setting up its deadly work within the body. In Michigan the x-ray is provided by the Michigan Tuberculosis association through tuberculosis Christmas seal funds.

CUTWORM IS MICHIGAN FARMER'S ENEMY NO. 1

Greatest consistent crop pest in Michigan, is the "Farmers' Enemy No. 1" title given to the cutworms which operate each year throughout the state.

So entomologists at Michigan State college are continuing research begun two years ago to classify cutworms by species and areas in which they prove prevalent. More than 500 species likely are present in the state, about 30 of them commercially important.

Cops Get the Bird

Lincoln Park—Capturing 72 stolen chickens, when the thieves were caught red handed, was not a hard task for local police. The difficulty came in locating the owners. All but about 30 of the hens were claimed by their owners. For the remainder there were so many claimants that it was left to justice court to decide who the real owners were. In the meantime, police had to care for the chickens. The officer assigned this task wasn't rewarded with fresh eggs, either—the hens wouldn't lay any.

ICE STRIKES PARKS

underwritten by a Toledo bond firm, Stranahan, Harris & Co. The state highway department built the highway approach at Port Huron.

Why did McKay, former state treasurer, receive $92,000 in connection with the bond issues for this bridge? Or was this fee paid for other services? Governor Dickinson has ordered a complete investigation.

Read Asked to Probe

Attorney General Thomas Read has been given the responsibility of making the official inquiry into the McKay fee.

In making this assignment, Governor Dickinson found himself in the position of asking a McKay-endorsed state officer to investigate McKay. Capital observers recall that when Read was a candidate for lieutenant governor with the support of McKay, his chief primary opponent was Mr. Dickinson.

Like all mysteries, the McKay case has numerous ramifications.

PWA Administrator Harold L. Ickes has jumped into the picture with a disclosure that he had rejected the bridge project in 1935 on the grounds that the financial proposal was unwise. Counter to Ickes' boast is the untarnished fact that the Port Bridge is earning money faster than the commission anticipated it would and that the 20-year bond issue may be retired in the next ten years, if present earnings are maintained.

More Commissions

In the McKay serial plot is another figure, Stewart P. Blazier of Grosse Pointe, Detroit manager for Stranahao, Harris & Co.

It was revealed at Washington that Blazier had received $18,685 in "cotamissions" for services performed in connection with the $2,300,000 bond issue, in addition to a salary of $1,800.

Blazier was a personal friend of the late Governo Fitzgerald. Incidentally, he was one of the pallbearers at the Grand Ledge funeral.

Throughout the entire matter, several facts stand out. The federal government is not concerned, as both McKay and Blazier have seemingly accounted for every dollar of income for federal taxatio purposes. Unlike Pendergast, the Kansas City political leader, McKay is reputed to have deep respect for the internal revenue department at Washington. Furthermore, no state funds are directly involved as the bridge bonds were sold to private investors. It apparently was a private business transaction between the Toledo bond house and the two Michigan men—McKay and Blazier. Hence it has all the earmarks of legality.

Hiking Prices

The second mystery thriller was uncovered by Auditor General Vernon J. Brown. It concerns the question: Why were certain orders cancelled by state buyers and substi ute orders made out at higher prices?

The legislature recently transferred all accounting responsibility to the office of the auditor general who is a member of the state administrative board.

Digging into the records of buying done by the state since January 1, Brown bared some startling transactions: Purchase of a tractor, selling at retail for less than $1,000, for a total amount of $1,250 including a traded-in tractor; purchase of a plow, selling at retail for $110, for a total of $150.95; cancelling orders for 15,151 tons of coal and substituting new orders through another firm for 10,000 tons at higher prices; and sale of alleged inferior feed for cattle at higher prices.

Browo summed it up: "Local dealers have been ignored and articles bought of distant sales agents at prices above open market quotations. . . . Unless Michigan can display more intelligent buying than its central purchasing department has yet demonstrated, it had better hand the job back to heads of departments and institutions."

Barnard Involved

Edward Barnard, Wayne county republican boss, and McKay, Kent county leader, virtually dictated the choice of nominees of the republican party last fall.

In order to cripple Barnard in Wayne county, Rep. Elton R. Eaton of Plymouth introduced a bill calling for congressional district conventions, all on the same day. Encouraged by young republican legislators who are itching for a "new deal" in Michigan Republicanism, the bill was rushed through the house.

In the senate, however, it was killed in committee but only on the day following the spring election.

Senator D. Hale Brake, chairman of the judiciary committee, promptly introduced a new anti-Barnard hill anni hy precedent-breaking methods obtained suspension of rules for the particnlar measure, for the deadline for introduction of bills had passed.

Barnard's power in Wayne county, as the acknowledged ruler of county conventions, will be sharply curtailed if Brake's bill receives legislative sanction. The McKay fee exposure has greatly enhanced its chances of passage. It also sharpens the cleavage that is developing in republican ranks.

Highway Patronage Raid

If Murray D. VanWagoner were a Republican, the house of representatives would not have given a moment's consideration to a bill seeking to deprive the state highway department of maintenance of state trunk roads, returning this responsibility to the counties.

In 1925 a republican highway commissioner, Frank Rogers, took over maintenance of state roads in 18 counties. His successor, Grover C. Dillman, also a Republican, furthered this policy by taking over 14 additional counties. The trend was continued by VanWagoner, a Democrat, and today the state department is responsible for snow clearance, ice sanding and general maintenance of state roads in 50 of the 83 counties, 18 counties being added in the past six years.

Should a severe snowstorm hit West Michigan the state highway department mobilizes trucks and plows from counties not affected by the storm. The mobility of the state's snow-fighting equipment is recognized generally as a distinct public asset.

Instead of one standardized maintenance for state highways, the thrust at VanWagoner would create 83 varieties. The democratic commissioner has 1,200 maintenance employees—1,200 jobs which could be distributed among deserving Republicans. The bill is undeniably political in purpose.

State Deficit Grows

While double-header mysteries are still making the headlines, Governor Dickinson and the administration are wrestling with a critical financial dilemna—a treasury deficit prospect of approximately $30,000,000 by June 30.

To pay current cost of operating the state government, Michigan is dipping into special ear-marked funds in an attempt to avert the use of script or outright bankruptcy. Ordinarily the treasury has a balance of around $15,000,000. Today it shows a red ink deficit of $18,000,000 with three months' bills yet to be paid.

The higher prices for state purchases authorized by buyers after lower-priced orders had been cancelled, were directly counter to the governor's economy program. Governor Dickinson's salary cutting statement was an indication of the extremity to which he is ready to go in order to restore sound fiscal government to Michigan.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SOCIETY

Sunday morning service, 10:45.
Sunday school, 12 o'clock.
Meets first Wednesday evening each month at 7:15 p. m.

"Probation after Death" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, April 23.

The Golden Text (Psalms 23:4) is: "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Romans 8:5,6): "For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit. For to be earnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 487): "Life is the origin and ultimate of man, never attainable through death, but gained by walking in the pathway of Truth both before and after that which is called death."

Last Lesson in Home Management Project Given by Miss Noyes

The last lesson in our home management project was given last Thursday in the Boyne City library. Miss Helen Noyes, specialist, continued her discussion on legal phases of home management. This is the first time that a discussion of this type has been given the leaders and they certainly showed their great interest in the subject by numerous questions.

The next and last big event in the project will be the ladies achievement day. This is to be held on Thursday, May 11, in the Methodist church, Boyne City. With between 250 and 300 members in the county, the achievement day should be largely attended and the best ever held. Local committees have been appointed and all efforts will be devoted to developing plans for this big occasion.

Farmer-Businessmen Banquet and Program a Huge Success

The farmer-businessmen banquet and program held at the Peninsula Grange hall on Wednesday evening, March 12, was greatly enjoyed by a fine attendance of over eighty folks. Represented were editors, bankers, businessmen and officials of agricultural organizations from all points in the county, who were guests of the township committeemen. This was the first time that all interests in the county were assembled together to really discuss the efforts being made to advance the agricultural interests. The results certainly justified a gathering of this kind.

Carrying out the purposes of the meeting, an excellent discussion, pertaining to the agricultural adjustment administration, was lead by James Porter, member of the state committee. He briefly outlined the three major objectives as being: First, soil conservation; second, to maintain adequate price level without excessive surplus; third, to protect the interests of the consumer by producing adequate food supplies. It was brought up that the administration is not endeavoring to place agriculture on a higher level than industry but to raise its price level so that it can exchange its products for city products. Mr. Porter indicated very clearly the methods and mechanics used in obtaining these objectives.

Following the splendid banquet served at 7:00 by the ladies of the Peninsula Grange, a most attractive program was introduced by B. C. Mellencamp, county agricultural agent. The first number appearing on the program was developed by David Smith, Charlevoix, and included Clarence and Hilda Smith, Carl Prohaska and Mr. Smith himself in several song numbers. Next, Peter Dobioiak, Boyne Falls, entertained the audience with imitations, recitations and stories. His daughter, Anna, gave a tap dancing number.

Following this, Claude Fairaven, Ellsworth, presented a wonderful treat when he played several xylophone numbers. When asked how he developed this ability, he replied that between nine and ten o'clock at night, after the work is completed, he gets in a little practice.

Ordinarily the president of as big an organization as this soil conservation program is not supposed to have any other ability but, in the case of Charles Shepard, it was proven to the contrary. Dressed up as a country rube, he recited several selections which nearly brought the house down with laughter. Not alone this, but in his usual humorous manner he discussed features of the program.

The comment was heard that it would be a fine idea to develop a similar meeting sometime in the future. This is one of the few times that farmers have entertained their city guests and it is certainly worthwhile.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE NEWS BULLETIN

Harry F. Kelly, secretary of state, this week made it clear that he does not consider $80 an adequate living wage for a married man living in Lansing. This issue came to the attention of the public when Ford Eastman, a young clerk in the department of state, published his personal budget to show where his money went. Governor Dickinson, in discussing how many welfare clients of the state were frittering away money on non-essentials recently was quoted as saying that most employes from governor to janitor were overpaid. Secretary of State Kelly made a personal investigation in his own department, interviewed Eastman, and upon finding 38 married persons working for less than $1,000 per year, stated that he would recommend that the minimum rate of pay for such persons should henceforth be $100 per month.

"I believe in a fair rate of pay and then a full day's work," said the secretary.

"I do not believe in the regimentation of state employees or of those employed in private industry. I do not intend to interfere in any way with the private lives of my employees nor do I intend telling them how they shall spend the money they earn."

GAME SEASON OVER, BUT PREDATORS OFFER SPORT

Long List of Aoimals That Hunters May Kill in Michigan

While the season is closed on all species generally recognized as "gnme" nnimals, the ardent sportsman is by no means without quarry in Michigan during the spring months.

Avnilnble to hunters of small game are coyote, wolf, lynx, bobent, fox, skunk, porcupine, woodchuck, weasel and red squirrel.

Wolf and coyote while comparatively scarce nre found in fair numbers in some parts of the atate. The coyotes, of course, far outnumber wolves. A coyote recently was shot by a hunter in Allegan county. Bonnty of $20 is paid for female coyotes and wolves and $15 for male coyoles and wolves.

Fox hunting also offers sport for a number of hunters, and the pastime has grown steadily in popularity during recent years. The English method of horse and hounds and violently red conts has not caught on, hut pursuit by hounds, sometimes with the hunters following the chase in automohiles, has become popular.

Shotgun hunters in many parts of the state have turned their attention to the crow. One writer recently called the crow an important "game bird of the future." Pointed out were the great number of birds and their willingness, under favornble conditions, to decoy. Silhouette crow decoys nnd stuffed owls replace the conventional blocks but the blind, much like that used for duck hunting, remains in common use. Night hunting has been found to produce more crows but less sport.

GOOD PLOWMAN CAN BEAT CORN BORERS

Covering of Surface Trash Important in Eradication

Heavier than nsunl infestations of corn borers in Michigan fields last fall offer more profit than just pride in good plowing this spring.

Even if the seasoo seems late, a hurried and careless job of plowing would be a mistake, says C. B. Dibble, extension specinlist in insect control, Michigan State college.

Borers winter in nnused portions of the corn plant, such as stubble. Destruction in plowing by complete covering of these winter quarters of the borers will accomplish conalderable in reducing the high population of the pests.

Few borers survive when stalk material in the fields and the manure in piles and feedlots is carefully plowed under and kept covered. Harrowing and fitting should he done in such a way that these stulks are not brought back to the surface.

Borers are not killed in aurface trash. In fact this material will protect those that escape from buried material. When the pests emerge as moths the winged insect will fly away to lay sufficient eggs for 300 to 500 new borers to attack 1939 crops, Dibble warns.

June 1 is the dnte set by Dibble when plowing ought to be completed to destroy the borers which hnve wintered in the fields.

FEMALE COYOTE SHOWS GREAT INTELLIGENCE

Eludes All Tricks of Trappers and Mate Is Captured

A few miles north of Roscommon lives n femnle coyote that State Trapper Instructor Herbert Lenon concedes to be a proven genius among her kind.

Carrying on what amounts to guerilla warfare against the coyotes of the vicinity, Lenon has come in contact with the coyote several times in a period of two years. Lenon nearly caught the animal in a small fox trap in a hole set, but she escaped with the loss of only two toenails.

From then on it was impossible to decoy the coyote up to a hole set, although her mate, an exceptionally large male, was taken in such a set. Later Lenon got two more of her toennils in a trap using a "blind set." Frozen earth over the trap stayed off capture.

Lenon then set out in earnest to capture the coyote, but daily found his carefully hidden traps turned over and sprung. When he pegged down one trap, the coyote dug under it und sprung it. Wondering why the coyote, perfectly awnre of the peril of the traps, took the trouble of springing them, Lenon has come to the conclusion that it was to prevent her pups from being caught.

"Any coyote that intelligent has my respect," says Lenon, who has stopped concentrating on the wily old coyote matron nnd is concerned now with reducing the general coyote population.

FARM TOPICS

KNOW TOPSOIL FOR EROSION CONTROL

Farmer Should Be Familiar With His Land.

By Oron I. O. Schaub of the North Carolina State College—WNU Service.

It's hard for a farmer tn adopt the kind of erosion control practices that would be most effective nn his land unless he knows what type of soil covers his fields.

He needs to consider the thickness and lexture of the topsoil and also the subsoil underneath. He needs to consider the slope of the land over each field, how badly the soil tends to erode and how much soil has been washed away already.

In some sections so much topsoil has been washed away that the farmers on it have to eke out a living as best they can by virtually tilling the subsoil.

There are soils being cultivated that are better suited to making brick than to producing crops.

Within a single field there may be big differences in the type of soil found in various places. Of differences in the slope over a field cause it to be badly eroded in some places while in others there is still a fairly good layer of topsoil.

The badly eroded places should be retired to thick-growing cover crops, but the more level places may still be good for careful farming.

A striking example of differences in soil may be gained by examining the thin topsoil on a place where row crops have been grown for a long time, then compare it with the thick, spongy soil in a wooded area nearby.

A careful study of the soil on each farm has proved one of the most important steps in the "whole-farm" method of controlling erosion now being demonstrated in erosion control areas.

Buff Turkey Not Among Recognized Varieties

Whether or not the Buff turkey has become extinct, it has evidently lost its place in official recognition as a vnriety. The present standard recognizes six varieties, among which the Buff does not appear. A Department of Agriculture publication of something over 30 years ago, while recognizing the Buff as a variety, says of it that it is not generally known throughout the country and, in many localities, is almost unknown.

The standard calls for a pure buff color throughout, says this publication, but this shade of coloring is seldom seen. "As bred for market, these turkeys are of a reddish buff or light chestnut color, mixed with white and some dark shadings." It would seem very likely that this variety has become merged with the Bourbon Red of similar colorings and its identity lost. It may be that some may still be able to offer pure golden yellow turkeys of the old Buff variety but the chances are, says a writer in the Rural New-Yorker, that the offering would be what has been found before, Buff Bourbon Reds. Here would appear an opportunity to back-track to an old and lost variety and make it of such distinction as to call for favorable recognition.

To Tell Age of Sheep

The age of a sheep can be determined by looking at the teeth, says the Indiana Farmer's Guide. There are eight front teeth in the lower jaw and none in the upper jaw. Lamb teeth are small, white and narrow, and are replaced by larger, wider, permanent teeth at yearly intervals as follows: One year, two permanent teeth (center pair); two years, four permanent teeth; three years, six permanent teeth; four years, full mouth of eight permanent teeth. After four years there is no definite method of telling the age by the teeth.

Farm Notes

There are usually 10 eggs to a pound.

Turkeys have been known as guinea hens and cocks of India.

Flour makes up 57 per cent of the weight of the average loaf of bread.

"Large" eggs, so labeled, must weigh 24 ounces a dozen, according to law.

Poultry experts estimate a pullet eats 25 to 27 pounds of feed before reaching maturity.

Only those pullets that are well-grown, well-fleshed, well-pigmented, and free from disease are profitable.

Horses and cows and sheep must rely on their lips to gather grass or grain; and they can take in only a lipful at a time.

A white Leghorn hen at Ladysmith, South Africa, laid an egg 3¾ inches long, 2¼ inches wide, and weighing 5 ounces, nearly three times the size of an ordinary egg.

FSA SUPERVISOR ANNOUNCES SOIL CONSERVING LOAN

Farmers unable to participate in the 1939 AAA soil conservation program because of lack of funds for material to carry out soil building practices, may now secure Farm Security Administration lonns for this purpose through the local AAA committee, T. B. Pemberton, FSA's county supervisor announced today.

According to the county supervisor, the entire amount of the loan must be used for alfalfa or clover seed, lime, fertilizer or other supplies which will be needed in carrying out approved soil building practices. The amount louned will not exceed sixty per cent of the approxlmate AAA payment and will he secured by an assignment of that payment, he added.

In order to he eligible for these FSA loans, an applicant must be recommended by the AAA county committee and unable to secure the necessary credit elsewhere, Mr. Pemberton stated.

This is in line with the FSA's policy of making loans nnly to farmers unable to secure credit from any other source. The borrower who enn get the financing which he needs from his bank or any private institution, is not eligible for FSA loans, the supervisor said.

All applications for loans must be made at the Charlevoix county AAA office in the Federal building, Boyne City.

According to the eligibility requirements outlined by Mr. Pemberton, loans to cooperate in the AAA program will be made only to farmers who meet the following qualifications: (1) farmers who without such a loan would be unable to participate in the program because of inability to finance the purchase of the materials necessary in order to carry out soil-building practices; (2) farmers whom the county AAA committee recommend from the standpoint of character and integrity; (3) farmers who agree to use the full amount of the loan for the purchase of materials to he used in carrying out approved soil-building practices; (4) farmers who have not executed and agree not to execute an assignment of their payment other than to the Farm Security Administration.

Well-Posted Fowl

Stunton—A well posted chicken, with much understanding, is owned by Irving Cummins—it is a three-legged chicken. The extra leg, which swings about in an aimless sort of way when the bird walks, is attached to the body by skin and muscle. It is not as large as the other two legs, and has but two toes. Irving is waiting for an offer from some carnival company.

"YES . . I can depend on my bank"

And why shouldn't he?

He has built up a nest egg in Savings. He pays by check because he wants a record of all expense. He meets obligations promptly.

Certainly he can rely on us when he needs to borrow. And so can any other worthy person in our community when the need is for a sound business purpose.

what he believes is right, there is also virtue in admitting when you are wrong. I was opposed to any change in the deer law until seeing first-hand the conditions as they exist. They changed my mind. Al Weber saw the same things, but instead of lending the conservation department moral support in their efforts to rectify the conditions, sets out to accuse them of sponsoring a cleverly laid plan of feeding the deer just enough in these crowded areas to attract and hold them in the yards until they drop dead, then rushed in a crowd of people to witness the awful conditions. Our conservation department is not made up of that type of individuals and such a theory is just Tommy-rot.

Not so long ago Al Weber, in an attempt to steer the citizens of his own city off a proposition to obtain municipally-owned electric facilities, cited Charlevoix as the horrible example of a community laden with debt, on the verge of bankruptcy, its credit ruined, as the result of owning its electric light system. His arguments on that proposition revealed lack of investigation and resulted in misinforming his readers, not to mention discrediting another community. Maybe that's a sample of his judgment on the deer situation also.

A custom established in 1933 will repeat itself next Sunday morning in the observance of "Sportsman's Sunday" at the Congregational church. Members of the Charlevoix Sportsman's club and sportsmen generally will attend this 7th annual service which comes the Sunday before opening of the trout fishing season. It is sort of a farewell to Sunday morning church attendance until after Labor Day for many who place the seeking of spiritual peace of mind in the great outdoors on an even basis with a perhaps more accepted procedure. Even Rev. Parker will tell you that

Thanks to Harold A. Cartier of New York City, a Courier reader and former local boy, for the following compliment: "Think your column is very interesting and pertinent." Harold, who is connected with the Walter Kidde Constructors, Inc., sent along a folder showing pictures of the famous George Washington bridge which his firm has under construction across the Hudson river in the heart of Manhattan, with the remark: "Just to let you know that a Charlevoixan had something to do with this well known bridge." The folder revealed that 60,000 cubic yards of reinforced concrete, 320,000 bags of Portland cement and 7,200,000 pounds of reinforcing steel is being used.

Was the guest of Walt Henley at a soil conservation banquet and program last Wednesday night at Peninsula grange hall. Several others from this city attended as guests of farmer friends. Following a fine banquet and entertainment program which is detailed elsewhere in this issue, James Porter, a member of the state committee outlined the reasons, purposes and functions of the soil conservation program with the intent of informing the city visitor regarding the problems of his country brother and what is being done by the federal government to alleviate the problems. It may be that my head is a little thicker than that of the average person, so I'm forced to admit Mr. Porter's discourse failed to impress upon me there is any more logic in this farm program than there is to the hundred-and-one other New Deal theories used by the administration to meddle in your business and mine. It is true that the farmer has an acute problem resulting from surplus of farm produce and subsequent low market. But don't we all have problems? And did anybody ever successfully spend his way out of trouble on borrowed money? I can't see any sense paying the farmer with his own tax money to reduce his crop acreage and thus cut down his income. I can't figure out how a surplus is to be eliminated when the soil taken out of production is built up so it will produce even more when put back into production. The scheme looks like it is doomed for failure because it is not compulsory, allowing the farmer who figures he knows how to run his own business to plant more acreage than maybe is customary, thus offsetting the acreage taken out of production. Then there is the generally known fact that despite a surplus, the government allows imports of farm produce from foreign countries to glut the country's markets further. It all makes one wonder just how long the federal purse can stand the drain on resources to pay for these crack-pot theories. Any business operated on a similar plan would have gone to the wall a long time ago. Perhaps the place to have gotten answers to these doubts of mine would have been at the meeting, but I didn't want to appear as having a "chip on my shoulder." There were some fellows a darn sight smarter than myself there who asked questions which weren't answered with very much clarity, so I come away from the meeting feeling like I'd been for a merry-go-round ride—went 'round and 'round and got off right where I started.

CONSERVATION COMMITTEE APPROVES CHANGES

Legislative Group Will Recommend Passing Department Requests

The house conservation committee has agreed to recommend passage of a bill giving the conservation commission limited authority to declare an open season on antlerless deer, Chairman Alexander M. McKay, West Branch Republican, said Friday.

The committee is combining two bills into one measure to provide that:

1. The open season on bucks will be from November 15 to 30, same as under the present law.

2. The conservation department will be permitted to declare open seasons on antlerless deer in areas where deer are starving due to over-population.

3. There will be an open season on fox squirrels from October 1 to 31 in the upper peninsula and from October 15 to November 14, in the lower peninsula. There is no open season under the present law.

4. The department will have authority to fix open seasons on black and grey squirrels.

5 The open season on upland game birds will be lengthened to 20 days, instead of 12. The season will be October 1 to 20 in the upper peninsula and October 15 to November 5 in the lower peninsula.

SPECIAL HUNTS ON BIG GAME NO INNOVATION

Used in Many States to Eliminate Over-Population Problems

Special hunts for big game in areas where the game population exceeds the carrying capacity of the land is not an unusual procedure, according to game division experts of the department of conservation.

A typical example is found in Idaho, where two special hunts, one for elk and one for deer, were held during the fall of 1938. The Selway game preserve in Idaho county was opened for the removal of 1,500 elk. Participants in the special hunt were required to have their regular license, a special permit, a metal elk tag, axe, knife, bucket and shovel. They were not allowed to use any rifle of less than .30 caliber and were warned to be prepared to take proper care of meat to prevent spoilage.

The hunters in this area were allowed to take mature animals of either sex but not calves.

SPORTSMEN SCAN TROUT PROSPECTS

The smart boys and girls seem to reason it out this way—there are plenty of fish and if the water is anything like in normal condition there will be some good opening day catches. If it turns off with a lot of rain, and the streams are high, then it is not going to be so good.

Early season fishing usually turns up several prize winners from west Michigan streams and the conservation department program of planting legal size fish should mean that there are plenty of "keepers" in the streams.

SIX SENTENCED IN CIRCUIT COURT HERE FRIDAY

Criminal Cases Pending Disposed of by Judge Parm C. Gilbert

Six criminal cases were disposed of by Judge Parm C. Gilbert at a special circuit court session here Friday afternoon.

George Carpenter, 69, of East Jordan, was sentenced to a term of 20 months to five years following plea of guilty to a charge of accessory to crime. Carpenter purchased property stolen by Clifford Green, 17, Edward McWaters, 20, and John Pucket, 16, all of East Jordan, who were involved in a series of breaking and enterings. Green and McWaters will be placed on probation, while Pucket, a juvenile, was placed in charge of the probate court.

Charles Malee, 19, of Boyne City, was placed on probation for two years for breaking and entering. Elmer E. Booth, 20, of Boyne City, is awaiting sentence on a charge of malicious destruction of personal property. Booth killed a dog owned by a neighbor who reprimanded Booth for attentions to his daughter.

Charges against Louis Haddix, 22, of Boyne City, were withheld pending outcome of injuries the youth allegedly inflicted upon his father, Jess Haddix, 55, who is confined to Charlevoix Hospital. It is claimed Louis attacked his father, striking him over the head with a bottle and kicking him about the head and chest. His condition is still serious. Officers stated that a charge of murder will be brought if the injuries prove fatal, otherwise a charge of attempted murder will be lodged.

FISHERMEN AWAIT '39 TROUT SEASON

OPENING DATE IS ON SATURDAY, APRIL 29TH

One-Dollar Trout License for Both Men and Women Over 17 Years of Age Required This Year

The first contingent of Michigan's army of more than 100,000 fishermen will take to the streams Saturday morning, April 29, when the lid comes off on the 1939 trout season.

Estimates of the number of anglers on streams opening day are only approximate but a minimum figure is 25,000. Before the season is over, more than 100,000 fishermen will try their luck in Michigan waters.

Fee for the 1939 resident fishing license is $1. This license entitles the taking of all species of game fish except grayling. It is required of all persons over 17 years of age taking fish in any manner in inland waters.

Non-resident license fee is $2 and a special non-resident 10-day license may be obtained for $1. A non-resident license for the angler's wife is issued for an additional 50 cents.

Size and catch limits on the "Big Three" of troutdom, the brook, the brown and the rainbow remain the same as last year. No fish under seven inches in length may be retained. A total of 15 trout is the daily and possession limit.

Reports from the northern streams indicate that excellent fishing conditions will greet the anglers. An unusually cold spring has resulted in the snow and ice melting very slowly. Few serious floods, in consequence, threatened stream life. Spring freshets, in most cases, have resulted in little damage to cover in and along the streams. Many of the rivers are reported well within their banks with waters sufficiently clear to promise unusually good early fishing.

While many anglers will tempt the trout with assorted and varicolored flies, most popular lure on opening day will be perhaps the oldest of fish baits, the "Garden Hackle" or common angleworm. Few hatches of flies are to be expected on the still icy waters although warmer weather may bring a few. Worms and minnows will bring most trout to creel.

CITY HALL CONSTRUCTION SHOWS PROGRESS

Basement and First Floor of Building Nearly Completed

Work on the new city hall by the Muskegon Construction Co. is showing rapid progress.

Footings, foundation walls, basement walls, columns and beams and practically all of the first floor slab have been completed and lower walls started.

A sample of the attractive Indiana stone walls has been set up, giving an indication of the appearance of the finished building. The stone work, put up from patterns, is in squares of 4 feet, each containing 43 pieces. All such sections will be similar.

Joseph Black, superintendent in charge of construction, stated the project is about 15% completed.

POTATO INSPECTOR FOR REGION IS APPOINTED

Robert Blackburn, Petoskey, to Act for Charlevoix County

Robert Blackburn, with official station at Petoskey, is designated as inspector for this territory in revised list issued by Glenn W. Davis, director of bureau of foods and standards of department of agriculture, in response to requests received from potato growers for information regarding the sale and handling of seed potatoes.

Davis pointed out that previously, permits for the movement of seed potatoes were available by writing the department of agriculture. Revised regulations provide that the grower contact the department inspector, securing certificate that he is a bona fide grower, presenting certificate to the inspector where seed is purchased, who in turn will issue permit to transport seed. A new permit must be obtained for each shipment.

The regulations exempt certified seed potators. Davis warned that permits issued by the department do not allow grower tn move potatoes outstate unless he complies with requirements as to table stock.

BASEBALL SEASON WILL OPEN FRIDAY

CHARLEVOIX WILL PLAY FIRST GAME AT HARBOR SPRINGS

First Track Meet Triangular Event May 5th at East Jordan—Conference Event Here May 13

Charlevoix high school athletes will inaugurate their spring athletic program Friday afternoon.

A baseball contest will open an 8-game schedule of competition for Charlevoix in the western division of the northern Michigan class C conference. Two games with Petoskey's class B team are included in the schedule.

Charlevoix won the western division title last year and lost to Grayling in the play-off for the conference title. Prospects this year, however, in view of losses from graduation and the short time for practice due to cold weather, are unpredictable.

Using four veterans from last year around which to build his team, Coach Kipke has announced the following line-up for Friday. Ernie Nowland will catch and hurling duties will be divided by Bruce Henley and Elmer Crain, Lewis Brown will he at first base, Bub McGhan at second, Harry Withers at short, Kenneth Wilson or Tom Carey at third, Max White, Clare McGhan and Don Stevens in the field. Robert Straw is also a likely candidate for a position.

Following is the complete schedule:
April 28—Harbor Springs there.
May 4—Boyne City here.
May 9—Petoskey here.
May 12—East Jordan there.
May 18—Harbor Springs here.
May 23—Petoskey there.
May 25—Boyne City there.
May 29—East Jordan here.

Charlevoix's first participation in track will be at a triangular meet May 5th at East Jordan. The class C conference meet will be held here May 13. Although made up largely of inexperienced men, Stewart Coleman, track coach, has a large group of candidates working out.

CAUTION WITH GRASS FIRES IS REQUESTED

Ask Persons Call Fire Dept. Before Setting Fires in City

Due to the danger of grass fires spreading out of control at this season, Fire Chief Charles Marshall has requested that all persons planning to build grass or rubbish fires within the city limits call the fire department first.

Numerous alarms have been answered during the past week to extinguish grass fires and, while no serious damage has resulted, the danger is always present and a call to the department will facilitate handling such emergencies.

Mr. Marshall also pointed out that those living outside the city limits should call the conservation department lookout tower, Boyne City phone 71, before starting fires. It is pointed out that a few acres of grass burning under close guard may appear like an uncontrolled fire to the tower look-out.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL PLANNED

ALL CHURCHES OF CITY UNITE UNDER PROJECT

Committee of Representatives from Churches to Hold Classes Two Weeks After Schools Close

A committee composed of representatives of the Congregational, Baptist, Church of God and Methodist church schools, also Rev. Harold Ringenoldus and Rev. Armstrong are working out plans for a daily Vacation Church School this summer.

This committee was appointed by the Community Council of Religious Education as a result of studies during the training school held last fall in which the need of a daily vacation school and week day religious education was discussed.

The newer type of daily vacation church school endeavors to make its program truly educational, but emphasizing the guiding principles of Christian growth founded upon Bible truths and christian service. The purpose of the school is to take the idle hours of unoccupied children and teachers nnd available buildings and put them together into a character building enterprise. This is an opportunity to help children to learn by means of activities and constructive work.

It is the plan to have every parent of school age children follow a weekly series of articles and become acquainted with the proposed school. Each school will he well represented on the staff of teachers and helpers, and it is desired that all school age children know that they may register in this daily vacation school which is planned for two weeks following the close of the public schools. This time was selected because it will not interfere with summer plans of workers.

Further details regarding the school will be published later.

4-H CLUB AWARDS GIVEN MEMBERS

RECORD EXHIBITS AT EAST JORDAN TUESDAY

Quality and Quantity of Displays Eclipsed Any Previous Year—Awards Are Announced

(By B. C. Mellencamp)

The annual 4-H club spring achievement day held in the East Jordan high school last Tuesday was the largest ever held in the county. In fact, as compared with three years ago when all the exhibits were housed on the gymnasium floor, this year the entire auditorium was used to exhibit the clothing display.

Never before have so many advanced projects been carried on. Outstanding among the handicraft exhibits were three large kitchen cupboards completed by three members of the East Jordan club. Another display that received much favorable comment was a full sized dog house completed hy a member of the Hilton club. The largest display exhibited by any group was that of the East Jordan clothing club which contained thirty-five individual displays.

Also worthy of comment were the twenty-five sets of hot lunch posters, each set consisting of four individual posters. The stage was made very attractive by having the posters placed on three props that were lowered and used as a background for the program. Every seat in the auditorium was filled and even the standing space was scarce.

The forenoon was devoted to viewing the exhibits and a two hour moving picture program at the East Jordan theater. The wood identification contest started at 12:30 and ended at 1:30 at which time the afternoon program was introduced by the county agricultural agent.

RESORT TRAINING OPENS HERE MAY 1

REGISTRATIONS ARE OPEN AT BOARD OF COMMERCE

Mrs. Irving Hallett, Instructor, Reports Many from District Are Signing for Course

The Resort Training course sponsored by the board of education and board of commerce will open in Charlevoix on Monday, May 1.

Charlevoix is one of eight resort communities in Michigan which has been given the opportunity of offering this course, which is under the direction of the state department of vocational education and the National Youth Administration. This is a service to out-of-school youths by giving them a type of vocatinnal training that will increase their chances for summer and possibly winter employment.

To date the resort employment problem has been quite serious, as resort operators have not been able to secure efficiently trained help. As a result, their personnel is brought in from other states, which fact does not help Michigan ynuths nor does it increase the "selling" of Michigan to the traveling public, as these imported people know nothing of scenic Michigan nor its fascinatiog history.

The object of the course is to teach the students to become skilled, trained employes for private homes, hotels and summer resorts of the region in such occupations as waitresses, chamber maids, bus boys, bellmen, etc. Instruction will also cover lessons on personality and personal appearance, how to apply for a job and a study of Michigan points of interest. Classwork will be carried on to a great extent in the actual hotel environment so that the student gains the needed practical experience. Besides this, specialized speakers will be brought to talk on the various units under discussion; field trips will be made to resort centers and hotels in this area for observation, and pictures and illustrated lectures will be presented during the study.

Mrs. Irving Hallett, who will instruct the course, has had considerable experience in hotel work, having been connected with hotels in Florida, French Lick Springs and St. Joseph, Mich. Mrs. Hallett reports that many registrations have been received already from Charlevoix and neighboring districts, although the official registration day is set for 1 o'clock on May 1st at the school. Classes will meet from 1 to 5 o'clock each afternoon for four weeks. Students enrolling must be 16 years of age or older and the tuition fee is two dollars.

Mrs. Hallett and Gordon Todd may he contacted at the board of commerce office for further information.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By Ken Usher

Today's the first birthday anniversary of this here column of mine. Doesn't hardly seem like a year ago I started out with the hunch of prattle that has resulted, but nevertheless it's true. It's a sad reminder I'm a year older, too, and some folks will tell you that contrary to established procedure, I'm none the wiser. In fact, some of them will tell you that I'm just plumb crazy. But then everyone has a right to their own opinions, so guess I'll go right on producing nonsense.

And come to think about it, Walt Henley will be expecting I'll come out this week with some solution to the farmers' problems because last week this column went on to say that the soil conservation program the democratic administration is experimenting with as a cure-all for the farmer's woes wasn't any good. One of the first things to do would be to throw the New Deal out on its ear and get down to earth again. We're not getting any better government now that we did back in 1923 when the total of all tax collections for local, state and federal purposes was $7,243,000,000. In 1937 taxes had increased to $12,300,000,000, nearly double, and what have we got to show for it? Then statistics compiled by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce show that over the above 14-year period over $20,000,000,000 more was diverted into revenues than had the 1923 level been maintained and that the above enormous sum does not begin to cover the cost of government, particularly federal. Inasmuch as taxes for the most part come out of the profits of industry, and industry as we all know stands idle, why not reduce taxes and give industry a chance to get on its feet. Let that tax money be poured back into productive enterprises instead of going to support ever-increasing government bureaus necessary to maintain a political machine, and the

The capitol circus is topsy-turvy.

Sideshows over the McKay bridge fee and state purchasing investigations, just to mention two stellar attractions, are stealing the spotlight from the legislative big tent.

The net result is confusion, and a number of legislative veterans have come to the conclusion that they should attend to four major problems—welfare, civil service, labor and the budget—and go home.

The death of Governor Fitzgerald, the advent of a new leader and the subsequent inquiries which have centered around the convention manipulators, Frank McKay and Edward Barnard, have all tended to impede action in the house and senate.

The fourth month is drawing to a close, and comparatively little has been accomplished. This is not intended as sarcasm. Circumstances have been most unusual.

RAIN, snow or wind mean little to the woman who has a telephone in the house . . . for she can do her shopping and "run" many other errands without exposing herself to the danger of icy streets or soaking rain.

The telephone does more than save her trouble. It saves her time too. . . . It shortens her working day, adds to her leisure.

And it's just as useful in social affairs. Chats with friends . . . bridge games or parties gotten up on a moment's notice . . . your telephone not only enables you to arrange them, but to be included in them.

Day and night . . . at little cost . . . the telephone gives you a combined protection, convenience and pleasure that nothing else can provide.

Tbis amazing new Firestone development makes a blowout as harmless as a slow leak.

Should a blowout occur the exclusive Firestone Safety-Valve holds sufficient air in the inner compartment to support the car until it is brought to a safe stop.

The Firestone Life Protector consists of a two-ply emergency tire, made of Safety-Lock cords, built inside of a tough, heavy rubber air container. CHAPTER XV

"Mother found him in the garage, Mary," Ellen went on, "the doors closed, the ignition turned on. She clings to the idea that it was an accident and, Mary, that's what the verdict was, but I know and so do you . . ."

"That it was suicide," Mary finished in a whisper. "Yes, Ellen, he was frantic about money, and he felt the only way to save his family from poverty was to take his own life, so that we might have his insurance. If only he'd waited another 24 hours, he'd have known it wasn't necessary to do such a dreadful thing! My novel's been accepted by a magazine, Ellen. They're going to pay me five thousand dollars for serial publication only. Think of it—five thousand dollars! And Dad committed suicide — in order to give his family ten thousand dollars insurance.

"Yes," Ellen replied bitterly. "Ten thousand dollars—only twice as much as you'll receive for your novel!"

"And I'm going to sell other rights. I know I shall! And I could've taken care of the family! The irony of it, Ellen! The tragedy! He gave up his life for his family's security—and it was all so needless!"

CHAPTER XVI

June came and went, but notwithstanding letters from Anthony Porter, Phil Buchanan, and Aunt Linnie, asking her to return to New York, Mary remained in Hawkinsville. Mr. Porter wrote that he was quite sure a certain well-known publishing house would shortly give her a contract for book publication of "Storm on the Mountain," and that it would be good business for her to be on hand for that, and other things to come. Phil, by wires and letters, all slightly stilted and businesslike, expressed his desire to see her back "where she now belonged"; while Aunt Linnie said that she was lonesome, and longed for Mary to return to live with her—indefinitely, if she liked.

The reason for Aunt Linnie's loneliness, aside from the genuine affection she held for her niece was conveyed to Mary in a letter from Lelia. It read:

Darling

I want you to be among the very first to hear that Jim and I are going to be married again, for, had it not been for you, I mightn't have known until it was too late that he was ill and broke, and that he needed me terribly. I might have stayed indefinitely on in Jamaica but instead, as you know, we boarded the first ship back to New York, and the very day we landed I motored out to Stamford to see him.

He was there in our little house, terribly ill and depressed, and cared for only by Anitau, the houseman; and when I opened the door and saw him lying on the lounge, thin and pale and discouraged, I knew that no matter what had happened in the past, he was my husband and that we must be together the rest of our lives.

We're going to be married next week, with only Linnie and Phil Buchanan as witnesses, and we're going to live forever in this sweet little house. Jim's still quite ill, but the doctors say that with rest and quiet and proper food, he will recover in time. I have plenty of money for us both, and, after all, practically everything I possess was given to me by him.

I've not mentioned my happiness before, my dear, because I didn't want to intrude it on your sorrow.

Linnie says I've done the most sensible thing of my life, but she's just a bit upset over my giving up my New York apartment and "burying" myself in Connecticut. She's a little lonesome, I think, and eager for you to return to New York and stay with her forever. How about it, Mary? Can you do it? Can your sweet mother get along without you? Surely, with all the success that's coming your way these days, New York's the place for you to live.

But Mary, helping her mother to reconstruct her life, attempting to bring her stricken little brother back to normalcy, stayed on in the little Iowa town. And, too, Ellen and Bill Duryea had decided to marry soon, and she felt that she should do all she could to make their coming marriage as happy an affair as the circumstances would allow. They were going to live with Mrs. Loring; the wedding was, of course, to be a very quiet one; still there were bridal things to be purchased, arrangements to be made.

Gossip was running rife concerning Christopher and Ilsa Cragg. Ilsa had gone to Reno to obtain a divorce, and report had it that she and Arty Belden would be married as soon as the decree was granted, and go to Chicago to live. Hawkinsville, unaccustomed to scandal, certainly did not want them there.

Then, at last, she saw Chris. It was a hot day, the first part of July, and she was walking down Trilby Lane after a visit to her father's grave, when suddenly she heard the sound of an automobile coming up behind her. Without even glancing around, she stepped to one side of the road to let the car go by. Instead of passing her, however, it came to a stop, and, looking up, she saw Christopher Cragg.

He jumped from the car and came toward her. "Mary! How are you? I've been to your house twice, but you weren't at home either time."

"I know, Chris. I was sorry to miss you."

"Are you going home now? Can I give you a lift?"

"Yes—I was going home."

"Then, come on, my dear. I'll drive you into town."

She glanced at the car. It was not the disreputable affair in which she had ridden with him last Christmas, but, instead, a shining new model of expensive make. "You have a new car, Chris!"

Doctor Cragg smiled sardonically. "Yes—one little item that was saved from the wreck!"

Mary looked puzzled.

"The wreck of my marriage," he explained flippantly. "It was Ilsa's wedding present to me."

Bewildered by the hard cynicism in his voice, she glanced sharply up at him. They were at the side of the car now, and he placed his hand on her arm to help her get in, but, to her surprise, his touch failed to affect her as it always had in the past. It seemed but the casual touch of any man going through the usual gesture that courtesy demands. Always before, such slight contact with Chris had sent the blood tingling in her veins, had made her heart beat with a foolish haste.

He had taken his seat at the wheel now, and they were moving down Trilby Lane. At last, after all these months, they were together again! Yet, somehow or other, their reunion was disappointing; the joy she had anticipated was not there. She felt so separate from Chris, so—outside him, as though she were seeing him objectively for the first time as a person apart from her.

"I want to tell you, Mary," he said, after they had driven some distance in silence, "how very sorry I was about your father. You have my sympathy . . ."

"Thank you, Chris. I—let's don't talk about Dad, please. I just can't seem to bear . . ."

"I know, my dear. I shan't say another word." And then, "Let's talk about my marriage!" There was a tinge of bitterness in his voice. "I suppose you've been told it's on the rocks—that Ilsa's getting a divorce."

"Yes," Mary said, "I've been told."

Chris shrugged. "Nice mess, isn't it?" he inquired. "I didn't quite please the lady, and—oh, well, the marriage should never have taken place. You know that as well as I do, Mary."

"No," Mary thought, "no, the marriage never should have taken place—and yet, it had! He said he loved me—but he married Ilsa. Why? Why?" The question which had been tormenting her for months simply must be answered—and answered now.

She turned and looked at Chris, but his gaze remained steadily fixed on the road ahead of him. "Then, why, Chris, why did you go on with it?" she asked in a low voice.

Chris drove on in silence. "I don't know, Mary," he replied at last. "There just didn't seem to be any honorable way of getting out of it. I never cared for anyone except you, after the first night we met. But Ilsa and I had been engaged for some time, and I just didn't see how I could break it off. Then, too, her father's a big specialist in Chicago . . ."

"But," Mary interrupted, "what had her father to do with it?"

"Well," Chris replied, "when he heard that Ilsa and I were engaged, he promised to take me into partnership with him, providing I'd first do general work in a small town for a year or so. It was the chance of a lifetime, of course, and by taking advantage of it, I was saving myself years and years of useless plugging."

"So!" she thought. "This is why Chris went ahead with the marriage! Because of her father, Ilsa had something to offer, while I had only—myself. Why, he's nothing but—an opportunist! What an idiot I was not to know at the time that, had he been a real person, he'd have told Ilsa he couldn't go on with the thing! And all these months, I've thought I loved him!"

They were nearing the Cody place now, at the very outskirts of Hawkinsville, and Chris was pulling up at the side of the road. "Listen, Mary," he said, "I'm in love with you. I've always been in love with you, and I want you to marry me, darling, as soon as I'm free."

He was leaning towards her now, searching her cool young profile for his answer. "How about it, Mary?" he persisted. "You will marry me, won't you, darling?"

Mary turned and looked at him, feeling as if she were looking at a stranger; as if, indeed, she had never known this man. "No, Chris," she said slowly, and her heart was calm. "No, I can't marry you."

"But, Mary! I thought . . ."

"That I loved you, too? Well, I thought so myself, for a while, but I was terribly mistaken. I realize now that I not only did not love you—but also, Chris, that I never really knew you. Let's go back to town, Chris. I'm anxious to get home."

The young doctor put one of his hands over hers as it lay on her lap. "You aren't angry with me for speaking of this," he asked apologetically, "so soon after your—your trouble?"

Mary shook her head. "No," she replied, forcing a smile to her lips. "Not at all. I simply want to get home."

He stared at her for one puzzled moment. Then, without a word, turned on the ignition, and, with a violent jerk, started down the road.

"Thank God, that's over!" she told herself, as, in silence, they sped towards town. "Thank God, I've found him out! And to think of the months of agony that I've gone through for this man!"

"I love Phil!" she told herself in wonder. "I've loved him all the time, and I was just too dazzled by false illusions of Chris to realize it. I must get back to him at once! I must see him at once! I wonder how soon I can leave for New York." And then, fearfully, "I haven't written to him for a week, and that was a horrid, formal little note. Oh, Phil, I want you! I need you!"

At last, they had reached Blondeau street, and were heading down Sixth. At last, they were turning into Concert, and nearing her home. She would write to Phil this afternoon. She would tell him she was leaving for New York soon.

Now they were pulling up at the curb in front of the Loring house, and without waiting for Chris to get out, she opened the door of the car, and stepped to the ground. "Good-by, Chris," she said breathlessly, and turned to smile at him.

He jumped from the car, and stood beside her. "Mary," he began, "think this thing over. Please think it over!"

He jumped from the car and came toward her.

Mary shook her head. "No, Chris. That won't do any good. My mind's made up." And placing her hand on his arm, she added, "I'm sorry, Chris . . . good-by."

There were sounds of voices in the living room as she entered the front hall. Mother was talking to someone, and Petey was there—and a man.

"Mary!" called her mother as the screen door slammed behind her. "Mary, dear, come in! You have a guest."

She had hoped her mother wouldn't call her. She had wanted to dash upstairs, and write her letter to Phil. Grudgingly, she turned from the stairway, and went towards the living room. There, standing in the doorway, she stared unbelievingly at the tall man who had risen from his chair when her mother called.

"Phil!" she gasped. "Phil!" And quite oblivious of her mother's and Petey's presence, she ran the length of the room, and flung her arms about him.

"Mary!" laughed Phil, and stooped to kiss her. "Darling, are you really glad to see me?"

"I've never been so glad to see anybody in all my life!" Mary cried. "Oh, Phil, how did you happen to come?"

"I wanted to see you, you little goose!" Phil returned with a grin. "Your letters didn't suit me at all. They were too few and far between—and somehow, I felt you were getting farther and farther away from me."

Mrs. Loring, with a reluctant Petey in tow, tiptoed unnoticed from the room.

"But, Phil," Mary protested. "I was going to write you this afternoon! I know my letters have been—awful. I've—I've been in a dreadful muddle for months, but now, at last, things are all cleared up!"

"I knew your mind was in chaos about something or other, Mary dear," he said tenderly, "and I didn't want to rush you. Yet, darling, I was getting terribly impatient."

Mary looked down at the worn pattern of the living room rug. "But that confusion's all over now, Phil," she said, feeling as if a great weight were falling from her shoulders as she spoke the words.

Phil put his hand under her chin, and looked searchingly into her eyes. "Well, then," he demanded, "how about answering that question I asked you an eon or so ago? You see, I have to sail for England next week, and, dearest, I wish you'd marry me, and go along."

Mary touched his lean tan cheek with one of her hands. "Darling," she said softly, "I'll go anywhere in the world with you. I love you, Phil! At last I know I love you!"

Phil caught her in his arms, and holding her firmly against his heart, as if never again would he let her go, bent to kiss her lips.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

Fence Can Save Hens From Cars

No one yet has quite decided what inspires a chicken to try to cross a road, but it is certain that motor travel takes heavy toll from many Michigan farm flocks in Charlevoix and other counties.

Farmers troubled with this drain on the poultry population probably could prevent the loss, save much of the produce in the farm garden and be able to count the flock at will if a fence is constructed, says C. G. Card, head of poultry husbandry at Michigan State college.

For a flock of 75 hens, it would be a simple job to construct a small range 75 feet square, or a little more than a tenth of an acre.

To facilitate sanitation, a duplicate range of the same size could be fenced in at the other end of the poultry house.

Besides reducing or eliminating the number of chickens killed on the highways, there would be far better control of these hens whose natural dusting burrows seem to be in flower or vegetable plots to the discouragement of gardeners.

On some farms the fenced in small range would permit more exercise for the flock, reducing cannibalism and egg eating by the hens, according to Poultryman Card.

MUDDLER PROVEN BEST BAIT FOR BIG TROUT

Is Favored Over Ever Popular Worm, Examinations Reveal

Investigation of the feeding habits of Michigan trout seems to indicate that the biggest trout are, on the average, taken on bait, and that the muddler is probably the best single bait for large trout.

Examination of the stomachs of nearly 700 trout showed that the number of insects eaten by trout decreases as the trout grows in size. Brown trout up to 9 inches in length ate 84 per cent insects but as they grew larger they turned to a crab and fish diet.

Muddlers, according to the investigators, were favored over the ever popular worm.

Fortune in Currency?

Lawton—While removing lath and plaster in a house he was wrecking, Lucien Lee found a bundle of paper currency, totaling about $17,000, plastered in the walls. The bills are dated 1862 and 1864, measure 3x1½ inches, and are mounted on cardboard. Some persons have suggested they are photographic reproductions, made either for counterfeiting or as a hobby. Lee hopes they may have historical if not monetary value.

CORRESPONDENCE

attend Sunday school here quite often this summer.

The Homer Loper family paid a friendly call at the Harry Mason home at Eastport last week, and also to the home of ye correspondent. Rev. Harry Batterbee of Green River was also a caller at the Mason home and Mrs. Danforth of South Arm.

Ye correspondent called at the Jesse Stewart farm Saturday and found so many grown-up so, and things changed, that he felt something like Rip Vanwinkle. They have a fine new barn; Miss Mildred is in the tenth grade in Mancelona high school; Miss Shirley is teaching a school of twenty pupils at Way school; and two boys attending home school.

The rural Sunday school rally will probably have among its speakers this year, besides Rev. Weaver, Rev. Meengs with his choir of young people. Rev. and Mrs. Nelson may be able to help us, and also some W. C. T. U. people. The young people will contest in a paper on "Harmful effects of liquor, tobacco, dancing and card playing. Prizes of $2.50, $1.50 and $1.00 will be given.

Prayer meeting will be held each Friday evening at the DeHaan home at the former Harvey Brouwer home at Eastport with Rev. DeHaan as leader. Rev. DeHaan has established a fine Sunday school of 20 members at the Derenzy school house southeast of Bellaire. Mrs. DeHaan is teacher of primary class and Mr. DeHaan of the young people. Miss Margaret Greenman is secretary.

Sunday school will be organized next Sunday at Greenwood at 1 p. m. and at Grand View at 2:30 p. m. by Rev. Weaver. He spoke at Creswell last Sunday morning and organized at Tupper at 2 p. m., with Paul Gardner as superintendent, Harvey Allen as assistant, Carolyn Maxwell as secretary, Mr. Gardner as treasurer, Roberta Patton as librarian, and program committee Frances Patton, Carolyn Marshall and Irene Patton; Mrs. Madsley organist and teacher of the juniors and Mr. Gardner of the young people.

Lee Donelson's people have got located on the former Dicks place north of Mancelona, and have a new tractor with which they are farming. The farm is of such length that it reminds one of the farm in South Dakota. It is said the wife and other members of this farmer's family were tearfully bidding him goodbye. A stranger inquired what the trouble was, when he was told the farmer was going away to be gone several months. When asked where he was going, the wife said, to the other end of the farm to feed the pigs.

Church-Sunday School

The achievement day exercises were attended at Bellaire Thursday by the biggest crowd ever. It kept ye correspondent busy answering "hello's" by former day and Sunday school pupils. Think we will have to invent something like Fred Thurston, former editor of the Torch had. He had a string fastened to his hat, down under the back of his coat, to his pocket. By simply keeping his hands in his pockets, and pulling this string, he went down one side of Central Lake's streets and back the other, tipping his hat to the ladies without any great effort, but to their wonderment, as they did not understand how it was done.

Mr. Kettunen tells us there were 900 handicraft exhibits, and probably as many articles in the clothing exhibit. For the last four years we have guessed correctly which dress was the best. This year we thought one by an Alden young lady, was the best, and Miss Luella Hansen's of Elk Rapids school, the second best. Miss Hansen is a livewire in Sunday school and League, as well as day school work, and writes the school items for the school.

The boys had some wonderful work, and we thought the aeroplane the best. Mr. Bustler rhymes with "hustler," and that is the right name. His handicraft work was fine. He goes back to Creswell another year. The school commissioner and agricultural agent were busy people, and much credit is due them for the success of the meeting. Mr. Kettunen and Miss Boyle certainly had their hands full. It appears that it would be well to limit the exhibitors to the three best from each school, as was done in the spelling contest, having a committee of three members to judge the exhibits in each school, and then sending but the three best to county exhibit. It's too much of a task to put on two persons—the judging of 2,000 exhibits.

NORWOOD

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Telgenhoff, who live near Central Lake, were visitors on Monday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Empey.

Mrs. George Sarasin of Charlevoix was a Sunday guest at the home of Mrs. McKay while Mr. Sarasin and family visited with his father, who lives near Kewadin.

Mr. and Mrs. John Racicot and granddaughter, Miss Louise Nowland, also Mrs. Racicot's father, George Lord of Petoskey, called on Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Richardson Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Margaret Heil, who spent the winter in Chicago with her daughter, Mrs. Maggie Cutler, arrived on Saturday of last week to spend the summer at the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Heil.

Mr. and Mrs. Delos Crandall and son Donald of Traverse City accompanied by Mrs. Crandall's mother, Mrs. Henry Adamson of Bellaire were guests at the home of Frank Richardson and family on Thursday of last week.

Mrs. William Jolliffe entertained a group of boys and girls on Saturday afternoon in honor of her son William Jr.'s tenth birthday anniversary. The afternoon was spent in playing games, after which the hostess served a delightful lunch with a beautiful birthday cake. The guest of honor received many lovely gifts and they all departed, wishing him many more happy birthdays.

Miss Elizabeth Dhaseleer and seven of her pupils, also several others from this community, attended achievement day program, which was held at the East Jordan high school on Tuesday of last week. The Norwood school received honor for the serving of hot lunches during the winter months. Esther Harwood also received honor in her sewing. May we give three cheers to the children for their fine work, also the splendid cooperation from their teacher and leader.

Michigan's state flower is the apple blossom.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT

Production of Clean Milk is Not Difficult

A few simple and easy practices worked into the daily chore of milking will enable the dairyman to produce milk of a low bacteria count. These practices include the provision of clean utensils, clean cows and stables, prompt cooling of the milk, and icing particularly in hot weather to keep the milk properly cooled until delivered. The application of this plan is the same where milk is produced for any purpose whether for bottled milk, butter or cheese, ice cream, or evaporated or condensed milk.

Quality products are in greater demand among housewives and other consumers. Bacteria cause off-flavors and souring. Off-flavors mean less demand for milk, butter, cheese or other products. High quality at all times increased the consumption of dairy products and assists the farmer in maintaining a market for milk.

The chief source of bacteria which get into milk on the farm are the utensils-cans, bucket, strainers, separators, milking machines, coolers and so forth. It is figured that about 85% of the bacteria in milk comes from these utensils. That being the case these utensils should have the best of care to prevent bacteria from being on them at the time of milking. They should be washed after each milking and sterilized before each milking.

Hot water is usually not effective as a sterilizing agent. In order to properly sterilize with hot water the utensils must be submerged for at least two minutes in water of not less than 180 degrees Fahrenheit. Under average conditions this is difficult to do. The water after being taken off the stove does not hold its heat long enough to do the work. The use of chlorine solution or of steam properly administered is essential for proper sterilization.

The United States Department of Agriculture and veterinarians generally are recommending disinfecting cows' udders and milkers' hands before and after milking each cow with a chlorine solution to control the spread of mastitis. This solution kills the germs that cause mastitis. The solution will not harm the hands, or the teats, or the skin of the udders.

Milking machines need sanitary care which may effectively be done by using a sterilizing solution of chlorine in which to emerse the milking tubes when not in use.

Even where steam is used for sterilizing bottles and equipment it is an excellent practice to supplement this practice by using a chlorine solution legislators at Lansing is grimly determined to purge the party of Michigan of the growing suspicion that conventions have been controlled in recent years by big city bosses.

The fiery, crusading Elton R. Eaton of Plymouth, in Wayne county, led a band of young Republicans in the house to effect passage of a bill aimed at the clipping of Barnard's wings at Detroit. In the senate the bill encountered an unfriendly committee. A substitute bill was hurriedly introduced by Senator D. Hale Brake of Stanton.

With the McKay inquiry adding fuel to the flames, the Eaton-Brake allies are demanding a thorough "clean-up" of the party, once and for all. Apprehensive lest the party be accused of conducting a "whitewashing" investigation, James Thomson, chairman of the republican state central committee, sent an invitation to Attorney General Frank Murphy at Washington for action by G-men. Murphy is said to have smiled cryptically at the letter and remarked: "He is just two weeks late."

Department of justice agents have been sifting possible evidence of fraud in connection with the Blue Water bridge financing. While it is very doubtful whether anythiog worthy of grand jury consideration will be found, Murphy is reported to be hopeful that G-men will be able to substantiate the charge which the New Deal governor made frequently last fall that gumbling interests were leading contributors to the Fitzgerald campaign chest. Thomson invites an inquiry, pointing out that the committee has a treasury deficit of $43,000.

Messrs. Eaton and Brake have grabbed hold of the lion by the tail. Or, in language of the street, the party purge has become a "hot potato." Somebody's hand are sure to be burned!

Dunckel-Brown Feud

When Governor Luren D. Dickinson announced shortly after taking the oath of office that he would not be a candidate to succeed himself, party leaders immediately begun to speculate on (1) whom would Dickinson appoint to be lieutenant-governor? (2) who would be the republican nominee for governor in 1940?

The governor let it be known that he would not select his successor as lieutenant governor during the legislative session, and probably would make no choice at all.

As for the 1940 nomination, capital observers began to survey the "cabinet" to weigh possibilities.

Simultaneously, while the McKay sideshow was getting a full house, Auditor General Vernon J. Brown precipitated a counter attraction with a disclosure about cancellation of state purchasing orders involving many thousands of dollars, and substitute orders at higher prices.

State Treasurer Miller Dunckel, who with Brown and Thomas Read are responsible for state purchases, promptly branded Brown as a publicity seeker and declared openly that he (Brown) was courting the nomination in 1940. Dunckel said that the higher prices could be explained.

Thus, the first inter-cabinet feud has started.

The decision of Governor Dickinson to sign a bill appropriating $2,500,000 for public school tuitions comes as a relief to educators.

Grover C. Dillman, director of the state budget, recommended that this amount be authorized as an advance payment on the school's allocation of state money for the coming fiscal year. Dr. Eugene B. Elliott, superintendent of public instruction, reported that none of the financially distressed districts would have to close public schools. Rep. John P. Espie, chairman of the house ways and means committee, added encouragement to the picture by saying that the committee had agreed upon a $37,000,000 allocation for the schools and that it might not be necessary to deduct the $2,500,000 from that sum.

Dillman opined: "The state is very sound financially. Its net debt is only some $5 per capita, and only 12 states have a lower net debt and some states have a debt nearly 20 times as high as Michigan's. From a long-term point of view, the state government is sound financially, although it is seriously embarrassed as to immediate cash requirements."

Governor Dickinson indicated that the 1939-40 budget would be balanced despite the $2,500,000 payment this spring.

Labor Mediation

Two of the major problems—civil service and labor—have had identical treatment in the legislature:

1. A drastic labor relations bill, calling for the Fitzgerald 10-day strike notice, was passed by the house by republican caucus agreement only to be thrown out by a senate labor committee.

2. A civil service bill, calling for reduced classifications so that less than one-half of all employees would be affected, was passed by the house only to be sidetracked in the senate.

The senate labor committee, of which liberal Senator Harry Hittle of Lansing is chairman, has reported out a substitute bill. This measure would create a three-man labor mediation board to seek settlement of difficulties between employer and employee in intra-state commerce. As nearly all of the major industries are subject to the federal Wagner act, the state mediation board would affect chiefly the small industries which are now outside the C.I.O. fiebl.

Since the United States Supreme court outlawed sit-down strikes, some legislators feel there is no pressing need for Michigan legislation. Senator Hittle, however, feels that the party cannot ignore labor and that it should woo workers by legalizing picketing, restricting court injunctions, and providing machinery for collective bargaining.

Civil Service Again

All existing eligible lists would be abolished by the Brake civil service bill which was reported out for consideration of the senate the other day.

This measure, a substitute for the house civil service bill, would require the civil service commission to conduct new examinations.

Exempt from civil service would be all professional people (even attorneys and nurses have had to take a civil service examination), persons in specialized occupations such as bank examiners, insurance actuaries, cashiers, sales tax auditors and so on; division heads, court employees, labor department deputies, attorney general employees and all unskilled workers.

Governor Dickinson has assured friends of civil service of fair play.

With separate bills passed by the house and senate, the final measure will be agreed upon in conference committee.

The Lansing sideshows, however, have taken much of the "heat" off labor and civil service. European headlines, too, are diverting the voter's attention from the legislative scene.

A New Force to Banish War

The extraordinary spread of the MRA (Moral Re-armament) Movement which is pushing its campaign in many odd ways, including 5,000,000 milk-bottle tops, and which now numbers international "Peace Armies" by hundreds of thousands and includes members ranging from Papuan head-hunters to kings and queens, is reported in an article which is one of the many human interest features in The American Weekly with the April 30 issue of The Detroit Sunday Times.

wheels of industry will start to hum, men will go back to work and earn money to buy the necessities of life (which happen to be what the farmer produces). Pour these billions of dollars back into industry and we won't have unemployment and glutted markets. If the government would share losses as well as profits, we would see money invested in industry. But as it now stands, with the government taking the biggest share of the profits of industry, nobody is going to sink money into enterprises to support Roosevelt's political machine. Mnybe these statements are not an answer to the farmer's problems, but they're something to think about nevertheless.

In case you hadn't noticed, those are mighty nice looking venetian blinds recently put up in the Charlevoix County State Bank. They were the final touch to a most complete and pleasing job of interior decoration.

I acknowledge, with thanks and no little satisfaction, the following communiemion from Rep. Douglas D. Tibbits: "You may be interested in knowing that your article on deer conditions, published a few weeks ago and referred by me to the conservation committee of the house had a lot to do with their decision in reporting out the bill to permit the department of conservation to allow doe hunting in certain areas. Mr. MacKay, the chairman, was greatly helped by your nrticle." Any time a newspaper can be of help in formulating public policy of general benefit, it is fulfilling its purpose.

There nre instances where illegal fishing proves very expensive. Francis Touchstone, 26, of Jordan township, Antrim county, found this out recently. He took a wallop at Conservation Officer' Leslie Miles when the officer went to his home to serve a warrant charging possession of n spear on Jordnn river. He also bumped his car into Miles' auto and otherwise made himself obnoxious. Taken into justice court, Touchstone was assessed fine and costs of $27.80 and sentenced to 15 days in jail. It is gratifying that Miles stood his ground and got the man. "Les," from personal observation, is one of the most active conservation officers in this district. He has a tough territory and handles it well.

Well, we're going to have a Perch Festival May 17 to 21. There won't be any king or queen, but some real honest-to-goodness fishin' which everybody knows Charlevoix can produce. The event is being heralded far and wide through metropolitan newspapers and correspondence to individuals. It looks like a start toward one of the biggest fish events in Michigan and next year maybe we'll have a "King of Perch" and all the rest of the bally-hoo which is expected as a part of such events.

It's hard to believe, because it seems that only yesterday it was winter, but Saturday is the opening of the trout fishing season. There's going to be a lot of fishin' widows from now on if the signs up and down main street nre any indication. All the boys are getting ready to go and I'm going to be there too, that is, providing I can elbow my way near enough to a stream to get a line into the water. And what's more, there isn't going to be nny fibbing this year about the big ones that got away. The boys have all promised to "put up, or shut up."

A small down payment and small monthly payments will buy the new furniture you need. Call your GAMBLE Store, phone 193.—Adv. 17t1.

Invocation was given by William C. Palmer, school commissioner, followed by the address of welcome by E. E. Wade, superintendent of schools, East Jordan, with the response by Margaret Strehl of East Jordan. Next, probably the most enjoynble feature of the afternoon was the style revue in which some one hundred and fifty girls participated, each wearing the dress which she completed in the project. The girls came out upon the stage in groups of ten. The four main divisions presented were sports, dress, wool nnd school girl, depending on the year in the project. It was indeed most gratifying to note how suitable and attractive the dresses were.

The 4-H club pledge was led by Miss Wilma Krulik, Charlevoix, with all club members standing. Miss Beryl McDonald, music director, East Jordan, then led the group in several community songs. A most pleasing act was then introduced. This was a roller skating performance by Ray March, his little daughter, Marcelyn Marie, and Malcolm Gokes. Miss Beatrice Boyle, assistant state club leader, made brief remarks and announced the county honor roll. Ralph Woodward of Vanderbilt and Elmer Cilke of Boyne Falls, played and sang two guitar numbers. A. G. Kettunen, state club leader, in his usual capable manner, gave a short talk on 4-H club work, closing his remarks by announcing the handicraft and wood identification winners. O. F. Walker, district club leader, closed the program by presenting the pins and certificates of achievement to the club leaders.

We certainly want to express our appreciation to Mr. Walcutt, Mrs. Larsen and Mrs. Benson, leaders of the East Jordan projects, who contributed their time and efforts so generously in staging this huge exhibit. We also want to express our appreciation to all of the other leaders in the county who are responsible for having led such a fine winter program.

EXTENSION GROUPS MEET BOYNE CITY

ANNUAL ACHIEVEMENT DAY PROGRAM IS MAY 11TH

Dr. Alexander Campbell, Michigan Department of Health, to be Principle Speaker

(By B. C. Mellencamp)

The annual Charlevoix county ladies' achievement day, to be held in the Methodist church, Boyne City, on Thursday, May 11, will be a fitting climax for the many communities in this county that have participated in the home economies extension activity this past winter.

The big feature of the day will be an address by Dr. Alexander Campbell, chief obstetrical consultant of the Michigan Department of Health. He will have a most important message of great interest to mothers. You will certainly want to be present to enjoy this address and the balance of a most interesting program.

The forenoon session will start at eleven o'clock under the chairmanship of Mrs. Lavina Lockman, Boyne City. Reports of the election of new officers and the secretary's report will be given by Miss Bernice Bashaw, East Jordan. Miss Helen Noyes, our extension specialist in charge of the home management project, will give brief remarks pertaining to the results of the program. Other entertainment features will make the forenoon most enjoyable.

The noon meal will be served cafeteria style by the missionary ladies of the Methodist church.

The afternoon session will be featured by the address by Dr. Campbell and timely remarks by Rev. Armstrong, who is working splendidly in rural districts throughout the county furthering religious education. In addition, he will favor the audience with several numbers on his musical saw.

Another pleasing feature will be a style revue which will depict dresses of different periods. The history of extension work, as it pertains to home economics activity, will also be shown. Included in the program will be readings and entertainment features all of which should merit your attendance.

This year some sixteen different communities have participated in the project. They have been greatly enthused over the fine program and will be delighted to have the public as their guests on this occasion. Put down the date of May 11 on your calendar and plan to enjoy the entire day.

SATURDAY, MAY 13 BIG DAY FOR CHARLEVOIX

THREE EVENTS ARE BEING MERGED TO PROVIDE BANNER DAY OF CELEBRATION HERE

Combine Corner Stone Ceremony at New City Hall, Opening of Perch Festival and Annual Class C Track Meet —Extensive Plans Made for Three Events

Three events are being merged to make Saturday, May 13, a banner day in Charlevoix.

City officials and committees of the Board of Commerce are working out plans for a corner stone ceremony at the new city hall, combining the dedication with a day of merchandising bargains; the day marks the opening of Charlevoix's first annual Perch Festival, scheduled for May 13 to 21, inclusive, and also brings the annual northern Michigan class C conference track meet, with competing schools from several northern Michigan counties.

For the corner stone laying ceremony, invitations have been extended D. R. Kennicott, Chicago, regional PWA director, J. L. Rounds and Forrest M. Logan, assistant directors, and city officials from Petoskey, Harbor Springs, Boyne City, East Jordan, Central Lake, Bellaire, Mancelona and other northern Michigan cities.

At a meeting of city council members and the merchants' committee of the Board of Commerce, tentative plans call for participation by the school band, decorating of stores and streets for the occasion and closing of business places between the hours of 2 and 3 p. m. Saturday during the ceremony. Saturday will be made a merchandising bargain day with "Dedication Specials" offered by local business places.

Inasmuch as Saturday is the opening of the Perch Festival, arrangements are being made to provide this sport for visiting officials and others so desiring following the ceremony at the city hall. In connection with the Perch Festival, Veterans of Foreign Wars have completed arrangements to have five large rafts anchored in Round lake for perch fishermen and will provide transportation to and from the rafts as well as fishing equipment and bait. Cooperation of coast guards in patroling Round lake will provide a safeguard against accidents. The Board of Commerce is seeking the cooperation of local restaurants in providing perch dinners at a nominal cost.

The several local trolling camps catering to visiting fishermen are making their own plans to handle sportsmen. The event is being given widespread publicity through metropolitan newspapers and direct mail advertising. Success of the event from the standpoint of providing fish has been assured by definite start of the annual perch run over the past week end. Excellent fishing is now available not only in Round lake harbor, but also at various points in Lake Charlevoix. It is expected the "run" will be at its height during festival week.

The annual class C track meet, being handled by local school athletic officials, will bring competing teams from Harbor Springs, Boyne City, East Jordan, Gaylord, Mancelona, Grayling and other class C schools of the region.

With the celebration day over a week away, plans will be enlarged and announced when available.

"CLEAN-UP" WEEK DESIGNATED FOR MAY 8-13

Citizens, Fire and Health Officials to Join in Annual Effort

Charlevoix's annual clean-up week will start Monday, May 8, and continue through Saturday, May 13th and as long thereafter as is necessary for completion.

Through proclamation by Mayor Robert Bridge, that period for the annual "Clean-Up" week is designated. Health and fire officials and citizens generally will cooperate in this effort to properly "dress" up the community for the summer season.

The immediate purpose of Clean-Up Week is to clear yards, alleys and vacant property of all refuse, rubbish and garbage piles, thus reducing fire and health hazards and giving the city a cleaner appearance.

Leo Allard, street commissioner, asks citizens to place rubbish in substantial containers at the curb or in alleys to be picked up by truck. Citizens are asked not to just dump the rubbish in piles, as this method is not satisfactory and causes extra work for city employes.

EAST PARK AND WATERFRONT WORK PROGRESSES

Concrete Sidewalk Being Constructed in Front of Yacht Slips

Rapid progress of the WPA project for improvement of East Park and the yacht slips between Mason and Antrim streets on Round lake is noted this week.

A cement sidewalk is being constructed along the yacht slips and improvements made on the docks. Plans also call for improvement of the roadway in front of the slips.

Work of grading and sodding East Park is under way and will soon be completed. Steel sheet piling will be driven along the uncompleted portion of East Park.

The parks work comes under a city-wide WPA parks improvement project which was started last fall.

SPRING SCHEDULE STATE FERRIES NOW OPERATIVE

Two Boats Maintaining Trips Every Hour and a Half Daily

State ferry boats at the Straits of Mackinac are operating on the regular spring schedule this week after being delayed for a week by ice conditions in the Straits.

Under the spring schedule, two of the regular state-owned boats are available for automobile transportation. A boat leaves both Mackinaw City and St. Ignace at six a. m. for the first trip each morning and every hour and a half thereafter until 9 p. m., when the last trip is made each day.

Ice conditions near the Mackinaw City docks which have handicapped the ice-crushing ferry boats throughout the winter made it impossible for the regular state boats to start operations on April 16 according to schedule.

The spring schedule will remain in effect until June 1 when all five of the boats comprising the state fleet will begin service. State Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagoner pointed out, however, that schedules may be stepped up before June 1 if traffic conditions should warrant.

THREE CRUISES ARE SCHEDULED IN JUNE

HARRISBURG, PA. GROUP TO INITIATE SEASON

Arrival June 20 to be Followed by Grand Rapids Chamber of Commerce and Erie, Pa. Party

According to Gordon B. Todd, secretary of the Board of Commerce, at least three and possibly more cruises are scheduled to visit Charlevoix via Chicago, Duluth & Georgian Bay Transit Line steamers during June.

The first cruise, coming on the Str. South American, is the Harrisburg, Pa. Chamber of Commerce on Tuesday, June 20th.

The annual "Good Will" cruise of the Grand Rapids Chamber of Commerce is scheduled for Thursday, June 22nd, on either the North American or Alabama. This cruise, the second annual, will be a several days' trip from Muskegon around through the Straits to Bay City and return, with seven ports of call listed on the schedule. Leaving Muskegon on Monday, June 19, the Fellowship group will arrive here on June 22nd before going north. Plans for entertainment of the visitors are now under way.

The third scheduled cruise will bring the Erie, Pa. Chamber of Commerce here on Tuesday, June 27th.

A June convention, announcement of which will be made shortly, is also listed at the Belvedere Hotel, it is understood.

CHARLEVOIX WINS FIRST BALL GAME

DEFEATED HARBOR SPRINGS 6 TO 5 FRIDAY

Play Boyne City Here Thursday Afternoon—Participate in East Jordan Track Meet Friday

Charlevoix high school's baseball team nosed out Harbor Springs by a 6 to 5 score last Friday to win their opening contest of the season.

Bruce Henley, pitching the initial game, limited Harbor to 7 hits, struck out 14 batters, allowed 4 bases on balls and made three hits for an all-around good performance. Ernie Nowland, catching for Charlevoix, also made three hits, thus dividing batting honors. King, Harbor hurler, gave up 9 hits, struck out 11, allowed 4 bases on balls and struck one batter. He accounted for three of Harbor's hits.

Charlevoix came from behind with two runs in the last inning to sew up the game. The Rayders scored 3 runs in the first inning and one in the third, which Harbor tied with two runs each in the first and third and then went ahead with a run in the 6th. Charlevoix scored twice in the 7th and final inning to win.

The score by innings:

Charlevoix .....3 0 1 0 0 0 2—6
Harbor Springs....2 0 2 0 0 1 0—5

Charlevoix will play their second game on the south side athletic field diamond at 4:30 Thursday afternoon, May 4, meeting Boyne City, who dropped a game to East Jordan last week.

Enter Track Friday

Coach Coleman's thin-clads will enter their first competition of the season Friday afternoon, competing in an invitational meet against East Jordan and Boyne City at East Jordan. While a complete line-up of contestants has not been made, Coleman expects to use George Light and Bruce Henley in the dashes, Bob Goss in the hurdles, high jump and broad jump, Harry Withers in the pole vault, Kenneth Staley in the half mile, Don Tillotson in the quarter-mile, Bert Pearl in the shot put, and Jim Martin in the mile event.

The meet Friday will provide the first competition for several of Coach Coleman's candidates, who are inexperienced for the most part, and will give an indication of Charlevoix's success in the conference meet scheduled to be held here Saturday, May 13.

OPENING OF TROUT SEASON UNFAVORABLE

Cold Weather, Bright Sun Combined to Defeat Army of Anglers

Trout fishing conditions in this district are expected to become normal this week after an opening week end which saw what is believed to be the largest army of anglers in the state's history cope with conditions far from favorable.

Cold weather and a bright sun combined to defeat most fishermen Saturday and Sunday. There were some limit catches made, but these were mostly taken on small streams with bait. River fishermen generally had poor luck. Stover pond on Cedar river, a favorite spot, was an exception, according to reports, producing many limit catches.

As far as local fishermen were concerned, only a few caught the limit and these catches were made on Stover, Monroe, Loch, McGeagh and other small streams.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By Ken Usher

It sure does one good to see the way local business places are prettying up for the summer season. Fessenden & Son and Central Drug Store are all slicked up with new inside paint jobs and notice where Angus Fochtman over at the Charlevoix Oil Co. got too big for his office and they had to put an addition on it. Thought that would happen sooner or later.

Isn't it positively uncanny how that old adage: "Birds of a Feather Stick Together," works out? There's Ex-Governur Frank Murphy who left Michigan with a deficit of around $30,000,000, down there as a member of the cabinet of President Roosevelt, who has got the nation in the hole to the tune of over $40,000,000,000. Murphy's exploitations were just "peanuts" compared to Roosevelt's, but then it is to be supposed that one who made a showing like Murphy did would prove an apt pupil in Roosevelt's "theory college." It all sounds rather funny until you learn that the cost of federal government per capita (for every man, woman and child in the United States) had mounted to $62.91 in 1937.

It took a lot of persuasion to get this over in this column: "WANTED—Barber work. Women's hair cutting a specialty. Gus Mielke, St. James, Mich." If your memory serves you well, you can trace this to a former local barber who last fall got mixed up with a pig over on Beaver Island.

Charles E. See, a former Charlevoixan now living at The Dalles, Oregan, chides the Courier reporter for having Mrs. E. L. Dawson at home when she's visiting at his place. That's one of those embarrassing situations the newspaper often gets into. Otherwise he says: "Mrs. Dawson spent last week with us and it was mighty

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Two of the legislators' anti-boss moves appear to be fizzling out.

Investigators have failed to uncover anything about Frank McKay that faintly resembles grand jury evidence. The preliminary report by Attorney General Thomas Read said the Grand Rapids millionaire Republican had committed no legal wrong in his fee dealings for the Port Huron bridge bonds. Even Governor Dickinson graciously accepted the findings.

The anti-Barnard bill, proposing the holding of separate congressional conventions in Wayne county instead of one county session, is badly snagged in the senate where the counting of noses indicates an even deadlock.

Back of the cooling off of the anti boss ardor is a growing suspicion among republican legislators that the purge may back-fire, possibly splitting the administration into two armed camps, unless someone can prove to a jury that Messrs. McKay and Barnard "did us wrong."

WE MUST PROFIT BY EXPERIENCE

Again and again we are told that if past generations had acted wisely, they would have corrected many evils of government and business while they were yet small, instead of allowing them to grow into the monstrous problems which they are today.

During the Murphy regime in Michigan, the sit-down strike paralyzed industry, worked havoc with living conditions among all the people and created a dangerous mental state. Every citizen then felt that the most crying need of the hour and the most immediate legislation should be a labor act; which would prevent such a situation from arising in the future and would substitute satisfactory working conditions for all.

To date, Michigan has passed no such labor legislation. Why not? Are we waiting like past generations did until the problem is again upon us in even greater seriousness?

Other states of the union have passed labor acts satisfactory to both employer and employe. But Michigan, one of the nation's greatest industrial states, lags behind and to date has taken no legislative action. The labor bill of the late Governor Fitzgerald was passed by the house but the senate failed to take favorable action on it; nor have they presented a worthy substitute.

It is the belief of this paper that before this session of the legislature ends, this state should have a thoughtful labor law, honestly representing labor, capital and the public.

A DREAM HOUSE

You climb the hill, and take a look,
And over there across the brook
Among the trees is plainly seen
A little house all trimmed in green.
A garden filled with roses rare,
Each spreading sweetness everywhere.
An antique picket fence surrounds
My little house and all its grounds.
A winding walk of rarest stone,
A perfect lawn, all freshly mown.
A fireplace in the living room
To help to chase away the gloom.
Yes, this is mine, and what is more.
The latch string hangs outside the door.
To you, I know, so real it seems.
To me, it's just a house of dreams.

FACING THE LIQUOR QUESTION

At last a governor sits in the chair in Lansing that is making the WETS of the state sweat a little. This is no reflection on any of his predecessors for when they took office they were forced by circumstance to refrain from antagonizing this element in order to get their job. This governor, on the other hand, has been an avowed DRY all of his life. He could not have been governor any other way than by the manner we now find him there. This is a good thing, for the liquor condition in the state has been getting rapidly worse year after year. One of the worst phases of this question, to our way of thinking, is the foul conditions which exist in the townships of the state where there is not adequate police protection for the people of these communities, and where violations of all kinds have been allowed to exist without ONE SINGLE THING BEING DONE ABOUT IT. We know one township that has more than twenty saloons in it and it is a pity to drive through it late at night and see the people emerging from the saloons that are allowed to run there, so drunk they can't stand up. Men, women and youngsters of all ages. They feed it to them until it runs out of their ears, and decent people don't dare go past these places after midnight.

You may be sure we are very glad the governor is throwing the fear of the Lord into this element and he will get all the backing it is possible for us to give him in his efforts to straighten out what is rapidly becoming a situation much worse than the old saloon ever thought of being.

PEOPLE LOSE ON FLOUR

Another public ownership scheme that hasn't lived up to the politicians' promises or the people's expectations!

Since North Dakota established a state operated flour mill and elevator in 1922 the project has lost $4,511,015, an average of approximately $275,000 a year, according to Chief Auditor J. M. Shirek, quoted in the Fargo Forum.

During its 16½ years of operation the flour mill has produced 9,161,919 barrels of flour and has "gone in the red" on every barrel. The smallest loss was ten cents per barrel in 1929, but for the first six months of 1938 the loss averaged $1.39 per barrel. —Public Service Magazine.

Looks as if Great Britain is still willing to feed the mad dogs a little if they will talk about being appeased.

"If you review some of the stories of American business, or some of the stories of local business in your town, you will find that the government did not organize these enterprises. Always it was a combination of the inventor, the investor and management which made industry grow. America became economically great because she encouraged the man with the idea, the man with the money to develop it, and the executive to manage the enterprise."—Wendell L. Willkie.

appendicitis operation. We have not heard as to the results, but hope all are getting along well. There has been a number of this kind of operation the past winter and spring.

Officers at Greenwood are: Superintendent, Mrs. Wm. Ward; assistant superintendent, Mr. Morse; secretary, Miss Lillian Ward; treasurer, Mrs. Lancaster. Sunday school will meet each Sunday at 1:00 o'clock p. m. Some from the Lake Shore did not understand the time, and came in the forenoon and went back again.

It is hoped that we can get Mrs. Underwood to repeat her sermon at the Sunday schools that she gave Sunday evening on "The Bible." It was illustrated by other readings that some use in place of the Bible. She told how the Bible is passing out of use in the public schools, as well as by some church pastors. She told of the Sunday school work being the most important in keeping the youth from going astray.

John Essenberg of Atwood is discing the orchard of the writer this week, as well as doing discing for a number of other farmers at Atwood, and in this vicinity. He uses his tractor to run his grist-mill at Atwood in the day time, and does his discing five or six hours each night. He has headlights on his tractor so that he has light for the operation. He and his brother are two hustlers who keep business going. His brother, Melvin, runs the Atwood gas station.

The American Sunday School Union's young people's conference will convene this year at Brethren, August 14th to 18th. Rev. Weaver would like each of his Sunday schools to send one to three delegates. Transportation will be afforded. Cost of the meeting will be $1.50 apiece, unless each learn 300 Bible verses, in which case, it will be nothing. Each brings a certain amount of food, which is mentioned in the program. Rev. Weaver will be one of the instructors.

Many friends of the late W. P. Porter will regret his passing at East Jordan last week. He had many friends here in business as otherwise. He had always been a great helper in charity work, and in the temperance cause. He was a fine business manager and always believed in others helping themselves as much as possible. A trite saying of his was, "What is given away, is usually worth about what it costs." In the lumbering days, as well as later, in the canning industry, he was always found strictly honest in his deals.

Officers elected at Grand View were: Superintendent, Mrs. Ruby Chisholm; assistant superintendent, J. W. Morse; secretary, Miss Mildred Meggison; treasurer, Miss Phyllis Hale; organist, Mrs. Homer Loper; chorister, Miss Harris; librarian, Zibe DeForest; program committee, Misses Betty DeForest and Mabel Patton, and Zibe DeForest. They chose for their special a song by three girls. Creswell's special will be harmonica music by Marie Hubbell. Sunday school will meet at 2:30 p. m. Teachers at Grand View: primary, Miss Phyllis Hale; juniors, Mrs. Homer Loper; young people, Miss Harris; Bible class, Homer Loper.

Mr. and Mrs. William Welch of Eastport are sorrowing this week over the death of their eldest son, Fay, eleven years of age. Saturday he went away trout fishing. Not returning at supper time a search was made for him by many neighbors besides his family and by a State Police. At 3 o'clock Sunday morning he was found, drowned, in the Eastport creek. He had fallen into a deep hole. The family lives on M-88, about a mile from Eastport, east. Besides his parents, he leaves two sisters. We have not heard (Monday) of the funeral arrangements. The parents and family have the deep sympathy of many relatives and friends.

The mark of the man who
OIL-PLATES YOUR ENGINE
...more than an oil-change

AND there's still another big mark in favor of this townsman of yours and his fellow Mileage Merchants of the U.S.A. On an average they're far more successful in gaining regular oil customers than stations that can't do OIL-PLATING. "They would be!" you'll say when you have your own Conoco Mileage Merchant give your own engine the plus of OIL-PLATING. Swiftly he'll drain your old oil that's out-of-season, and make the change to your correct grade of Conoco Germ Processed oil, the patented oil that OIL-PLATES.

Now the instant you drive from his pit or lift what happens?...A definite portion of your fresh Summer Germ Processed oil gets coated—PLATED—all over the engine's insides, as firmly as chromium is plated to the bumpers. Next stop you make, this closely attached OIL-PLATING won't drain down because it can't. So your next start—your next hundred starts—your next thousand miles and more—cannot "take it out" on your engine. For it is constantly surfaced throughout with inbuilt, slippy OIL-PLATING. Your exclusive Germ Processed oil keeps up this OIL-PLATING and keeps up the oil-level...plain to see! See Your Mileage Merchant today for your correct change of oil plus OIL-PLATING. MICHIGAN LEADS COMMERCIAL FISHERIES YIELD

Produced Nearly Thirty Million Pounds; Catches Off 11%

Complete compilation of figures just released in connection with annual yields of the commercial fisheries of the lake states shows a decrease of 11 per cent in volume and six percent in value for 1937.

Michigan led all lake states in the production of fishery products with a catch of 28,984,000 pounds. Second was Ohio, followed by Wisconsin, New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana, and Minnesota.

Based on value to the fisherman, lake trout with a production of 9,428,000 pounds valued at $1,521,000 was the most important species. Second was the chub take followed by whitefish, blue pike, lake herring, yellow pike and yellow perch. Lake Erie was the most productive of the lakes, followed in order by Lakes Michigan, Superior, Huron, Ontario and the international lakes of northern Minnesota.

The fisheries employed 9,331 persons including 6,418 fishermen, 2,878 persons in wholesale and manufacturing establishments, and 35 on transporting craft. Salaries paid in wholesale and manufacturing establishments amounted to $2,595,000 and products produced were valued at $3,195,000. Total yield of the lakes was 83,958,000 pounds valued at $6,033,000.

REQUESTS FOR PINE SEEDLINGS ARE HIGH

Conservation Dept. Reports Orders for 2,500,000 Young Trees

More orders for pines from state nurseries have been received thus far this year by the department of conservation than at any previous time.

A total of 365 orders represents requests for 2,500,000 young trees. Orders are still coming in despite the fact that the total is already more than 1,000,000 trees above the figure for 1938. Supply of both white pine seedlings and transplants has been completely sold out.

Only stock now available is three-year-old, six-inch Norway pine seedlings at $5 a thousand; four-year-old, six-inch Norway pine transplants at $7.50 a thousand, and two-year-old five-inch jack pine seedlings at $2 a thousand.

NET RAINBOW TROUT FROM BOYNE RIVER

Over 400 Transferred Over Power Dam Into Upper Pond

More than 400 rainbow trout, ranging in size up to 10-pounders, have been netted and placed in the Michigan Public Service power pond above the Boyne river dam which stops the fish in their annual journey up the stream to spawning grounds.

Working at night with flashlights, a crew of six men under the supervision of Conservation Officer Ed. Denell, trapped the trout in a net placed on the gravel shoals below the dam, later releasing them in the waters of the pond. The trap net was removed from the river Friday night, conservation authorities said, to leave the river clear for the scores of fishermen the opening morning of the trout season.

REPORT 25 FOREST FIRES SINCE FIRST OF JANUARY

Loss Lowest in 4-Month Period in Last Three Years

Twenty-five forest fires destroyed 599 acres of forest land this year, the state conservation department reports.

In 1936 the lowest loss for the period was recorded when 60 fires were reported for a loss of 576 acres. In 1937, 6,358 acres were lost in 193 fires.

AUTO FATALITIES ARE LOWER SO FAR IN 1939

Health Department Reports Drop from 277 to 253 First 3 Months

Deaths from automobile accidents totaled 253 during the first three months of the year, the state health department has announced. For the same period of 1938 277 fatalities were reported.

From 1937 to 1938 the number of deaths dropped 34 per cent and the state was complimented by the National Safety council for its lowest rate since 1933.

In January of this year 84 were killed, compared to 121 in 1938, 81 in February as compared to 71 last year and in March 88 and 85.

The mayor of one southern city suggested that all policemen should be permitted to enforce the laws. It's a rather novel suggestion, but it has merit.

NYA FURNISHES EMPLOYMENT IN COUNTY

Thirty-Seven Youths Given Gainful Jobs, Report Reveals

The Michigan National Youth Administration is employing 37 needy youth on its school aid program in Charlevoix county, according to Orin W. Kaye, state director.

Youth who are accepted as eligible for NYA school-aid by the school authorities, are employed on part time projects for which they are paid a maximum of six dollars a month and which are supervised by school officials themselves. This amount often means the difference between attending school and being forced out. Young people in financial need are provided with a sufficient amount of money to pay necessary expenses such as books, lunches, transportation and, in many instances, clothes.

The type of project on which the youth are employed is designed to provide work experience in his chosen vocation wherever possible. They are given the opportunity to obtain experience in typing, filing, dictation, bookkeeping, carpentry, sign and poster painting, varnishing, woodworking, landscaping, window cleaning, book repairing and book-binding and many other occupations which may prove valuable in seeking employment after they have completed their schooling, stated Kaye. A total of 13,555 needy students are now working part time for the NYA, 9357 of which are in high school and 4198 in college.

Bogey Reputations

The chief criticism against the two Republican leaders is that they are political autocrats who dictate convention choices.

McKay and Barnard are democrats in the sense that they believe in the democratic form of government. Yet both men tell their associates that democracy would fail if it lacked leaders who had the ability to make wise decisions. Otherwise, the masses would be swayed by demagogues.

It is a curious throw-back to the principles of the early federalists, led by Alexander Hamilton, who distrusted the ability of the common people to govern themselves.

As for Barnard, this Wayne county leader is said to have refused nominations for judgships, state offices and appointments, and otherwise has kept with political contracts of any kind. An admirer of Theodore Roosevelt, a personal friend of young "Teddy" and a first cousin of Col. Frank Knox, Barnard's personal life is a bit unusual. He does not drink. He does not smoke. A bachelor, he is never seen in company of women other than his sister. He has an outright phobia of being "framed" by his enemies.

The general indictment of Barnard is that he is the political boss of the republican party in Wayne county.

Primary Remedy

Before the state senate is a bill just passed by the house, which would widen the scope of the September primary to include all four major offices—secretary of state, attorney general, treasurer and auditor general. It is popularly labeled as an "anti-boss" move.

Party nominees for governor and lieutenant-governor are now selected by primary votes. This law was adopted by the Michigan legislature in 1889 and its constitutionality was confirmed by the state supreme court.

Governor Edwin B. Winans in 1891, speaking of ballot reform, declared that "the booth feature gives every voter an opportunity to be alone with his ballot, and absolute secrecy is the best guaranty of purity in elections."

Governor Hazen Pingree said in 1897: "If the people make mistakes, they alone are to blame. The direct vote and the Australian ballot system is of less cost to the people than the convention system. Conventions should be abolished. I would advocate the extension of the principle of direct nomination to all the offices in the state from governor down, including judicial officials as well."

Primary Praised, Criticized

The ardor of other governors for the primary, as a general cure for boss control, continued in Michigan.

The records show that Governor Aaron T. Bliss said in 1902: "I am one of those who hold that from the caucus or the primaries to the election polls, the people should have unrestricted freedom of choice, believing that in this way will the largest possible good be accomplished."

Interestingly enough, the house primary bill last week was opposed chiefly by two young republican legislators—Rep. F. Jack Neller of Battle Creek and Rep. Robert N. Sawyer of Monroe who argued that the direct primary tended to break down party responsibility.

Representative Neller is a member of the anti-McKay investigating committee of the house.

What Other States Do

Nomination for all major state offices by direct primary is in vogue in many states including the following:

Maryland since 1908, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, New Mexico effective in 1940, Kansas, Mississippi, Georgia, Nebraska, West Virginia, Utah since 1937, Maine, Kentucky, Vermont, Montana, Wyoming, Nevada, Arkansas, Washington, North Carolina, New Jersey, North Dakota, Iowa, Virginia, Illinois, Oregon, Oklahoma, New York and Ohio.

A questionnaire to attorney generals in other states sent by Rep. Elton R. Eaton of Plymouth, revealed that primaries are favored over conventions in a majority of the states. While the replies were generally sympathetic to the primary system, occasional notes of doubt were expressed as in the following reply from Richard C. Hunter, attorney general of Nebraska:

"The practical result of the primary law in Nebraska has been to nominate persons for public office as party candidates who are not the choice of the party and in a majority of cases who are not the choice of a substantial number of voters."

In Idaho the legislature thought it could save expense of printing ballots by combining both primary tickets on one ballot. J. W. Taylor, attorney general, observed: "The result was that the republicans voted the democratic ticket and nominated the weakest candidate for governor on the democratic ticket, and later defeated him in the general election.

New Taxes Not Favored

Balancing of the state budget at around $102,000,000 without "new taxes, scrip or bond issues to solve any emergency that may arise" can be accomplished in the opinion of Budget Director Grover C. Dillman, Auditor General Vernon J. Brown and Treasurer Miller Duncker by trimming expenses to meet anticipated revenues.

In a joint statement the three officials said: "The daily statement of April 24 shows that the state has $9,280,517.69 on hand in its active cash accounts. A payroll of approximately $1,000 must be met on May 1 and approximately $1,000,000 on May 15. Also the second one-half of the April school allocation of $6,300,000 will be due on May 15. These payments will be met promptly as well as other accruing warrants, because of an anticipated receipt of $1,400,000 sales-tax revenue by May 15."

"The proverbial proof of the pudding, as far as the budget is concerned, will be the fate of pressure demands for state aid.

Again doing the unheard of, Governor Luren D. Dickinson asked the people of Michigan to pray on Sunday (April 30) that the legislature might resist powerful lobbies. "Will the members of the legislature be overwhelmed, lack courage to face the facts and stand for the poor taxpayers of the state, as has been the case so many times in the past?" asked the governor.

Politicians were flabbergasted, Michigan's colorful "Coolidge" struck a new note for economy.

The bid handicap, of course, is that we are all for economy providing it is at the other fellow's expense and doesn't step on our toes. The legislature has a difficult choice to make.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT

Tuberculosis X-ray Clinic

The day of Wednesday, May 10, has been scheduled for the semi-annual tuberculosis x-ray clinic at the Boyne City gymnasium beginning at 9:30 a. m. If interested in a tuberculin test and x-ray Dr. Dean suggests that residents of the county see their family physicians or local health authorities to make arrangements.

Tuberculosis is a communicable disease, states the Michigan Tuberculosis association. That is, it is passed from one person to another. It runs in families because they live in close contact with each other not because it is inherited. In urging cooperation in the fight against the White Plague officials of the tuberculosis association repeat that when Robert Koch discovered the germ of tuberculosis, the mystery of why tuberculosis runs in families was solved.

They know that one doesn't get tuberculosis just because his father or grandfather had it. The germs in the body of the relative are passed by him by careless spitting, by coughing and sneezing with an uncovered mouth and nose, by the use of unsterilized things handled by the tuberculous person, by kissing or sleeping in the same room with the patient.

The Michigan Tuberculosis association has as its motto, "Early discovery; early recovery." Its aim is avowedly to find tuberculosis before the symptoms of general tiredness, loss of weight, afternoon flush, coughing and hemorrhage associated with the disease appear. It is known that by the time these characteristics appear much harm has been done to both patient and those in contact with him.

Giving tuberculin tests and x-raying those with positive reactions has been found by health authorities to be the way to uncover tuberculosis in its early stages.

According to the association every one should have a tuberculin test, but especially young people and those having had contact with tuberculosis cases. Further it emphasizes, "Have your health department or your physician give you a tuberculin test, if positive, arrange to follow it by an x-ray. In this way you will be playing safe and protecting yourself and others."

Through the Window

St. Louis—Mrs. Fred Schaffer was awakened by smoke one night, and found her home was on fire. Unable to make her way through the house because of the dense smoke, Mrs. Schaffer was forced to leave through the bedroom window and arouse neighbors and give the alarm. As all doors were locked on the inside, neighbors had to break another window to get in and extinguish the fire.

PLENTY FISH PROMISED FOR STATE'S ANGLERS

Over 130,000,000 Game Fish Released in Michigan's Lakes

Plenty of fish are promised to the anglers who plan a Michigan vacation this year when the state conservation department announced that 1938 plantings totalled approximately 150,000,000 fish.

The pike-perch, the walleye, favorite of so many fishermen, leads off the list with upwards of 110,000,000 planted. The lakes also were stocked with 20,000,000 bluegills, the largest number of this species to be stocked in any one season in the history of fish propagation in Michigan.

The early tally also showed about four million brook trout, approximately two million brown trout and about a million rainbow. Large and small mouth bass exceeded a million and yellow perch figured well over three million. Lake trout plantings totalled nearly 300,000.

Although a number of adult and fingerling fish are planted during the summer months the majority of bass, bluegills and yellow perch are put into the lakes in the fall. The majority of the brook, brown and rainbow trout also are planted in the fall, while the walleyes are stocked in the spring and the lake trout through the year.

NEW '40 CAR LICENSE PLATES TO BE UNIFORM

Special Numbers Will be Dropped by Department of State

Michigan's 1940 motor vehicle license plates will be uniform in size and in the number of letters and numerals on them, Secretary of State Harry F. Kelly has announced.

Details of the new system of license plate lettering were worked out at a conference with State Police Commissioner Oscar G. Olander, Detroit Police Commissioner Heinrich Pickert, and other law enforcement officers.

Kelly said the police officers applauded his decision to abandon the practice of handing out "favor" license plates. Every passenger car plate next year will have two letters, to identify the county, and four numerals which will be separated by a hyphen to make it easier to read them. They will be in this form: AA 23-46.

Plates will be larger and letters and numerals will be redesigned for easier identification. The lowest number any automobile owner can expect is 1000.

Full year plates will have an aluminum background with black letters and half year plates will have a black background with yellow figures.

Meets first Wednesday evening each month at 7:45 p. m.

We cordially invite the public to our service and reading room.

"Adam and Fallen Man" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, May 7th.

The Golden Text (I Corinthians 15:22) is: "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive."

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Revelation 22:14): "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 316): "The real man being linked by Science to his Maker, mortals need only turn from sin and lose sight of mortal selfhood to find Christ, the real man and his relation to God, and to recognize the divine sonship."

Hollywood's Incredible "Phantom Burglar!" Is Your Wife Sorry She Married You? Two of the many interesting features in The American Weekly, the magazine distributed with the Sunday Chicago Herald and Examiner.

LEADERSHIP NEEDED

The republican party in Michigan is again engaged in the important task of adding a new chapter to the story of its many important past achievements in the state. It is not a time for temporizing with questionable leadership, but a time when it should demand statesmanship of the highest character from those entrusted with the work of carrying the policies of government into effect.

By statesmanship we do not mean the self promoting breed guided solely by selfish interest but one with an orderly, well-thought-out campaign for human advancement. There is little doubt but that the next few months will develop leadership that will be called upon to guide the party in the future and the type selected now must be such that will command the respect of this great commonwealth. To deviate in the slightest from such a course is but to court certain disaster in 1940 when next it comes before the tribunal of public opinion for appraisal of its accomplishments.

Baboocer Dies

Nashville — The death of Elmer White, 51, recalled the publicity he received two years ago when he reversed a fad. While other people were piling hundreds of matches on the necks of bottles, White managed to balance several bottles on a match, long enough for a reporter to take his picture.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

May 1, 1939

The common council of the city of Charlevoix met on the above date with Mayor Bridge presiding.

Aldermen present: Bellinger, Hallett, Heise, Hooker, Lamphear and Wood.

Minutes of previous meeting were read and approved as corrected.

The mayor made the following committee appointments:

Street, Sewer and Public Health—Hooker, Heise, Bellinger.

Police, Fire and License—Wood, Hooker and Lamphear.

Public Parks and Water Front—Hallett, Bellinger and Heise.

Charter, Ordinance and Advertising—Lamphear, Wood and Hallett.

Finance, Printing and Purchasing—Heise, Bellinger and Hallett.

Utilities—Whole council.

Matter of police uniform was referred to police committee.

Alderman Wood offered the following resolution and moved its adoption, seconded by Alderman Lamphear:

Resolution for Project Time Extension For P.W.A. Project Mich. 1513-F-F

Resolved by the Common Council of the City of Charlevoix that

The time limit of June 13, 1939 for the completion of our Power Plant Improvement Project Mich. 1513-F-F, does not give ample time to complete said project due to the following reasons:

1. It had been originally planned to complete the outside work at Bellaire during the winter and spring but conditions of heavy ice and high water made the undertaking of the dewatering of the forebay almost an impossible task during that time.

2. It has been absolutely imperative that we keep the Bellaire plant in operation as much as possible due to the fact that we had our steam generating unit disconnected from the switchboard while Contract 4, Switchgear, was being completed, thus leaving us one (1) Diesel for generation, and with Bellaire down there would have been no opportunity for any auxiliary generating equipment in the case of a breakdown of the one diesel now in operation, and if such a condition had occurred it would have seriously impaired the utility of our generating plant and jeopardized the system as a whole from two angles, one of which the lack of power for pumping water for ordinary use, and the other lack of power for pumping water for fire protection.

And that the city of Charlevoix make application to the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works to extend the time of completion of this project from June 13, 1939 to August 31, 1939.

Resolved Further that the city superintendent be and hereby is directed to make due and proper application according to the intent and purpose of this resolution.

Adopted by the following yea and nay vote: Yeas—Alderman Bellinger, Hallett, Heise, Hooker, Lamphear and Wood. Nays—none.

On motion the council adjourned.

Ray S. Hamilton, City Clerk.

MORE LEGAL TROUT RELEASED IN STATE

1938 PLANTINGS HEAVIEST MADE BY DEPARTMENT

Planting of "Keepers" Bring Better Results Than Releasing Small Fish, Report Claims

Final compilation of reports on 1938 trout planting by the fish division of the department of conservation and county reports will soon be available to Michigan anglers.

Of Michigan's 83 counties, all but 18 have received plantings of trout in suitable waters. Several of the counties in the southern part of the state offer no possible areas which will support trout but the majority have one or more streams cold enough and persistent enough throughout the summer.

Reports show a definite tendency toward the planting of much larger trout than in previous years. Brook trout planted in 1938 represented a mass weight in pounds of 114,522 as compared to 82,949 in 1937. This difference lies in the fact that 181,844 "keepers", were planted in the fall of 1938 while only 70,785 were put in streams in 1937. The difference directly reflects the department's policy of planting fish of advanced growth. Better results have been reported on streams where "keepers" have been placed than in streams where smaller fish have been planted. Total number of brook trout planted was 5,010,358.

A rise in the total weight of brown trout planted also reflects the policy of planting larger fish. A total of 35,906 pounds of brown trout went into Michigan streams in the fall of 1938 as compared to 27,716 pounds in 1937. The considerable rise was made in the face of a slight decline in the total number of browns planted.

Rainbow trout weighing a total of 52,473 pounds went into Michigan's streams in 1938 as compared to a poundage of 34,610 in 1937. A total of 122,482 "keepers" were planted as compared to only 58,083 in 1937.

Number of trout planted in Michigan waters totals 8,574,471 of which 386,428 were "keepers". Anglers have a total of 202,901 pounds or more than 100 tons of trout from which to fill their creels. More than 50,000 pounds of trout were planted in 1938 than in the preceding year.

The trout are largely planted in the streams during the fall months and by spring have become completely acclimated. Only a few scattered plantings are made during the spring for special purposes by the fish division.

A mail carrier, arrested for throwing mail away, says he did so because carrying it around gave him a backache. The rest of us throw most of ours away because it gives us a headache.

AT THE MOVIES

Mickey Rooney Recreates Most Famous Boy in "Huckleberry Finn"

Mickey Rooney is the attraction coming Sunday, May 6th, to the Palace Theatre in his first solo starring vehicle, Mark Twain's "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn," successor to "Tom Sawyer." The new picture tells the story of a Mississippi River boy and his advantures, dramatic, comical and pathetic, while seeking to aid a runaway slave to escape to a free state in the days before the Civil War.

Mickey plays the title role, with the rascally but comical "King" played by Walter Connolly and his fellow crook by William Frawley. Lynne Carver and Jo Ann Sayers play the heiresses whom Huck saves by exposing the crooks. Jim the slave, is played by Rex Ingram, noted Negro actor who played "De Lawd" in "Green Pastures," and Elizabeth Risdon is seen as the Widow Douglass, the boy's benefactress.

Basil Rathbone in Greatest Role as Sherlock Holmes

It was the aim of achieving a credible human personality that guided Basil Rathbone's characterization of Sherlock Holmes in 20th Century-Fox's picturization of Sir Arthur's "The Hound of the Baskervilles," the adventures of Holmes on the moor, which opens Wednesday, May 10 at the Palace Theatre.

Deferring to tradition in that he looks the part of Holmes, Rathbone has created a new character out of the detective that has won him the greatest acclaim of his acting career. The film, under the supervision of Darryl F. Zanuck, co-features Richard Greene, and Wendy Barrie with Rathbone, and was directed by Sidney Langfield. Nigel Bruce, Lionel Atwill, John Carradine, Barlowe Borland, Beryl Mercer, Morton Lowry and Ralph Forbes are included in the cast.

BEST COOKS GET CHANCE AT PRIZE

Michigan's best cooks, especially those who know how to dish up eggs in the tastiest form, have an opportunity to win state and national honors.

Announcement of a $1,000 egg-meal menu contest which will culminate in national honors in the World's Poultry Congress in Cleveland July 28 to August 7 is made by a national committee and by a specially designated Michigan group. Miss Edna V. Smith, Michigan State college home economics extension service state leader, is chairman of the Michigan consumers' committee for the poultry congress.

Entries must be submitted with menus and recipes by June 1 to permit selecting the five best in Michigan.

It takes only a menu for one meal. The Michigan committee has designated that this should be either a luncheon or evening dinner menu. Eggs used in the meal can be in many forms—such as in omelets, as garnishes for salads, or in cakes or pastries. But wherever the eggs appear, the recipes must explain preparation of the dishes for the entire meal.

Besides state and national honors, the housewife who wins the title will win other prizes. The national crown for the winning cook will have a cash award of $1,000 attached.

Plans of the Michigan committee include asking for personal appearance during June of those whose menus and recipes seem most usable. Actual preparation will be asked of the cooks during this final state elimination contest.

YOUR MICHIGAN—AND MINE
True Stories of Human Interest (Michigan Press Association)

Strange Coincidence

Norway—On March 9, 1938, Dorias Curry, conservation department supervisor, saw a buck deer with antlers, although bucks are supposed to lose their antlers in November and December. The most surprising thing, however, happened one year later, when on March 9, 1939 Dorias sighted a buck deer without antlers at the very same spot where he saw the freak the previous year.

Reverse Collection Pays

Bangor—Quite some time ago, $50 were distributed to Congregational church members here, who were requested to invest it and return the profits. That this reverse plate-passing worked is shown by the $128 turned in as earnings when the allotted time for investment was up. Each member started with a one dollar bill. One lady made $10 from her original capitol. There were no losses.

Escapes Via Shirt

Trenton—Constable Roy Manning was taking Albert Beaudrie, 18, and another prisoner to jail. Beaudrie asked if he could stop at home and get a clean shirt, and his request was granted. Manning and his other prisoner waited outside, and when Beaudrie failed to reappear, the officer found he had escaped through a window. However, Beaudrie was recaptured several days later.

Billy Got Stuck

St. Johns—Thinking it would be fun to "shoot the chutes," nine-year old Billy Shipley started for the basement of the Shipley home, travelling via the clothes chute. All went well 'till Billy came to a bend in the chute and got stuck. It took a hammer and saw and dismantling of the chute to free him, but he was none the worse for his experience.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

If Horses Swear It's Over Collar

If horses in Charlevoix county know how to swear, it's likely their language on too many farms reflects lack of attention to the fit of collars, warns B. C. Mellencamp, county agricultural agent.

Condition of shoulders often determines whether a horse can work. Use of a few pointers obtained from R. S. Hudson of the farm and horse department at Michigan State college can save veterinary bills or loss of use of animals.

Collars must be fitted properly, tight on sides to admit finger tips only, long enough to admit the hand at the bottom. A deer hair sweat pad should be used if the collar is a little too large.

The collar must be kept clean, rubbing by hand or washing with a damp sponge when it is taken off the horse. Oiling the collar twice a year and always holding it together at the top when carrying it preserves the life of the collar.

In warm weather the collar should be lifted and shoulders of the horse wiped off frequently when the horse is at hard work. Washing the shoulders of the horse when the collar is removed will help prevent shoulder galls.

Once a gall develops, the sore area should be washed with a white lotion made of one ounce of sugar of lead, one ounce of zinc sulphate dissolved in a quart of soft water.

Grooming the animal after a day's work or sponging off with warm water in hot weather are other horse savers. Cold water should not be thrown on the animal. Use of pasture as work decreases will contribute to the animal's health.

Grasshopper Campaign Now Being Developed

The first step in organizing the county in preparation for the county grasshopper campaign is already in progress. A short time ago the agricultural committee met with C. R. Dibble, insect control specialist, who is organizing the state program. First of all, Mr. Dibble stated that it will be necessary for each county to sign up each farmer who desires to use this bait. The committee felt that the most efficient and most convenient way to do this would be to have all the supervisors of the townships interested, take the request sheets with them when they take their assessment this spring.

Therefore, please be informed that each farmer should sign up with his supervisor either when he makes his assessment or else see his supervisor personally and sign up. The importance attached to this is that the allotment of materials for Charlevoix county will depend on the number of acres signed up. If we do not get a sufficient sign-up then our bait materials may be short of what is necessary to make a good cleanup. At the present time all supervisors in the county, with the exception of those in Marion, Norwood and Charlevoix, have a supply of these request sheets. In other words, the townships most apt to have grasshopper problems are acquainted with the necessary procedure.

As a farmer, you can help greatly by seeing your supervisor and being sure that your name appears on the request sheet along with the number of acres of grass land, hay land, pasture land, or open slash. These are breeding areas and are the areas that should be controlled.

4-H Forestry Club Members Set Out Four Thousand Pine Seedlings

If outside atmosphere and vigorous exercise are conducive of satisfaction, then the two afternoons spent by the Forestry club members of Boyne Falls and Melrose Township Units brought the desired effects. Never have we seen so much activity and interest in forestry as was displayed by these club members.

Last Thursday afternoon, in one hour and fifteen minutes, some forty students from the Boyne Falls Consolidated school set out approximately two thousand three-year-old Norway pines. About one third of the crew removed the sod while the balance, in crews of twos and threes, set out the trees and packed them in. Approximately one thousand trees are planted on one acre of land, so this means that around two acres have now been set out to trees. The Boyne Falls group is directed by Thomas Barton, their leader, assisted by W. Ira Bull and O. F. Walker with Ralph Woodward doing the official bookkeeping or, we might say timekeeping.

On Friday forenoon the four schools that make up the Melrose Township Unit likewise set out two thousand trees. The job was made somewhat easier by having furrows plowed ahead of time so that the sod removing activity was unnecessary. The soil conditions were somewhat better and, as a result, there was a survival of from 85 to 90 per cent from last year. The club members are very enthusiastic over this activity and take a great deal of pleasure in watching the developments.

SHOT AT RANDOM

nice to have a good visit with her. I had thought Fred Myers and wife might make us a call while they were in the west. Our latch string is always out for any of our old Charlevoix friends, this includes the Ushers. Indians are just commencing to dip salmon from the Columbia river at a rapids 12 miles from here. Ask Glenn how they do it. Aside from it being rather dry, we are having wonderful weather. Kind regards for inquiring friends, including Art Fitch. Wake up your reporter." Well, if our reporter hadn't made that mistake, we probably wouldn't have heard from Charlie, so that sort of evens things up.

There probably is no season of year in this north country when the atmosphere is clearer and visibility better than in the spring. Monday night the lights of Boyne City could be seen plainly looking east over Lake Charlevoix. At noon Tuesday, looking from the hill on Park avenue, one could see the entire length of Beaver Island. Sand hills were visible, also a field of ice in the close vicinity of the island. Beaver Island is over 25 miles distant from the mainland.

The old saying goes: "The proof of the pudding is in the eating," and also the proof that the annual spring perch spawning run is on is in the catching. The perch "run" is actually on here, starting over the last week end in Round lake and earlier last week in the south arm of Lake Charlevoix at East Jordan and around Ironton. Saw some nice limit catches taken from the dock at the foot of Clinton street Tuesday morning. The start of perch fishing coincides nicely with plans for Charlevoix's first annual Perch Festival scheduled for May 17 to 21, inclusive. Of the fish now being caught males predominate, indicating the run is just nicely started and will be at its height during the festival week.

As far as I'm concerned personally, the least said about trout fishing the better. Three trips and 10 fish was my own accomplishment. A lot of the regulars didn't do much better, however, so to those fellows who fish for the fun of it and consider the privilege of being on the stream of more value than fish, it doesn't matter much anyway. Cold weather (freezing Saturday morning and almost as bad Sunday) will be put forth as the most logical alibi. There were some limit catches, though. Heard Kenneth Staley took 15, Bill Ager's boys 17 between two of them, and Bill Hansen and one of the Edward boys the limit—all on Stover creek. Mrs. Harrison Trimble brought home 13 from the Jordan. Most of the catches were made on small streams with bait. There were probably others who made good catches, but those named are all I've heard of. Coming weeks will tell a different story—we hope.

Must be the new ruling barring aliens from WPA employment is having some effect. County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow reports a group of 12 will appear before Judge Parm C. Gilbert on Monday, May 15, opening day of the May term of circuit court, to make application for citizenship. That's the largest single group in the county's history, according to Mr. Bulow. Which all sums up to this: If these fellows who seek a livelihood in this country don't think enough of it to become one of its citizens, why should they be taken care of?

SUMMER EDITION HIGHWAY MAPS COMPLETED

Copies Available Free Upon Application at Courier Office.

The summer edition of the 1939 official Michigan highway map is off the presses and ready for distribution this week.

State Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagoner, in offering the map, pointed out several new features. County lines have been colored to make them more obvious. An index to counties and county seats showing their population and a key to their location on the map has also been included in this edition. A small inset map shows the routes of regularly scheduled airlines in Michigan.

As usual, the reverse side of the map illustrates Michigan tourist attractions in picture and story form. In addition to the state trunkline system and more important county roads, the map shows fish hatcheries, state parks, airports, state and national forests and game refuges, state ferry schedules, and detail maps of larger cities. On the cover is a fishing scene.

"The official map is published as a record of the state highway system and as a means of promoting Michigan's tourist business," the commissioner said. "It is available to motorists free of charge." Copies may be obtained at the Courier office.

EFFORT TO OBTAIN RAINBOW SPAWN IS FAILURE

Fish Running Boyne River Produced "Green" Spawn Thursday Night

Efforts of the Charlevoix Sportsman's club to obtain rainbow trout spawn for hatching in the local hatchery was almost a failure last Thursday evening when spawn taken from fish in the Boyne river was found to be "green."

Aided by conservation officers from the Boyne City district headquarters, Roy Ranger and other club members, together with Lige Geer of the federal hatchery, took fish from the conservation department trap below the Michigan Public Service dam. About 1,000 ripe eggs were obtained, otherwise fish stripped produced "green" eggs.

It is planned to make another effort a little later to obtain eggs to hatch here and stock the Stover creek rearing ponds with the fry.

CITY COUNCIL ORGANIZED FOR YEAR

Along with other routine business of Monday night's session, the council voted to make application to the Public Works administration for an extension of the time limit from June 15 for completion of the electric system extension program. Due to a late spring and accompanying ice and high water conditions, completion of the Bellaire plant improvements within the original time limit would not be possible. The necessity of using the Bellaire hydro plant to furnish current during completion of the program at the Charlevoix plant has been another contributing factor to delay.

CAPT. OSCAR E. WILBUR DIED MAY 2 AT CHICAGO

Funeral for Prominent Lake Captain, Pioneer and Civic Leader Held Here Saturday

Captain Oscar Eugene Wilbur was born at Watertown, New York on October 30, 1852. At the age of four years he came with his parents and a baby sister to the Manitou Islands. After two years on the Islands they went to Northport, Michigan, where he made his home until 1891.

He began sailing on fishing boats when eleven years old, becoming a very skillful sailor even in his 'teens. On December 31, 1883 he was married to Roselle G. Wrisley, to whom were born a son Albert A., and a daughter, now Mrs. Wilbur A. Cline.

He passed away quietly May 2, 1939, and surviving him are the son and daughter and two grandchildren, Helen Rose and George Cline.

Rev. John K. Coolidge, rector of the Muskegon Episcopal church, officiated at funeral services held at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the See Funeral Home. Burial was at Brookside cemetery.

In the early nineties Captain Wilhur acquired the dock property at Charlevoix, conducting his business there until five years ago, when the property was sold to the city. Since then he has lived most of the time at the home of his daughter and son in Chicago.

He had a deep affection for Charlevoix and its interests. For many years he served on the city council and was mayor for several terms. He was a life member of Charlevoix Lodge No. 282 F. and A. M.

The following recollections as expressed by himself on May 27, 1935 give some of the facts of his long and interesting career.

RURAL ELECTRIC PLANS MEETING

DISCUSS USES OF ENERGY AND FUTURE EXTENSIONS

Three Meetings Scheduled in Charlevoix County May 17 and 18—Eleven Meetings In All

(By B. C. Mellencamp)

The officials of the Top O' Michigan Rural Electric company, which serves four counties in this area, cooperating with the county extension agents, have arranged a series of eleven big meetings throughout the district to discuss the most profitable utilization of electricity and plans for future extensions. With something like two hundred and fifty miles of lines already energized and with extensions of over three hundred miles in the process of construction, it is timely that all interested folks can meet and discuss how best to use this time and labor saver.

D. G. Ebinger, specialist in electrical engineering from the Michigan State college, will lead the discussion at each meeting. He will be only too glad to answer any questions. From many experiments, he will present facts and data regarding the cost of many electrical appliances and operating expenses. Certainly each customer is wondering how to make the best dividends from his or her investment.

LAY CITY HALL CORNERSTONE SATURDAY

APPROPRIATE CEREMONY MARKING EVENT AT 2 O'CLOCK, CORNER STATE AND MASON STREETS

Honorable Parm C. Gilbert of Traverse City, to Deliver Address; Local and Visiting City and PWA Officials Will Participate in Function

The cornerstone of Charlevoix's new $65,000 city hall will be laid Saturday afternoon during a brief but appropriate ceremony at the site, corner State and Mason streets.

Preceding the program, beginning at 2 o'clock, the school band will parade through Bridge street to the city hall site. The program, arranged by city officials, follows:

Invocation, Rev. Father Neubecker; song, "America," band and assemblage; introduction of city officials and visiting officials, Arthur L. Fitch, master of ceremonies; song, "God Bless America," Mrs. Helen Kreighoff; depositing of documents in cornerstone receptacle; address, Honorable Parm C. Gilbert of Traverse City; laying of cornerstone, Mayor Robert Bridge; national anthem, band and assemblage; benediction.

Into the cornerstone receptacle will be placed a brief history of Charlevoix, copies of published council proceedings and newspaper articles leading up to the city hall acceptance, photographs of present and retired city officials responsible for the project, together with city department heads, and other documents of historical interest to future generations.

City Officials Invited

Invitations have been extended and accepted by officials of northern Michigan cities and villages to attend the ceremony. Present also will be officials of the Public Works Administration which provided a federal grant of funds toward the city hall construction.

While Saturday has been made a "Bargain Day" through the cooperation of merchants with city officials in making the cornerstone event an occasion to attract visitors, business places will close between the hours of 2 and 3 o'clock so that all may attend the ceremony.

TO POSTERITY

This issue of the Charlevoix Courier—the last before the event—is dedicated to our new city hall, the cornerstone of which will be laid with appropriate but brief ceremonies on Saturday, May 13th.

A copy of this issue will be deposited in the receptacle within the cornerstone along with other articles, papers, documents and mementos — all for the excavation, education and possible edification of our posterity a century or so hence—if we have any.

Largest Citizenship Group on Record —School Civics Classes to Attend

The May term of circuit court for Charlevoix county, convening Monday before Judge Parm C. Gilbert, will serve also as a school of instruction for civics classes of Charlevoix county high schools.

Judge Gilbert has invited classes from East Jordan, Boyne City and Charlevoix to attend and a novel experience awaits some of the students, it is rumored.

The May docket, containing three criminal cases, 12 issues of fact and law, one chancery and one divorce case, has the largest group of petitioners for citizenship in the history of the county—thirteen in all.

The jury drawn for the term will not be called until June 5th, when court will re-convene to hear jury cases, it is announced by County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow.

MORE RAINBOW SPAWN IS TAKEN FROM BOYNE RIVER

Have 8,000 Eggs at Hatchery—Now Feeding Half Million Lake Trout

A second trip to the Boyne river after rainbow spawn was more productive last Friday than the first and the local federal hatchery now has approximately 8,000 eggs in the process of hatching.

Roy Ranger, president of the Charlevoix Sportsman's club, and Lige Geer, hatchery superintendent, assisted by conservation officers from Boyne City district headquarters, stripped a large number of rainbows. While spawn was said to still be "green," about 8,000 eggs were obtained. It is possible another trip may be made.

Around a half million lake trout fry are now being fed at the hatchery. As the fish grow larger, contents of the troughs now being used is divided and put into other troughs, thus thinning out the fish.

The original hatchery crew had been augmented by the addition of Harry Ladd and Ray Graves to the force.

NORTHERN CLASS C FIELD MEET MAY 13

Preparations are under way by local school athletic officials for the third annual Tip O' Michigan class C conference track and field meet, scheduled for Saturday, May 13, at south side athletic field.

Five schools will participate, according to Stewart E. Coleman, Charlevoix track coach, bringing a large group of athletes here. Competing schools will be Charlevoix, Boyne City, East Jordan, Mancelona and Onaway. Charlevoix is the defending champion, winning 72 points to 45½ for the nearest rival last year.

According to present plans, qualifying for the dashes, hurdles and broad jump, and finals in the pole vault and shot put, will be held in the morning. Finals in other events, ten in all, will be held in the afternoon, starting at 2 o'clock. JOE BISSELL FISH TUG BEACHED IN HEAVY FOG

Coast Guards Released Boat Undamaged Early Tuesday Morning

Joe Bissell's fish tug Shirley G, which went ashore in Campbell's Bay, north of North Point about midnight Monday in a dense fog, was released undamaged early Tuesday morning.

Coast guardsmen under Capt. Oscar Smith towed the boat off the rocks after being notified by a member of the boat's crew who came ashore and walked to the station. The boat was returning from the Fox Islands when the mishap occurred.

Monday's heavy fog, the thickest experienced here in some time, hindered fishing craft entering the harbor throughout the day.

PERCH FESTIVAL PLANS COMPLETE

FIRST ANNUAL EVENT SET FOR MAY 13 TO 21ST

Numerous Prizes, Dancing Parties, Perch "Feeds" and Entertainment Planned for Festival Week

Charlevoix is all set for its first annual Perch Festival, which opens Saturday, May 13, and continues through Sunday, May 21st.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars and committees of the Board of Commerce have completed plans for the event, which marks this community's first effort to publicize a sport which has been available for years to the general public.

The veterans' group has obtained three large bathing rafts which will be lashed together and anchored on Round lake. Transportation to and from the rafts will be furnished from the Culver & Beaudoin Trolling Camp. Coast guards will patrol Round lake as a safeguard against accidents.

Local trolling camps have prepared boats, bait and equipment sufficient to accommodate all visitors.

Visiting fishermen will have an opportunity to win a number of prizes which are being offered by dealers in fishing equipment and trolling camp operators. Prizes will be given for the largest perch, the catch of greatest weight, the oldest and youngest fisherman and the one coming the longest distance to the festival.

Festival dancing parties are scheduled for both Saturday evening, May 13, and the following Saturday evening, May 20th, at Moonlight Gardens and The Argonne. Prizes will be awarded to winners the night of May 20th at The Argonne, where special plans to entertain the visitors are being made. Perch dinners will be the order, with The Argonne, St. Mary's Altar Society and the several local restaurants and hotels making a feature of perch during festival week.

GOVERNOR SIGNS BILL STOPPING BAY NETTING

Sportsman's Club Sponsored Law Sets Radius 2 Miles from Pierhead

Signature by Governor Luren D. Dickinson of a conservation department measure restricting netting in the Lake Michigan bay off Charlevoix harbor completes a piece of new legislation of particular interest to Charlevoixans.

The bill, sponsored by the Charlevoix Sportsman's club, drafted by Attorney Arthur L. Fitch and introduced by Rep. Douglas D. Tibbits, makes it illegal to take or attempt to take by means of nets fish in Lake Michigan within a radius of two miles of the lighthouse located on the south pier.

Designed particularly to protect perch and bass in their migration from Lake Michigan through the channel into Round lake and Lake Charlevoix, the area closed extends beyond both North and South Points and two miles into the lake.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By Ken Usher

Well, the house at Lansing kicked out the conservation department's request fnr permission to use discretionary power in declaring an open season on doe deer in over-populated areas. They just postponed the inevitable.

Sure glad that summer is here! With that nation-wide coal miners' strike tying the mining industry up in knots and creating a general shortage of coal, us folks up in this north country might get pretty cold. The miners' union is to be congratulated in not calling this strike in the middle of the winter as is the usual procedure.

Governor Luren Dickinson used some downright "horse sense" in vetoing that measure the legislature passed legalizing docking of horses tails. An insight into the deep characteristics of Governor Dickinson is shown in this following statement to the press: "If the almighty wanted the bony part of a horse's tail six inches shorter, why didn't he make them grow that way?" In plain English, docking a horse's tail takes away its only means of protection from flies and this is reason enough in itself for vetoing the measure.

See where the board of managers of the State Fair are determined to emphasize agriculture at the Michigan exposition next September. They say the fair will feature an agricultural and industrial show rather than one of movie and radio stars. If they do, it will be quite an innovation as far as fairs go these days.

Walt Henley sends in the following communication, captioned "A Shot at Ken." He's entitled to his say, so here it is:

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

The state legislature is entering the final lap of its five-month session with adjournment due in a week or so and relatively little accomplished to date.

Legislators began the fifth month last week without one of four major problems settled. The house version of a labor relations formula was rushed through under republican caucus agreement on the very day that former Governor Frank Fitzgerald died. The bill was promptly buried in the senate labor committee, led by Senator Harry Battle, who has just reported out a modified measure calling for mediation board without a 10-day strike notice and other drastic provisions.

As for civil service, the house and senate could not agree with the result that separate measures were passed by the house and senate to be ironed out in a legislative conference committee. It was indicated that thousands of employees, now on state payrolls, could be unclassified and hence subject to political patronage whims of the administration in

"Jesse James" Is Technicolor Epic

Darryl F. Zanuck's production, "Jesse James," the 20th Century-Fox Technicolor epic of the life and times of the most colorful outlaw who ever lived, comes to the Palace Theatre on May 13-14.

Romantic Tyrone Power has the title role, sharing stellar honors with Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly and Randolph Scott.

The story depicts in thrilling terms the most colorful exploits of the man who invented train robberies and bank holdups, and does not neglect his romance with the lovely girl who sacrificed a life of comfort to share his wild and reckless life.

Prominent in the supporting cast of the film, which Henry King directed from an original screen play by Associate Producer Nunally Johnson, are Henry Hull, Slim Summerville, J. Edward Bromberg, Brian Donlevy, John Carradine, Donald Meek, John Russell and Jane Darwell.

Fans! It's a Joy at the Joneses'!

The Joneses have a baby!

The screen's famous Jones Family, popularized in the 20th Century-Fox series, are joined in "Everybody's Baby," showing May 17-18 at the Palace Theatre, by dimpled little Miss Sylvia McClune, nine-months-old infant daughter of a Hollywood couple. The baby girl plays the role of the new daughter of Bonnie Jones Thompson and her husband, Herbert, around whom the story of the film comedy revolves.

WPA Jokes With a Price on Their Heads

In The American Weekly, with the May 14 issue of The Detroit Sunday Times, will be an article pointing out that the recent fine by the American Federation of Actors against a vaudeville team, for violating its ruling against WPA jokes, recalls a number of these so-called witicisms which have been told in recent months by stage, screen and radio comedians.

Two at Once

Gladwin—Sheriff Ray Cowell intended to arrest only one man, but he got two. He had stopped one man on the road and was arresting him for drunk driving when another car zig-zagged down the road, brushed the parked car, and almost knocked the sheriff down. The officer gave chase and made the arrest. Both men were sentenced.

CORRESPONDENCE

CENTRAL LAKE

The nice rain of Sunday, Monday and Tuesday enlivened things again. The resorters are coming, and the trees are leafing.

The county veterinary was called to the Raymond Lamereaux farm last week for a valuable horse that was ill. Maurice Dawson recently lost a horse, and Harry Lewis a cow.

The rural Sunday school rally will be held at Eastport Baptist church, Wednesday, June 21st, this year. The county is planning to have the picnic grounds fixed up in fine shape this year, with tables, etc.

Rev. Robbo began a series of revival services at Fife Lake April 23, closing Sunday evening of this week, it is expected. A load from Central Lake and Bellaire is expected to go down there Thursday evening.

Lyle Morse is helping with the work at the Raymond Lamereaux home during Mr. Lamereaux's illness with pneumonia. Mr. Lamereaux has been held up in his electrical work several weeks on account of illness.

Alden M. E. church has a fine idea in having a church library where good reading can be obtained. Mrs. Aemegear loaned two copies for the young people's story contest. Be sure if every church had a library of this kind.

A surprise is being planned for Guy Loucks on his birthday, May 10. Free Methodist church people are coming up to help in the surprise. Now don't anybody mention this as Mrs. Loucks wants it to be a complete surprise.

M. E. conference takes place this year beginning on June 7th, so that we expect to have Rev. Dow Garret of Alden to give the main address of the rally at Eastport this year. The three best contestants in the rural rally story will read them at the rally this year.

Rev. Lester McLean preached a fine sermon Sunday evening to a good crowd at Holiness church, Bellaire. Rev. Mosher and wife are expected back from Virginia the 15th of this month. Misses Swanson and Bruce sang a duet at Holiness church Sunday evening.

Mrs. Lillian Underwood, pastor of Pentecostal, was in Lima, Ohio, at a church convention the past week. It is hoped to have her give a Mother's Day talk at Grand View next Sunday afternoon, and the Central Lake girls who sang last Sunday, to sing again next Sunday.

Otis Bundy, a worker in the Sunday school at Green River, will be present at Creswell Sunday school next Sunday at 10:30 a. m., to give a Mother's Day talk. He expects to bring a choir of young people from Green River Sunday school to sing for us at that time.

John Essenberg did a fine piece of dusing for ye correspondent last week. He dises nights, and runs his feed mill at Atwood in the day time. He was one of the singers at Alden in the Rev. Meeng's choir. Many orchardists are going back to the lime-suiphur spray this year.

The Grant Winters family and Miss Boals of Kewadin visited Sunday afternoon at the Zibe DeForest and Lee Patton homes. Audrey says Sunday school has been reorganized at Kewadin with an attendance of 13 last Sunday. Mr. Christiansen is in a boy's camp near Albion.

Wm. Louiselle and sons of Central Lake are erecting a new house on the sight of the old one, recently burned down at the Gerald Telgenhoff place. Mr. Telgenhoff and family of Bay View have been residing in Mr. Garrison's cottage at Central Lake since the fire this spring.

Misses Loretta and Geneva Clark of Central Lake are coming on fine at Lockwood Hospital, Petoskey, where they went for an appendicitis operation. Tommy Clark, their father, living south of town, has the best garden in the country. His corn and tomatoes are up, and beans up six inches high.

Attendances last Sunday at Sunday school were: Creswell 26, Greenwood 6, Grand View 30, Bellaire Holiness 36, Turner 17. A reward will be given this year again at the rally for the Sunday school having the best attendance percentage, largest load at the rally, and most Bible verses learned.

John Hooper of Eastport is busy on a resort building job down on the west shore of Torch lake, for a Mr. Sessions, who is building not far south of the Aldrich property. The resort building is also started on the east shore of the lake, near the DeForest place. Lee Patton is managing the building.

Rev. Harry Batterbee is expected at Greenwood Sunday school next Sunday to give a Mother's Day sermon at 1:00 o'clock p. m. Also, we hope to have the Batterbee sisters sing. Everybody come out next Sunday at 1:00 o'clock. The small attendance last Sunday was accounted for by several families being quarantined with measles and scarlet fever.

We made a mistake in our items and should have said, Newton Allen, and instead of Mrs. Carolyn Marshal, it should have read Carolyn Maxwell. In regard to the drowning accident at Eastport, it should have been that Fay Welch was drowned in the lake near the mouth of the creek, instead of in the creek, and that he was 12 instead of 11 years of age.

Misses Marrel Knowles and Marguerite Aadema, and Ivan Dawson and Virgil Dawson will attend the Mancelona TB clinic this week for x-ray examinations. Supt. Stevens tells us that free examinations will be given only to those who are ok'd by the county nurse, who reacted to the Shick blood test. These will have to pay $2. Three years ago the x-ray tests were free.

We don't know just what is the matter with our mail that goes to Mancelona and Elk Rapids. Years ago, when an Indian carried the mail a-foot from Eastport to Elk Rapids, and Mr. Wait from the same place to Mancelona, the mail got through in one day. Today with means of rapid transportation, it takes three days to ge our items through to those places, and they many times do not get in the paper until the next week. They should go to Mancelona via Petoskey in one day, and by Traverse City or Williamsburg to Elk Rapids in one day. Wonder why they don't?

Ye correspondent visited Monday at the Way school. Miss Shirley Stewart of Mancelona is teaching there, and has a fine school of twenty pupils. They have as fine a lot of pupils in mathematics as we have met with in the schools for some time. Much stress is put on measurements this year, and three pupils illustrate the work by drawing before solving the problems, making it much easier to understand. In less than two minutes they can tell you how many bushels of grain your granary bin will hold. They also are good readers, and stand up before the school, facing them, to read. Some fine penmanship was done by Mary Ebenstein, as well as by many others. A relative of former pupils of the writer was there, Miss Leona Chilson. Their school closes with a picnic Friday.

Big in Value... Little in Cost

FEW THINGS give you so much convenience, happiness and security... all rolled into one... as your telephone.

Telephone service is not only exceptionally good... it's cheap. Nowhere else in the world do people get so much and such good service at such low cost.

Experienced management, trained people and good equipment are three important reasons for this fact.

OIL-CHANGING PART II

At no unusual price get the plus of OIL-PLATING

"The 2-in-1 oil-change," automotive experts call it, because... 1st—It gives your engine the change badly needed today—from Winter dirt and oil to your correct Spring grade of patented Conoco Germ Processed oil... AND 2nd—Your engine thus gets the out-and-out plus of OIL-PLATING.

The exclusive Germ Process gives this oil such an intense "power of attraction" that it holds to cylinder walls, bearings and piston rings as if plated there. Plating on the bumpers, for instance, doesn't fry up in the heat, fly off at speed, or drain down during parking. Neither does OIL-PLATING. So it keeps your engine ready-oiled for safe starting every time. And it helps you get big plus mileage all Summer from your Conoco Germ Processed oil.

Mancelona, with Turnipseed and Hardy, veterans of three years' competition, is expected to make a strong bid for the title relinquished to Charlevoix a year ago. Charlevoix's win in a triangular meet last Friday at East Jordan, places them as strong contenders to repeat. Strong competition is promised among the competing schools.

The conference track and field meet tops the list of spring athletic events for northern Michigan class C schools and a large following of supporters is expected to accompany the several teams.

'40 WHEAT ALLOTMENTS ARE BEING CONSIDERED

Notification to Farmers to be Mailed in Next Few Weeks

The Charlevoix county agricultural conservation committee is now considering wheat allotments for 1940.

Notifications of these wheat allotments will be mailed to farmers within the next few weeks. Requests for 1940 wheat allotments may be made for farms on which wheat was not grown in 1937, 1938, or 1939. These requests must be mailed to the office before May 20. Farmers who do not have wheat allotments may plant up to 8 acres with no deductions made on their farm payments for wheat.

Due to the large wheat crops of the past few years, which has resulted in the present low prices, it is felt that farmers without wheat allotments will not want to plant in excess of this 8 acres.

LeRoy Hardy, newly selected superintendent, will also be present at these meetings. In addition, the directors of the company will attend. These officials are most anxious to discuss with you the organization problems, plans for future extensions, questions in regard to rates, and maintenance requirements. Finally, any criticism or complaints will be cheerfully received regarding any features of the program.

Not alone present customers but future users of electricity are cordially urged to attend their nearest meeting as per the following schedule:

Tuesday night, May 16, at eight o'clock sharp in the Ellsworth community hall.

Wednesday afternoon, May 17, at one-thirty in the Deer Lake Grange hall.

Thursday afternoon, May 18, at one-thirty in the Horton Bay Town hall.

Thursday night, May 18, at eight o'clock in the Marion Center Grange hall.

With the four counties in the Top O' Michigan rural area, it is only possible to have three meetings in Charlevoix county, but the date of the Ellsworth meeting has been announced as some folks may be closer to this gathering than to the other meetings in our own county. For those near Petoskey, a meeting will be held at the court house on Saturday afternoon, May 20, at one-thirty.

We are all looking forward to these meetings and sincerely hope that you will be present. This is such a new venture that, without a doubt, every customer or prospective user of electricity should be interested in attending these schools.

Eight and a Half Million Trout Are Released with Brook Trout Leading at Five Million

Estimates show that about 50 trout are planted in Michigan streams annually for every fisherman, according to F. A. Westerman, head of the fish division of the Michigan department of conservation.

Final figures for last year show about 5,000,000 brook trout, 2,500,000 brown trout and 1,150,000 rainbow trout planted in different streams for a total of about 8,650,000.

Westerman estimates the total number of trout fishermen as at least 175,000. During 1938, 114,000 resident trout anglers' licenses were issued. There were 189,000 non-resident licenses issued, and all of these licenses were entitled to fish for trout if they so desired. At least 25 per cent or about 47,000 are conceded to have been trout fishermen.

Added to this total are all the boys and girls under 17 years of age who are able to fish without licenses. This group is regarded as a sizeable one by Westerman, who recalls that he "caught more trout per season before I was 17 than I ever did afterward."

Still more anglers are expected on Michigan's streams during 1939. More than 50,000 are believed to have been out on opening day, April 29, despite only moderately favorable weather conditions.

OBTAIN FARM HELP AT UNEMPLOYMENT OFFICE

State Service Offers Trained Men for Farm Jobs of Region

Farmers of Charlevoix county may obtain the extra farm help and casual labor they need for spring planting and other farm chores through the Michigan State Employment Service office in Petoskey, according to Harvard Smart, manager of the office.

"It is not necessary to make a personal call to the office," Mr. Smart said. "If farmers find it inconvenient to come to town, a phone call or post card explaining the qualifications desired in the worker will bring a prompt referral.

"The function of the Michigan State Employment Service is to bring together the employer and the worker with the least possible delay or trouble to either of them and at no charge to either.

"We will send only workers having the qualifications to fit the job, and no employer needs to hire any of the men sent to him if they do not suit requirements. However, as the Michigan State Employment Service has the most complete file of workers in the state at its disposal, we are able to refer qualified, experienced workers to fill any type of job open.

"At present we have about 40 qualified applicants for farm work registered with us. Farmers needing help now, or later in the season are invited to call on us, specifying just what kind of work they want done, and we will get in touch with the workers and refer them without delay."

ALL COUNTY TOWNSHIPS NOW HAVE POWER LINE

Report Current in All Lines Except In Norwood Township

An energized power line of the Top O' Michigan Rural Electrification company runs through every township in Charlevoix county with the exception of Norwood township, where the main line will be completed in about eight weeks, it was announced this week by Thomas Coulter, project superintendent.

This statement however, does not mean that work is completed in every township as in almost every instance additional spur lines are under construction.

In Charlevoix county as a whole more than 158 miles of line are in service, bringing the power and convenience of electricity to upwards of 178 rural residents. In Emmet county 43½ miles of line serve 76 customers. In Antrim county 97 farmers are reached by 55 miles of line and in Otsego county, in the immediate vicinity of Elmira 23 users of power are reached by one mile of line, the most per mile in the entire project.

In some sections of the four county project, construction has been held up by difficulty experienced by the company in obtaining right-of-ways. This is faced in upper Emmet county, some sections of Antrim county and in a territory north of Gaylord in Otsego county. Another condition faced by the company is that in some sections the lines have been completed but it is impossible to energize them due to the fact that many of the customers have failed to complete the wiring of their property.—Boyne Citizen.

FOOD SALES HERE RETURN $70,590 IN HIDDEN TAXES

Shoppers in Charlevoix county stores pay an estimated $70,590 in hidden taxes annually in their purchases of food alone, the National Consumers Tax commission declared today.

"Nearly eight per cent of the total food bill is taken by shifted taxes buried in the price of every purchase" an NCTC study stated. "These unseen levies, for example, make up 11 per cent of butter costs, 6½ per cent of bread costs, 10½ per cent of sliced bacon costs and 14½ per cent of the cost of coffee."

The study, made public through Mrs. W. R. Alvord, of Highland Park, national committee member, and Miss Leetha C. McGee, of Detroit, state director, leaders of NCTC study groups in about 175 Michigan communities in their educational crusade against "unnecessary, consumer penalizing taxes," added:

"This burden, falling most heavily on lower income families, includes taxes levied originally against producer, manufacturer, shipper and distributor. Unable to absorb the load, each business must pass on a share of its taxes."

The commission, consisting of non-partisan study groups in 4,200 communities, said that the hidden tax figure does not include the sales tax and many other hidden and direct taxes families here have to pay.

DEEP SEA FISHING A POPULAR ATTRACTION

Charlevoix Listed Among Cities Offering This Sport

Deep sea fishing for the tawny Mackinaw trout of Lake Michigan is a "must" on the vacation calendar for most of those planning a Michigan holiday.

It's attraction lies in the ease with which the trip may be planned and the fun that goes with it. Deep sea fishing trips can be nrranged out of Northport, Traverse City, Elk Rapids, Charlevoix or Petoskey. Most of the boats are comfortable, roomy, cabin cruisers which easily accommodate six or eight people. Although only two people can fish at one time the party trips give the guests an opportunity to take turns fishing.

All of the tackle is furnished by the guide and all the fisherman has to do is plant himself in a comfortable camp chair on the stern of the boat, let out 500 or 600 feet of copper or steel line, and wait for that whallop at the end of your line that will bring you to your feet winding the big reel for dear life.

Strangely enough only a few of these guides are old lake fishermen or sailors. Most of them are alert young men school teachers who turn to guiding the sportsmen fishermen as a summer occupation. Many of them own their own boats.

Charlevoix has an enviable place on the map for deep sea fishing, for it offers trolling for steel head trout in Lake Charlevoix. The fisherman will have plenty of thrill packed moments on a trip for either one of the prize beauties.

power. Anticipating that many jobs would soon develop, senate republicans named a patronage committee, headed by Felix Flynn, president pro tem from Cadillac, to consult with Governor Luren D. Dickinson.

Welfare and Budget

Other major problems awaiting legislative action at this late date were welfare and the budget.

Under provisions of a bill passed by the senate, welfare administration would be handled locally in each county by a county welfare commission, subject to central supervision hy a five-man state commission. The state commission would attempt to coordinate the functions of nearly a dozen semi-independent hoards and commissions.

One amendment, imposed by the senate, constituted a home rule victory for county supervisors inasmuch as it provided that the state should match county relief expenditures before considering distribution of welfare funds on the basis of need, the latter being urged by social welfare workers. Another amendment would require the recipient of relief to be a resident of Michigan for at least three years during which time the recipient had not received private or public aid. Labor representatives vigorously opposed the latter restriction.

Generally speaking, the senate welfare measure was viewed as a compromise between the supervisors and welfare workers.

It would replace the state welfare act which was invalidated by referendum last fall.

102 Millions

Despite united pressure from school teachers and other groups, the house ways and means committee recommends that state expenditures for 1939-1940 be limited to $102,000,000.

Revenues are forecast at this amount.

State aid to public schools would be held to $40,000,000 a year including the primary school interest fund estimated at $17,000,000. This is just $5,000,000 less than the total demanded by the schools and also pledged by the late Governor Fitzgerald. In the fiscal year 1937-38 the schools received $41,264,000.

Earl Babcock, Grand Haven, president of the Michigan Education association, said: "The 15-mill limit is a barrier which the average community cannot overcome. Every community would gladly do more if the law would permit. The only alternative is for the state to do more."

Dr. Eugene B. Elliott, state superintendent of public instruction, pleaded for $50,000,000 while other speakers warned direly that four-fifths of the public schools in Michigan would not be able to keep open more than seven months next year.

Old Age Pensions

The legislative budget, however, does make generous allowance for further state assistance to the aged.

Whereas the state allocated $7,385,000 in old age assistance for 1937-38, the new budget would allow $8,439,000. The old age bureau had requested $11,644,000.

Welfare needs are estimated at $9,000,000 a year, as contrasted with the social welfare workers' forecast of $15,000,000. Aid to dependent children and the blind would be limited to $1,000,000; the University of Michigan would get $4,576,000 a year, $43,000 more than it received last year, and Michigan State college would get $2,467,000, an increase of $45,000.

In the senate a deficiency bill for $2,600,000, second for this session, received sanction. Eliminated entirely was a proposed appropriation of $1,250,000 for the crippled children's commission on the suspicion that the act, making the state liable for payment of medical bills ordered by any probate judge, had become a "racket." The sole legislator to oppose the bill was Senator Earl Munshaw, Grand Rapids.

Cause and Effect

The cost of maintaining Michigan's prison system, criminal courts, Michigan state police and the state mental institutions for the fiscal year 1936-37 was approximately $11,000,000. Prisoners total 7,400; mental patients 15,400. The cost of handling, disposing of and treating 4,000 to 5,000 juvenile delinquents each year runs approximately $1,100,000, making a grand total of $12,100,000 a year, or more than $1,000,000 a month.

In Detroit alone the cost to taxpayers of maintaining the police department approximates $10,000,000 a year.

What price crime? The total cost of crime in Michigan starts at $20,000,000 a year, while top estimates reach $600,000,000, just 4 per cent of J. Edgar Hoover's estimate of $15,000,000,000 annual cost of crime in the United States.

Eighteen of Michigan's largest cities last year reported 52,857 major crimes to the Federal Bureau of Investigation at Washington, D. C.

Aiming at the cause of crime—the child who becomes a criminal delinquent in the eyes of the law—is the Michigan Child Guidance Institute, created two years ago and placed under the University of Michigan board of regents for the purpose of preventing juvenile delinquency. The institute is faced with legislative death in the current economy program.

Milk Price-Fixing

Price fixing of milk has become a probability for Michigan as result of action by the house in approving the controversial Welsh bill, backed by an aggressive farmer bloc. Weary at the prospect of further consideration of this bill, representatives eagerly "passed the buck" to the senate which now holds its fate.

Dairy farmers are nearly unanimous in approval of the novel principle that the state should regulate the price of milk, declaring that bulk prices are now ruinously low and in many cases below actual cost of production.

Outcome of the Welsh bill is uncertain due to realignment of forces in the senate, as evidenced by defeat of the anti-Barnard bill and the sidetracking of the anti-Van Wagoner bill. The confusion which prevailed as the result of Fitzgerald's death has not helped matters any. Milk producers hope that their pressure bloc will overcome the handicap, but the prospects for the Welsh bill are none too bright.

"Coolidge" Remark

"I'm making no plans for it," said Governor Dickinson in reply to a query about seeking re-election in 1940.

Coolidge-like in its inference, the governor's remark set politicians guessing anew as to whether Michigan's 80-year-old governor would seek another term. Governor Dickinson added slyly: "I've got to have a corner to get out of."

Dad and Son Swap

St. Louis—Local churchgoers saw a unique father and son incident here recently, when two ministers traded pulpits for a Sunday. The Rev. D. Bruce Moore, pastor of the Central Christian church in Pontiac, gave an evening sermon at the Christian church here, while his father, the Rev. David Moore, pastor of the local church, filled his son's pulpit in Pontiac the same evening.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT

Why Do They Die?

Here are some astounding facts published last year in the January Literary Digest which undoubtedly many of you have read, but are worth mentioning again: "A mother dies in childbirth every 37 minutes in this country. A baby is born dead somewhere in this country every seven minutes. A less-than-month-old baby dies in this country every eight minutes.' These figures were 1935 statistics, the latest available. More such deaths in one year than from cancer or tuberculosis. More than from automobile accidents. More than from any other cause except heart disease. Many of them could have been saved.

Why do they die? Some die because mothers have no care whatever when their babies arrive. Surgeon General Thomas Parran, Jr., estimates that 40,000 mothers each year bear children with no one in attendance. Some die because, through isolation or poverty, they have only the help of a midwife.

However, the last fifteen years have been a great improvement in the risk for both mother and child at and immediately after birth. Actually, the official figures available for the period in its entirety reflect only the experience of the birth registration states, as constituted in 1922, but since these states comprise over 72% of our total population, it may be assumed that their experience closely approximates that of the country as a whole.

In 1922 the average number of infant deaths during the first month of life totaled 397 deaths in every 10,000 born alive throughout the nation, while in 1936 the corresponding mortality was only 312 per 10,000 live births. That is to say, one in every 25 newborn babies died of prenatal, natal, or neonatal causes in 1922, as compared with one out of 32 during the year 1936, an improvement of 21.4 .

In our local health unit, comprising the northern counties of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego, our infant mortality rate for 1938 was 54.0% per 10,000 live births. Comparing this with our statistics of fourteen years ago, there was a decrease of 19% since that time, our mortality rate being 66.7% in 1923.

The chief cause of infant mortality in 1938 was again due to premature birth, having accounted for 19 of the 54 deaths, or 35% of the total number. Pneumonia was the second cause of infant mortality, having taken 8 babies or 15% of the 54 deaths.

One of the outstanding facts of our district mortality rate of babies under one year of age is the large number who die in the first week and first month of life. This past year 28 babies died in the first week of life and 31 died in the first month of life, indicating the importance of emphasizing good medical prenatal care before the baby's birth, protection of mother against infectious diseases and provision of adequate nutrition, and freedom from industrial stresses and strains, especially during the latter months of pregnancy.

However, the assurance of the baby's life does not stop at prenatal care but rather during its birth and after its birth should constant care be given. Four important measures should be followed after the baby's birth: prompt notification and registration of his birth; follow-up of all births by the public health nurse; regular, systematic examination of all well babies, and supervision as to hygiene and preventive pediatries, and lastly, prevention of communicable diseases by immunization where possible.

CHICKS REQUIRE ADDED PROTEINS

Getting young chicks off to a good start is half the battle, says C. G. Card, poultry department head at Michigan State college. If they eat right, a good start generally is assured. One of the biggest question marks in the baby chick ration is how much and what kind of protein to use.

At the National Agricultural Research Center, Beltsville, Md., different amounts of protein, ranging from 13 to 25 per cent, were fed to growing chicks. The chicks gained more weight per pound of feed as the protein was increased up to 21 per cent. Beyond that point weight gains dropped off again.

Though 21 per cent may be the ideal amount of protein for growth, Mr. Card says it may not be the ideal amount when cost is considered. The federal study indicated that a diet of 17 per vent protein, for example, is about 95 per cent as efficient as that containing 21 per cent protein. If the cost of the 17 per cent diet is low enough, it may be more economical for the poultryman.

Mr. Card says, however, that it is a good plan to feed a diet contaiming 20 to 21 per cent protein until the chicks are at least 12 weeks old. Then the amount of protein can be decreased gradually until pullets are receiving 16 to 17 per cent by the time they are ready to lay.

As to what kind of protein to use, further studies have shown that protein from a variety of sources should be used. Mixtures of protein feeds such as fish meal, dried buttermilk, fish meal, meat scrap, soybean oil meal and gluten feed offer this variety.

COUNTIES STUDY CHILDREN'S NEEDS

In 19 Michigan counties parents are endeavoring to make problems out of their children, but in a constructive process of attention to physical, mental and moral requirements.

Recent observation of May Day in hundreds of schools in the state focused attention upon child development work carried on by the home economics extension service of Michigan State college.

"The health of the child is the power of the nation" is a slogan being used by Alice Butchinson, specialist in the extension division. More than 1,200 families were enrolled in group projects in 1938, studying out such phases as the use of money, habit training and problems of the adolescent.

One bit of "sermonizing" that is being stressed is that mental health is of equal importance with a child's physical wellbeing. Parents are being instructed for a better knowledge of today's complex social life in order to promote better relationships with children in the family.

Spring Weather Hurts

Ecorse—Balmy spriog air was the cause of two broken legs for Mrs. Nellie Shugar of Ecorse. While driving with her husband, she complained of the heat and opened the car door to let in cool air. It was then that she fell out of the car and was injured.

ADVERSE WEATHER CUT DOWN BEAVER TRAPPING

Take of 6,422 Animals Compared to 7,688 in 1938—Snow Hindered

A definite drop in the total number of beaver taken in Michigan this year was attributed directly to the terrific handicap of weather conditioos described by veteran trappers as the worst within memory.

Heavy snow drifts forced trappers to hike miles on snowshoes to their trapping grounds where ice conditions were the worst since the season was re-opened on beaver in Michigan. Streams were unnavigable due to the heavy ice and skis and snowshoes provided the only methods of transportation.

Total catch was 6,422 beaver as compared to 7,668 in 1938. The number of trappers in the field, on the other hand, showed a definite trend upward with 1,969 braving the rigorous winter conditions as compared to 1,761 in 1938. Complete reports from districts have not yet been "broken down" but nearly all showed a decrease in the total take.

Many-Lived Cat

St. Ignace—Mr. and Mrs. Ray McLachlan thought they should dispose of their angora cat after it suffered jaw injuries when caught in a rat trap, so Marshall John McLean was asked to shoot it. Several days later the cat returned. When questioned, McLean said he had shot the cat and left it for dead. For a second time, he had it shot and buried it. A week later the cat came back to the McLachlan home, its jaw injury healed and with only a slight scar at the base of its head. It now has a permanent home.

NESTING WILD LIFE NOW NEED PROTECTION

Quality of Hunting Next Fall Depends on Weather

Much of Michigan's reputation as good hunting grounds for next fall will be determined by weather and farm operations to wild life in the next few weeks, suggests R. G. Hill, specialist in game management at Michigan State college.

Late burning of dry grass and stubble fields, late plowing and uncontrolled cats and dogs likely will take heavy toll of the spring hatching of pheasants, quail and partridge and affect the new crop of cottontail rabbits.

"Cats and dogs are valuable in any farming community," Hill admits, "but if they are not properly controlled these animals can be classified among the worst menaces to wild life, especially during nesting and brooding seasons."

Part of the natural ingenuity of game birds in hiding their nesting places also adds to spring damage. The "Hunkie" or Hungarian partridge, Hill points out, not only is difficult to see on a nest, but during the laying period when she goes out foraging she covers the eggs with grass. This makes it almost impossible for sympathetic sportsmen to avoid the nests.

Burning in late spring along fence rows, roadsides and in stubble fields and edges of woodlots and swales can ruin nests and clutches of eggs or remove protection the birds require during nesting and brooding.

There can be some salvaging by interested farmers and sportsmen who find egg clutches disturbed and abandoned. Broody hens can be put to use by farmers, says Hill. Or the eggs, if not set immediately, should be kept in a cool place, well ventilated and the eggs turned at least once each day until they can be incubated.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE NEWS BULLETIN

Ruling Means What It Says

That the ruling of Harry F. Kelly, secretary of state, against his department issuing any more low number or so-called "trick" license" plates means exactly what it said is the opinion of Representative John B. Smith of Gratiot county, who early this session introduced House Bill No. 580, after an investigation of the system now in effect in the motor vehicle division of the department of state. His bill would have made it unlawful for any motor vehicle license plate to be of special type or bear any special insignia or advertising device. If any such special license plates were made the secretary of state could by the terms of Smith's bill issue them at a cost of $5.50 for each set of plates so issued.

After being satisfied that the present secretary of state is not issuing any type of special plates, Representative Smith asked that House Bill 580 be re-referred to committee.

The outlawing of trick plates is understood the most popular order with the public at large that has been made in many a day as the old system was costly to the state and caused endless confusion and brought many "headaches" to officials and citizens in general, alike.

Add Funny Signs

Lapeer—Another addition to the list of funny signs was shown by a picture in a recent edition of the Lapeer Press. Tacked on the wall of a house was a "For Sale" sign and tacked to the bottom of that was another bearing the words, "Chicken Pox." The paper said it was seen on a North Main street house.

Sebewaing—Twins were born to a Unionville couple recently, but not in the same city. There were three hours between the two births, and a distance of 22 miles. The first child was born in the family home at 7:15 a. m.; then the mother was moved to a Bay City hospital, where the second of the twins was born at 10:10 the same morning.

Squirrels Like Kids

Harbor Springs—Two flying squirrels here must like children, for they have made their home on the window ledge of the third grade room in the public school. Daily the pair make exhibition flights at 9:15 a. m. as the teacher pounds on the back of the box. Other grades have been guests of the third graders to watch the animals perform. The squirrels reach their box by climbing the brick walls of the school building.

FSA GARDENS CUT LIVING EXPENSES

Well planned gardens have considerably reduced the expenditures for the home food supply and helped insure good health for the borrower families of the farm security administration in Charlevoix county, reports T. B. Pemberton, county RR supervisor, working in conjunction with Miss Ina Redman, FSA home management supervisor of Gaylord, Michigan.

Many families in the county have been able to meet all vegetable requirements of the family throughout the entire year because of the fresh, stored or canned vegetables supplied by the gardens. In addition, meals can be made more interesting because of the variety available.

According to the home supervisor, gardens are planned to furnish a good supply of fresh vegetables needed during the summer months and enough additional so the homemaker may can about 25 quarts of tomatoes and 35 quarts of other kinds of vegetables for each member of her family. In addition, three to five bushels of potatoes and three to four bushels of vegetables, such as carrots, cabbage, beets, rutabagas and turnips, are recommended for the storage for each person.

After carefully considering the preferences of the family and their requirements to provide an adequate year-around diet, the family garden is planned to meet these specifications. Farm gardens are an important contribution to the family living, reducing the cash expenditures for the home food supply by $150 or more, depending upon the size of the family. This money, formerly spent for food, will be available for other living expenses or for paying on indebtedness, the home supervisor stated.

"During the year, FSA borrowers who need the help are advised as to the best methods of caring for their gardens and preserving its produce by canning, drying or storing," Miss Ina Redman said.

who later came out with some very strong criticism. But if you will study his criticism, it will be seen it was not the soil conservation program as much as the government, he criticized. We did not meet to discuss politics or change the constitution. Our problem is agriculture, not politics, and we try not to meddle in anyone's business, but look out my friend, the enumerator will be around—he comes every ten years, regardless of 'Deals.' No, Ken never went 'round and round,' he went 'down and around' and came out with the wrong impression. In regards to his solution in the issue of April 26, it was practically the same, the New Deal. "We have three major purposes: To provide food and fibre for the nation; conserve the fertility of the soil for future generations; for this we ask for our fair share of the national income. As a critic and advisor, my guest just won't do on this problem."

Well Walt, the only way to get rid of an evil is to get at its root, and the root of this Soil Conservation proposition is the New Deal. The trouble with the country today is that the government is passing out too much help, all along the line, at the taxpayers' expense. The New Deal taxes you to get money to pay you back for conserving the fertility of the soil. That doesn't make sense, especially when it is admitted that the payments hardly make up for the cost of fertilizer used. There's about as much merit to it as there is to allow some farmers to work on the WPA when they have a barn full of stock and a cellar full of food. There are a lot of farmers who find it just as easy to get along without government aid. They always have made a go of things on their own and will continue to do so. It's just like fixing up a feeding station for birds. First thing you know you have a whole flock of them eating your handouts and they get so used to it they won't even dig up a meal for themselves. That's what the New Deal is doing with a lot of this relief money (not to mention buying votes) and if we all keep quiet and never complain, we'll be taxed into eternity. Six years of theorizing is enough to fill almost anybody's crop.

It took summer a long time to get here, but it takes it longer to arrive in the upper peninsula. Frank Bird, who spent the week end up in the Newberry territory, reported considerable snow where drifts had formed during the winter.

Just learned an astounding thing. You would naturally think you could hear that fog horn for miles the way some folks complain about it. Apparently that is not the case, however, for Coastguard Capt. Oscar Smith says that Monday night they ran the lifeboat north for ten minutes from the piers, stopped the boat engine and listened and couldn't hear the horn at all. There was very little wind and that from the east. Wonder if it could be possible the horn is turned the wrong way? However Mondny's fog was about as thick as soup and if you don't think that horn is a welcome sound to some folks, ask the men on the fish tugs.

You might naturally think festivals are a bit overdone when you consider Tennessee has a cheese festival, Holland its tulips, Benton Harbor its blossoms, Kalkaska its trout, other communities almost everything from spinach to smelt and Charlevoix its perch. The idea behind the festival business is plain and pure publicity and that they are successful is attested by the hundreds of thousands who attend such affairs. And then some fellows will tell you it doesn't pay to advertise.

The Charlevoix Sportsman's club has been successful in closing the Lake Michigan bay off Charlevoix to commercial netting. A bill has passed the legislature making such netting illegal. The measure was designed to protect the migration of perch and bass along the shore into the channel leading to Round lake and Lake Charlevoix. It is to be hoped that the purpose was just that, and nothing more, for discrimination against commercial fishermen to the extent of making their lot more difficult than it is at present would hardly be fair. There should be no hardship placed on local commercial fishermen, who represent one of this city's largest industries.

CHARLEVOIX DEFEATED IN TWO BALL CONTESTS

Lost 7 to 3 to Boyne City, 9 to 2 to Petoskey Here Tuesday

Charlevoix high school's baseball team dropped its last two games, losing 7 to 3 to Boyne City last Thursday and 9 to 2 Tuesday afternoon to Petoskey.

Boyne scored all their runs off Bruce Henley in the first four innings of Thursday's contest. Bothered by a sore arm, Henley passed four batters and struck one, and this, coupled with 5 errors, gave Boyne their runs despite the fact Charlevoix out-hit them 9 to 5. Elmer Crain held the visitors scoreless the last three innings.

Charlevoix .....0 0 0 0 1 2 0—3
Boyne .....3 1 1 2 0 0 0—7

Petoskey won Tuesday's contest behind the excellent hurling of Vincent, who struck out 13 batters and issued only one walk. They scored 4 runs in the first inning on a hit, base on ball, a hit batter and two errors. They scored as many more in the second inning on two hits, two bases on balls and an error and then added another run in the 6th.

Charlevoix scored their two runs in the 4th inning. Stevens pitched and Nowland caught for Charlevoix.

The box scores:

Petoskey .....4 4 0 0 0 1 0—9

The Perch Festival is receiving wide-spread publicity. Advertisements and publicity stories have appeared in Michigan's leading metropolitan newspapers. Jimmy Stevenson broadcast the festival from station WJR, Detroit, Tuesday morning and will continue making announcements daily preceding and during the festival. Word has been received by Gordon Todd, secretary of the Board of Commerce, that the event will also be broadcast by Bill Stern of the special events division of the National Broadcasting Company over the red network on his program between 6:45 and 7 o'clock daily. Mr. Stern is a Charlevoix summer resident. A gift of 15 pounds of perch has been sent to Mr. Stevenson and Mr. Stern.

While last week was not festival week, nearly 300 fishermen were on hand Sunday and this may be taken as an indication of the popularity of this local sport. Over 50 boats were counted on Round lake at one time last Sunday. Numerous southern Michigan and out-of-state fishermen went home with limit catches and good fishing is continuing unabated. It is the general belief the perch "run" will be at its height during the coming week.

CHARLEVOIX LOST PIONEER CITIZEN

"I came for the first time into Pine River, now Charlevoix, in 1863 in a small sailboat. The river was then very shallow, about two feet deep, and a strong current setting out. We passed into Round lake and then on through the Old River into what was then called Pine lake. We landed on the beach in front of the store of the father of the man I was with, a Mr. Beers. He had a few groceries in a Mormon log house which stood just north of where the depot now is located. We took supper at the Dixon home in a log house near the location of the Inn. We slept in the boat during the night and the next day we passed back through the upper river and took dinner with Captain Aldrich's family in a log house standing just under the hill where the Merriam property now is. Other than a few Indian tents at the mouth of the river, the Aldrich and Mason log houses, the latter located on the site of the old water works, were the only ones visible from the boat. Perhaps there were others, but I could not see them because of the timber everywhere.

From this time until the summer of 1871, I came in frequently in sailboats. That year I became mate of a small passenger steamer called the "Ella Burrows." We stopped once a week during the season of navigation until the fall of 1873. In the spring of '74 I was mate of the passenger steamer "Van Raalte," stopping at Charlevoix daily until the summer of '76.

The first boat of which I was master was the "Claribel," which made daily stops at Charlevoix during the season of 1878. In that year I had the honor of bringing the first families, perhaps eighteen or twenty people, who were the founders of the Belvedere resort.

In 1879 I became master of the steamer "City of Grand Rapids," stopping daily at Charlevoix. I continued in this capacity until 1891 when I retired from active sailing.

From 1868 to 1883 all steamers of any size landing at Charlevoix stopped at a dock owned by Fox and Rose, which was built out into Lake Michigan just north of the entrance to the river.

In the fall of 1891 my family and I moved from Northport, Michigan to Charlevoix, of which city I have been a resident ever since."

Among those from out of town attending the service were Mr. and Mrs. Charles I. Wrisley, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wrisley, Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Wrisley, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Anderson, and Miss Roselle Wrisley, all from Northport, Michigan, and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Wrisley from Coleman, Michigan, all relatives of the deceased.

Also among those present were many friends from Traverse City, Petoskey, Northport, and Boyne City. In addition to the active pallbearers, Messrs. Bonthron, Bridge, Campbell, Cooper, Howard, and Myers, the following old friends were honorary pallbearers: Captain Geo. Johnson, Captain William Franklin and Eli Weston of Traverse City; B. J. Gellick of Marquette, Captain George Weaver, Captain Sam Rose and Captain James Sanford.

PERCH FESTIVAL PROVES SUCCESS

VISITORS AND PERCH BOTH PLENTIFUL WEEK-END

Sponsors Looking for Record-Breaking Crowds Closing Days—Festival Ball, Prize Awards Saturday

With one successful week end of Charlevoix's 1st annual Perch Festival past, sponsors are looking forward to record-breaking crowds for Saturday and Sunday, May 20 and 21, closing days of the event.

Perch were promised to lower Michigan and out-of-state sportsmen and promises were kept, for perch were plentiful and everyone was rewarded with limit or near-limit catches. Not only that, accommodations were ample for all. At one time last Sunday morning 73 boats were counted on Round lake harbor. Figuring an average of four persons for each boat and conservatively estimating the number fishing off the anchored rafts and docks, it is believed over 400 fishermen were engaged.

Saturday evening, May 20th, will provide the only Festival entertainment features. Dances at Moonlight Gardens and at The Argonne are scheduled, the latter place providing the Perch Festival Ball, at which prizes will be awarded to winning anglers. W. J. Kerns, manager of The Argonne, has announced the presentations will be made at 11 o'clock and that special entertainment features are being prepared for visitors.

Six prizes in all have been made available. A rod and reel from the Don Clothier Trolling Camp will be given for the 50 perch weighing the most; Wood Brothers are awarding a rod and reel for the largest perch; a tackle box and drop line from Mac's Trolling Camp goes to the oldest fisherman; Culver & Beaudoin will present a reel to the person coming the longest distance; a camera is Fessenden & Son's prize to the youngest fisherman; a combination landing net and gaff hook will be given by Staley Hardware Co. for the most pounds of perch caught by one person.

Sportsmen are asked to register their entries at the Board of Commerce office or fishing camps so that prize winners may be determined. W. L. Oldham, Saginaw, has entered a 1¼-pound perch.

CHARLEVOIX AUTO CAMP OPENED FOR '39 SEASON

Extensive Program of Improvements Puts Camp in Fine Shape

The Charlevoix city auto camp, under the management of Clarence Bartlett, has been opened for the 1939 season. An extensive program of improvements has put the camp in the finest shape in its history.

Numerous betterments have centered in the rest rooms. An addition houses a hot water heater for shower baths. Four new toilets have been installed, floors covered and the interior decorated. Registration headquarters are being moved to the building and will be established on the upper floor, which is being glassed in to provide a lounging place.

Other improvements include enlargement of the parking grounds, installation of 24 cesspools for trailers, repair and painting of kitchens and tables, installation of four water hydrants with stone fountains. Much new seeding has been done and the grounds are in fine condition.

It is planned also to set more poles and provide additional light plugs for trailers. Parking rails around the camp's center grounds add greatly to the appearance of the place.

CITY HALL CORNERSTONE LAID MAY 13

FINE PROGRAM AT CEREMONY SATURDAY AFTERNOON

Addresses by John R. Snowball, PWA, and Judge Parm C. Gilbert Appropriate to Occasion

Appropriate ceremonies, presented before a large and appreciative audience, marked laying of the cornerstone of Charlevoix's new $65,000 city hall last Saturday afternoon.

With City Attorney Arthur L. Fitch ably acting as master of ceremonies, the program opened with invocation by Rev. Father Edward S. Neubecker. Following singing of "America," Mr. Fitch introduced local and visiting city officials.

Responding with brief remarks were "Pete" Mitchell, Petoskey city manager; Don F. Herrick, Charlevoix city superintendent; Harold Thompson, architect of the city hall; B. W. Harvey, PWA engineer-inspector of local projects. Elmer Rood, president of the village of Ellsworth, was introduced along with local city officials, past and present, whose efforts have been identified with the city hall project.

John R. Snowball of Chicago, Works Progress Administration representative, lauded the city for its fine building project and its cooperation with the United States government by participation in the government's efforts to defeat the depression through PWA projects designed to furnish work for unemployed.

The principal address was given by Judge Parm C. Gilbert of Traverse City, who pointed out the city hall as a privilege of our democratic form of government which enables people to build such public works as the building represents. His talk was plain and forceful on a topic appropriate to the occasion.

Mr. Fitch conducted the placing of mementos in the cornerstone receptacle, calling on various individuals to deposit the documents of their civic group or individual firm. Clubs, city and county organizations, business firms, the schools, fraternal orders and many business firms contributed their mementos to posterity before the box was placed in the cornerstone and laid by Mayor Robert Bridge.

INTEREST CONTINUING IN RESORT TRAINING CLASS

Start New Class After Close of Schools for Present Students

Seventeen students are continuing in the resort training school with Mrs. Lela Hallett as instructor. Classes are held at the school and actual training practice is being given at the Hallett, Charlevoix and Bartlett hotels. Later the classes will observe and assist at the Perry Hotel in Petoskey, and the Park Place Hotel in Traverse City.

As this group is for out-of-school people, many high school girls who desired the training have not had the opportunity. Therefore it is planned to start another class as soon as school closes to accommodate those now in school. This course will be from five to six hours daily for a period of three weeks.

Many of those now enrolled are being lined up for summer work. Much interest has been shown by resort managers and summer residents.

SCHOOL SAFETY PATROL NOW BEING ORGANIZED

Local School, Police Chief, Cooperate With Automobile Club

Through the cooperation of the Automobile Club of America, Police Chief Clarence Heise and the public schools, a School Safety Patrol is being organized.

The duties of the boys will be to direct grade children in crossing streets and in riding in the school bus. It is not the purpose of the patrol to direct traffic, but the presence of a patrol should be warning to drivers that care must be used. The boys are equipped with white Sam Brown belts for identification. Street crossings to be patroled by the boys are now being selected by the captains and lieutenants.

The patrol which will function in full next fall, will be made up of 5th and 6th grade boys. Officers selected are: Captain, Billy Forhtman; lieutenants, Billy Poole and Eddie Novotny. Patrol members at present are Jack Mol, Kenneth Russell, Bernie Ward, Ray Whitley, Donald North, Emerald Howe, Charles Bennett, Richard Hardy, Alfred Bergman, Herbert Hamlin and Frank Martin.

Charlevoix scored 56½ points to Mancelona's 50. Other schools in order were East Jordan with 34 points, Boyne City with 21 and Onaway with 18½. Leading 51½ points to Mancelona's 18, Charlevoix copped the relay event to cinch victory. Coleman's team scored 72 points to 45½ for Mancelona last year.

The former was high point man with 15 besides lowering his own record in the high hurdles from 16:3 to 16 seconds flat. Helms tallied 14 points for second place, making an aggregate of 29 of Mancelona's 50 points between the two of them.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By Ken Usher

When cherry blossom buds, fishermen's fingers and such get frozen that's not so out of the ordinary, but when mushrooms, whose magic-like appearance is generally credited to warm weather, are found frozen stiff, then it is something quite unusual. That's what Art Wexstaff thought last Saturday morning when he picked some mushrooms that were frozen to a crisp. With the temperature below freezing it's nothing to be wondered at, however.

Having once remarked about the bad appearance of Charlevoix's auto camp, it is a pleasure to announce now that under Clarence Bartlett's management, Michigan doesn't have a better, cleaner, finer looking camp with better facilities and accommodations than Charlevoix's.

If the number of outsiders taking part is the measurement of success for Charlevoix's 1st annual Perch Festival, the event is going over big. At 9 o'clock Sunday morning there were 73 boats on Round lake and that's the most this writer or anybody else ever saw out there at one time. And what is more, a fishin' festival that really produced fish should be something to brag about these days. Most of them only produce head aches and you buy the fish you take home to prove to your wife you went fishing at all. Saw one party of eight people pack around 400 perch to take back to Grand Rapids after two days' efforts and that's fishin' in any man's language.

You'll never get rich talking to yourself, but Edgar Bergen did.

Happy Landings

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Amid apparent confusion, the legislature is racing toward a hopeful adjournment next week.

Pressure groups are lobbying energetically in a desperate last-minute effort to get a nice slice of state money or to obtain further regulation of their affairs. Instead of putting a halt to a trend for bureaucratic control at Lansing, the legislature has created more commissions and bureaus—a consistent record for recent administrations of both major parties.

The determination of Governor Luren Dickinson to keep aloof of legislative squabbles has added to the prevailing complications. The governor has insisted chiefly on a balanced budget, the fate of which is still in the balance. He has exercised the power of veto on a measure legalizing the docking of horses' tails, declaring tartly that "if God had wanted horses to have shorter tails, he would have made them so.

For nearly five months the legislature has been in continuous session, and lawmakers themselves concede that only until the last few days has there been anything of major im-

Rev. L. D. Bodine, District F. M. elder, preached a fine sermon at the Free Methodist church, Central Lake, Sunday night along revival lines and conversions. He said "churchanity" should not enter into the plan of saving souls, and gave several instances illustrating his point.

Sydney Williams of Central Lake was a caller over the week end at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Robert Boals, accompanying Mr. Anderson's people over there Saturday. He was anxious to see the new baby boy of which he is grandfather, at the Boals home. Baby was born last week.

Ask Harry Mason and Peter Swanson if you want to know about chickens. The Masons got a hundred chicks that they are trying to raise without a brooder, in the house. They lost several during the recent cold snap, and Swansons have lost two-thirds of their's. The brooder lamp went out.

The county road commission, which had its meeting last week at Bellaire, is re-surfacing M-88, Central Lake to Eastport, and along east side of Torch lake with clay from the Lloyd Morse clay pit north of town. About a dozen road trucks were engaged in the work last week and the machine shovel was used.

Creswell, Bay View, Grand View and North Milton schools are closing this week with picnics. Miss Shirley Stewart, who closed last week, is planning on attending college this summer. Emer Mathias returned to college at Mt. Pleasant last week, having been called home on account of the serious illness of his brother, Otho.

Rev. Haymes is holding revival services this week at the new Pentacostal Tabernacle, Central Lake. He played a cornet selection at Grand View Sunday school in the afternoon. Mrs. Lillian Underwood gave a fine Mother's Day talk in which she admonished the young people to be kind to their mothers and mentioned several mother characters of the Bible. Harry Mason of Eastport sang a fine Mother's Day selection at both Greenwood and Grand View schools. He has a fine soprano voice and his selections are always well received.

Attendances at Sunday school Sunday were: Free Methodist 30, Pentacostal 40, Creswell 40, Greenwood 20, Grand View 26. Rev. Weaver gave talks at Jordan River, Greenwood and Bush. Otis Bundy gave Mother's Day talk from "Behold Thy Mother." Many pathetic instances were given concerning mothers that brought tears to the eyes of listeners. Miss Edirth Wilfong and brothers sang two pleasing trios, mother's songs. They have promised to come again to Creswell and sing anywhere in the county at the rural Sunday schools. This is just what we have been trying to get the Christian young people to do for a long time, and are glad that we have at last succeeded.

Mr. Loper has printed some attendance cards for keeping a record of attendances, and prize scripture cards have been received that will be given at the end of each quarter to those attending every Sunday. Quite a hearty response was given in the schools Sunday to the plan we announced last week in the Courier for learning Bible verses. Mrs. Minnie Osterbaun of Grand View Sunday school and Miss Bernadine Brown of Jordan, have announced their intention of learning the 300 verses. Miss Osterbaun will be record keeper at Grand View for those learning Bible verses and will also have charge of the Bible booklets the young people are making for the Sunday school. Nineteen new members were received at Grand View last week, and nine this week. Creswell has 16 new members. The secretary, Miss Betty Greibe, at Creswell.

Claude Fairman, we hear, reports that the frost of last week killed some of the most advanced fruit buds, but that there are so many that there probably will be enough left if no more killing frosts are still coming. Mr. Fairman has purchased 80 acres more land, and has set out enough berries so that he will have about 10 acres. He says these will help to tide over the loss in the cherry crop. His berries are looking fine, and he sold, and is still selling, large quantities of plants. He had one order of 8,000 and another of 15,000 plants. An order came from Ilenfritz, Monroe, for a carload of black raspberry plants, that he could not fill. He is fortunately located between two lakes that keep him free from frost, unless an unusual one that strikes nearly everybody should come. Mr. Fairman uses the lime sulphur spray, topping off quite often with bordeaux. Black caps are not planted near the red raspberry as mosaic is sometimes caused in that way. If "nipped" off the black caps will branch better and will not have to be "staked." This should be done in the fall, otherwise the plants should be trimmed in the spring. Strawberries are best planted in the spring, very early before frosts stop. This will insure a living growth. Mr. Fairman knows the fruit business pretty near "from A to Z." Will there be any sale for cherries this year? He says he doesn't know, but is planning to truck to Chicago, and thinks Ellsworth and East Jordan will buy.

Whose "Unseen Hand" Torments Indian Chief's Daughter-in-law?

In The American Weekly, with the May 21 issue of The Detroit Sunday Times, will be an article describing how a woman resident of Windsor, Ont., has awakened thrice every week, covered with scratches, despite her precautions, since her disapproving papa-in-law died . . . And although friends believe she is under a spell, medical men don't even suspect the old man's ghost. Be sure to get Sunday's Detroit Times.

Trick of Fate

Chesaning—Maybe it was fate, or maybe it was just coincidence, but at least there is something unusual about a recent experience of Mrs. Frank Brier. She had intended to drive to Saginaw with her husband one day, but something came up and she stayed at home. While making the trip, her husband was injured in an auto accident, and died, making the 13th auto fatility in Saginaw county in 1939.

Office supplies of any description may be obtained quickly through this office, Charlevoix Courier.—Adv.3tf.

Muck Fertilizer Demonstration Established at Muck Land Garden

For the first time we now have a muck fertilizer demonstration. Mr. Bailley, owner of the Muck Land Garden, for some time has been anxious to find out the proper fertilizer program to use on muck land. Professor Paul Harmer visited this farm last week and used several different annlysis in the plot.

The results will be carefully watched and summarized. Late next summer we hope to announce the fertilizer program that will be most profitable to follow on muck land.

Meetings To Discuss Sleeping Sickness of Horses Scheduled for Wednesday, May 24th

Sleeping sickness of horses has increased to the point where it is causing great concern among horse owners in northern Michigan. In fact, late last summer around seventy-five cases of encephalomyelitis were reported in Michigan. It has been pretty definitely demonstrated that mosquitoes and other insects are largely responsible for much of the spread of sleeping sickness. Furthermore, a chick vaccine has now been developed which virtually gives complete protection against sleeping sickness for at least six months. Two injections are necessary from seven to ten days apart.

All information concerning the symptoms, causes and treatment of sleeping sickness will be discussed by Dr. B. J. Killham, animal pathologist from the Michigan State college, at two meetings to be held on Wednesday, May 24th, as follows:

First meeting, Barnard Grange hall at 1:30 p. m.

Second meeting, Boyne City library at 8:00 p. m.

If you have heard of any horses having had sleeping sickness in your community or if you are sufficiently interested in the protection from this disease, be sure to attend your nearest meeting. You may not need this information right now but sooner or later it will be a serious problem in this area.

The Home Management ladies' achievement day, held in the Methodist church, Boyne City, last Thursday, attracted a fine attendance. The exhibits very nicely indicated the type of subject matter studied and the results. The Michigan Public Service company had an assortment of floor lights, wall lights, irons and toasters of the latest designs. In addition, there were exhibits on the subjects of hobbies and household equipment of twenty-five years ago. It is to be remembered that extension work officially started in 1914 so the key note of the entire day was the changes that have taken place in this short period of time.

Mrs. Lavina Lockman, county chairman, introduced the program and very graciously assumed the responsibility of seeing that all guests enjoyed themselves. A cafeteria dinner was served by the ladies of the Methodist church, to over one hundred folks. The forenoon session was devoted largely to business. Miss Bernice Bashaw, county secretary, reported on last year's achievement day, announced the names of all leaders and the results of the election for next year's project. Miss Bernice Bashaw, East Jordan, is the new county chairman; Mrs. W. D. Burmeister, Horton's Bay, county secretary; and Mrs. Lavina Lockman, Boyne City, county recreational leader. Miss Helen Noyes, extension specialist, gave a tentative summary of the results of the home management project. Over two hundred ladies finished the program in fourteen groups with one group yet to report. Also, two other communities had two or more meetings. Somewhat later we will have a complete report which will be of interest to all farm folks in the county.

The afternoon program started at 1:30 with invocation by Rev. R. R. Armstrong, address of welcome by Rev. Stanley Buck, and the response by Mrs. Edith Novotny of Charlevoix. Rev. Armstrong led the community singing in a highly capable manner. The next number was put on by the ladies of the North Boyne group portraying the musical hits of yesterday. Each song was acted out by the appropriate dress and included "Take Me Out to the Ball Game," "A Bicycle Built for Two," "Silver Threads Among the Gold" and "The Little Ford Rambled Right Along."

The East Jordan group gave the past, present and future of ladies extension work in Charlevoix county. The first project started in the spring of 1925 and since that time fifteen projects have been started and finished by the extension groups. Impersonations of movie stars, by Jacqueline Dana, was one of the big hits of the day. Some ten or twelve stars were impersonated.

The address of the afternoon was given by Dr. Alexander Campbell, of the Michigan Department of Health, on the subject of maternal health. His message was greatly appreciated as it touched upon the most sacred obligation of parents, that of bringing good, strong, healthy children into the world. He made the statement that over half the mortality could be prevented if proper care and attention were given to the mothers.

Rev. Armstrong gave brief remarks, followed by several numbers on the musical saw. The program ended with the favorite old hymn, "Till We Meet Again."

AT THE MOVIES

Shirley Temple in Technicolor

In answer to thousands of requests from her fans Darryl F. Zanuck presents Shirley Temple in Technicolor in "The Little Princess," 20th Century-Fox's screen version of the famous classic, which opens at the Palace Theatre on Saturday, May 20.

The most impressive cast ever assembled for a Shirley Temple production supports the dimpled star in bringing the immortal story to life on the screen, headed by Richard Greene and Anita Louise and including Ian Hunter, Cesar Romero, Arthur Treacher, Mary Nash, Sybil Jason, Miles Mander and Marcia Mae Jones.

"Fast and Loose" Brings Laughs and Chills to Screen

By popular demand, Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell are co-starred for the fourth time in "Fast and Loose," rib-tickling and fast-moving sequel to last season's exciting comedy-mystery, "Fast Company." The new picture opens a two-day engagement Tuesday, May 23, at the Palace Theatre.

As a direct contrast to their earlier performances in "Night Must Fall," in which Montgomery portrayed a maniacal murderer, both he and Miss Russell now step out of serious character to play comedy roles, he as an adventurous book dealer who dabbles in crime solutions and Miss Russell as his fun-loving wife.

Anna May Wong, America's favorite Chinese film actress, gets mixed up with gangland's worst hoodlums and comes out the winner once again in her latest picture, "King of Chinatown," which Paramount will present to local thrill fans next Thursday, May 25, at the Palace Theatre. Cast in the colorful role of a woman-surgeon, Miss Wong faces a dramatic dilemma when called upon to save the life of Chinatown's most vicious racketeer, knowing that he is her father's mortal enemy and a cold-blooded murderer as well.

"Summer," A page of unusual sketches in color by the popular English artist, Alastair K. Macdonald. One of the many interesting features in The American Weekly, the magazine distributed with the Sunday Chicago Herald and Examiner.

Good men used to die by the dozen for the aid of their party. Now they merely vote on such things as "ham and eggs."

A New Series by E. Phillips Oppenheim

The news of the world has become a turmoil of plots and counterplots, mystic codes, deadly formulae, beautiful spies. Has history gone beyond the master of mystery fiction, E. Phillips Oppenheim? Not quite, as you'll learn to your delight in his new series of yarns. Watch for the first, "The Knave's Messenger" a gripping thriller in which a beautiful spy uses a surprising means of conveying secret airbase locations. It appears in This Week, the color-gravure magazine with next Sunday's Detroit News.

There are persons far too polite to thrust knives in their mouths who wouldn't hesitate a minute to stick one in your back.

BANG'S DISEASE INDEMNITIES STOPPED MAY 1ST

Legislation Now Pending for Continuance of Program

Payment of indemnities for cattle reacting to Bang's disease tests were discontinued in Michigan May 1, according to Elmer A. Beamer, commissioner of department of agriculture. The United States Bureau of Animal Industry, which has conducted campaign against the disease during the past five years, discontinued payments under the provision which prohibits the federal agency from payment of amount in excess of that paid by the cooperating state.

With legislation pending providing for an appropriation for the continuance of the program, federal authorities are continuing the testing of cattle, but are not branding reactors to the disease. In event appropriation measure becomes a law, making state funds available, the reactors will be branded and slaughtered with payments being made as in the past.

Federal expenditures in this program have amounted to $1,200,000 in indemnities.

He is found in every community, large or small. The majority do not appear dishonest until the day when pressing circumstances cause a need that cannot be filled through ordinary means. Many illustrations clarified this picture.

SUMMER BRINGS MILDEW PROBLEM

Watch for mildew during warm, muggy spells in summertime, when the relative humidity is above 60, warn those who know. Mildew may appear in a few hours on clothing in closets, on shower curtains and other household textiles, or on floors, furniture, leather bags or shoes when poor ventilation prevails.

If fabrics must be stored, put them in a dry place. Articles in trunks in the cellar often mildew because the cellar is commonly damp or poorly ventilated.

Mildew is a fungus growth, explain home economics specialists of Michigan State college. Characteristic mildew spots are gray, green, yellow or black. They may vary in size from a pin point to a cent. Once in the fibers of a fabric, mildew stains are almost impossible to remove. Cotton is more susceptible than woolen goods.

On leather bags or shoes, a growth of mildew can be brushed off if found promptly, and the article can be washed.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

May 15, 1939

The common council of the city of Charlevoix met on the above date with Mayor Bridge presiding.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Moved by Alderman Heise, seconded by Alderman Wood that following estimate of cost number six of Kit Carson Lumber Co. in the amount of $2,634.05, be allowed and order drawn for the amount. Motion carried by the following yea and nay vote: Yeas — Aldermen Bellinger, Hallett, Heise, Hooker, Lamphear and Wood.

Alderman Hooker offered the following resolution and moved its adoption, seconded by Alderman Bellinger:

Resolved by The Common Council of the City of Charlevoix, that

The completion of the City Hall and Fire Station in a manner suitable for use and occupancy according to specifications and estimates prepared and filed by the city superintendent is a necessary public improvement; and that

The city of Charlevoix make application to the United Sates of America through the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works for a supplemental grant for the purpose of aiding in financing the completion of the municipal building now being constructed as PWA Project Mich. 1793-F, the total cost of which is estimated to be $2,182.00, specifications and estimates of which are on file at the office of the city clerk.

Resolved Further that in the event such application is approved and the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works offers to assist in financing the completion of the building, the city of Charlevoix, if it accepts such offer, shall provide funds in an amount which together with the grant will, in the judgment of the city of Charlevoix and the Federal Administrator of Public Works be sufficient for the completion of such building.

Resolved Further that the city of Charlevoix request an amount of not to exceed 15% of the total estimated cost of $2,182.00 and that the city of Charlevoix shall furnish an amount of 55% of the estimated cost of $2,182.00.

Resolved Further that it is expressly understood that if the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works makes the above requested supplemental grant the city of Charlevoix in accepting such and in expending the same will abide by all rules and regulations prescribed by the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works.

Resolved Further that the city superintendent be and hereby is directed to make due and proper application according to the intent and purpose of this resolution.

Adopted by the following yea and nay vote: Yeas—Aldermen Bellinger, Hallett, Heise, Hooker, Lamphear and Wood. Nays—none.

Alderman Wood offered the following resolution and moved its adoption, seconded by Alderman Lamphear.

Whereas, the city of Charlevoix (hereinafter referred to as "Owner") and Clement Industrial Electric company (hereinafter referred to as "Contractor") have entered into a contract for the performance of certain work, in connection with the construction of the Power Plant Improvement Project, Mich. 1513-F of the Owner:

Whereas, it is provided in the said contract, that in the event the said work is not completed by the 20th day of April, 1939, the said contractor shall pay to the owner as liquidated damages an amount computed on the basis of $25.00 for each day the said work remains uncompleted after the aforesaid date; and

Whereas, for the reasons hereinafter enumerated, it has become impossible for the contractor to perform the said contract within the contractual date for completion; viz.

1. Impossible to make the final connections to the diesel engine driven generator until the generator is installed, which will probably be about May 20, 1939.

2. On change order 11-4-2, street lighting metering equipment was added under date of March 27. Delivery on equipment such as required for this, is approximately six weeks, and the shipment is not being made until about the 15th of May. If shipped at that time it will be installed by June 1, 1939.

Whereas, it appears the said contractor is not legally responsible for such delay in the completion of said contract, and accordingly, liquidated damages should not be assessed;

Now Therefore, Be And It Is Hereby Resolved by the common council of the city of Charlevoix (1) that the contractual date for completion of the said contract be extended to the 1st day of June, 1939; (2) that the city of Charlevoix waives any and all claims for liquidated damages arising out of the failure of the contractor to complete the work prior thereto; and (3) that said contractual provision providing for liquidated damages shall otherwise remain in full force and effect provided, however, that liquidated damages may be hereafter assessed in accordance with the terms of the contract, only from and after the aforesaid extended date for completion of the work.

Adopted by the following yea and nay vote: Yeas—Aldermen Bellinger, Hallett, Heise, Hooker, Lamphear and Wood. Nays—none.

Alderman Hooker offered the following resolution and moved its adoption, seconded by Alderman Wood.

Be It Resolved by the City Council of the City of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, as follows:

1. That it is deemed advisable and for the best interests of the said city that the contract between the said city and the Clement Industrial Electric company, the contractor, covering work on the project of said city be changed in the following respects:

(a) Remove DC potential receptacles from steam exciter panel and install and wire one on each of the existing steam generator panels—$9.00.

(b) Furnish and install 22 feet of 4 cell duct on top of the 6 cell duct from the switchboard location west to the first manhole outside the building—$55.00.

(c) Construct one 18" manhole with concrete bottom on the west side of the Pere Marquette siding just opposite the sub-station—$65.00.

(d) Increase the diameter of the 3 other manholes from 36" to 48" and install 6" concrete bottoms with 6" tile drains in bottom—$99.98.

(e) Construct concrete base for house transformers 2'x3'x8" using 1:2½:3½ mix—$32.40.

(f) Add 168 feet No. 1, 4 conductor, 5000 volt cable which is necessary in order to take care of additional cable needed for conduit leads up pole and the additional distances of the 4 conductors by the points A and B—$235.20.

(g) Increase depth of 4 manholes approximately 1 foot—$18.00.

(h) Run potential and current leads for totalizing meter, current and potential leads for new meters to be placed in the future on each of the two steam panels and furnish and install new 3 element meter for mensuring the current on the Bellaire panel—$81.00.

(i) Change plug switches on the Bellaire switchboard at Bellaire to type SB-1—$60.54.

(j) Furnish a new plate type exciter rheostat for small generator at Bellaire—$13.86.

(k) Furnish panel and framework for the 2 generator field rheostats to match present panels already installed—$55.00.

(l) Labor required for moving swinging bracket from one end of the switchboard to the other and rewire same.

Exchange the Bellaire city circuit with feeder to Charlevoix as specified originally.

Install generator field rheostats and make installation of rheostat panel and handwheels—$114.00.

Total cost—$835.98.

2. That it is hereby determined that all the data necessary to obtain a comprehensive and intelligent bid, which data, prepared and assembled by D. F. Herrick, are referred herein and made a part hereof, were properly submitted to said contractor with a request that such contractor submit a proposal to said city covering such proposed change.

3. That the proposal of said contractor, a copy of which is hereto attached, and made a part hereof, to make the said change and accept therefor an estimated increase in the contract price of $838.98 be and the same is hereby accepted for and in behalf of said city.

4. That such acceptance of the contractor's proposal shall be in full force and effect when a certified copy of this resolution is sent to the contractor by the engineer of the said city, and not until then.

Adopted by the following yea and nay vote: Yeas—Aldermen Bellinger, Hallett, Heise, Hooker, Lamphear and Wood. Nays—none.

Alderman Wood offered the following resolution and moved its adoption, seconded by Alderman Heise.

Whereas, the city of Charlevoix (hereinafter referred to as "Owner") and Kit Carson Lumber company (hereinafter referred to as "Contractor") have entered into a contract for the performance of certain work, in connection with the construction of the Power Plant Improvement Project, Mich. 1513-F of the owner;

Whereas, for the reasons hereinafter enumerated, it has become impossible for the contractor to perform the said contract within the contractual date for completion; viz.

1. Extra work, addition to general contract on the Bellaire plant.

2. Hold up of brick work on the easterly wall, due to the opening left for installation of diesel engine, which in turn retarded the interior trim and painting and the exterior pointing up of the building.

Whereas, it appears the said contractor is not legally responsible for such delay in the completion of said contract, and accordingly, liquidated damages should not be assessed:

Now Therefore, Be And It Is Hereby Resolved by the common council of the city of Charlevoix (1) that the contractual date for completion of the said contract be extended to the 1st day of June, 1939; (2) that the city of Charlevoix waives any and all claims for liquidated damages arising out of the failure of the contractor to complete the work prior thereto; and (3) that said contractual provision providing for liquidated damages shall otherwise remain in full force and effect provided, however, that liquidated damages may be hereafter assessed in accordance with the terms of the contract only from and after the aforesaid extended date for completion of the work.

Adopted by the following yea and nay vote: Yeas—Aldermen Bellinger, Hallett, Heise, Hooker, Lamphear and Wood. Nays—none.

On motion the council adjourned.

Ray S. Hamilton, City Clerk.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT

Contributing Factors to Child Health, Growth and Development

The health, growth and development of the child depend upon heredity and environment.

Heredity determines certain characteristics, such as the color of the eyes and hair. Heredity is also a factor in the size of the child. Short, stocky parents should not worry because their child is not so tall as one whose parents are tall and slender. Heredity plays a role in many other ways.

Environment begins to influence the baby long before he is born. In order to provide the best possible environment before birth it is necessary to protect the mother's health, to be sure that she has proper food, exercise, rest and that she is under the supervision of a physician who will then know in advance whether any difficulties may be expected when the baby is born and will be prepared to meet them. If these precautions are taken, the baby should start out in life with a well developed body and without injuries resulting from a difficult birth.

The "good environment" after birth included the general surroundings, fresh air, warmth, sunshine, quiet, freedom from crowding, and cleanliness. These are all important, but a good environment also includes proper food, provision for the formation of good habits in eating, sleeping and elimination, as well as protection against certain diseases, correction of physical defects, training and education. It is only when we keep all these factors of environment at the best possible level that we are doing all that can be done to promote the health of the child.

For the young infant "proper food" means breast milk, if possible, or cow's milk that has been made safe by boiling. The composition of the cow's milk formula must be correct for the needs of the infant according to his age and weight. Two of the vitamins that promote health and development of sound bones should be supplied early by giving cod-liver oil and orange juice or their substitutes in the proper amounts. As the child grows older his diet becomes more varied, but milk remains a most important item.

To develop good health habits the baby should have regular hours for eating, sleeping, elimination and play. Proper habits can be taught at a very early age. Later, proper habits of outdoor exercise and personal hygiene must be established.

Methods are available for preventing certain diseases. Early in life the child should be immunized against smallpox and diphtheria. Exposure to all infectious diseases should be avoided by keeping the young child away from all persons known to have colds or other communicable diseases, and from crowded places. The child should have regular examinations by a physician from earliest infancy to make sure that feeding and care are adjusted to his needs, and that if defects are present they are recognized and corrected early.

Children need proper housing to protect their health and social development. Good housing includes healthful surroundings, pure running water, sanitary toilet conveniences, adequate light, heat and ventilation, enough room to avoid overcrowding, and a house that is weatherproof and damp proof.

To provide a good environment, the community must safeguard the water and milk supply, control communicable disease, supervise sanitation, provide educational and recreational facilities and health services for children who are dependent, handicapped, and in danger of becoming delinquent. The family must teach the child to take advantage of the opportunities for health which the community offers.

Physical and mental health cannot be separated. A good environment must also provide for the mental health of the child as well as for his physical health. With proper home life, training, education and companionship he should attain a well-rounded development as an individual and as a member of society.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE NEWS BULLETIN

Sales Tax Receipts on Autos Take Decided Increase

Legislation affecting sales tax collections on automobiles, that went into effect April 4, imposed additional burdens upon the department of state, as shown by the fact that from April 4 to May 5, collections by the department from this source amounted to $428,844 for 29,512 automobile transactions. The new law makes this work a responsibility of the secretary of state because of the ability of the motor vehicle division to keep a constant check on all licenses issued on sales and transfers. The change in system has resulted in increased collections from an average of $6.85 per car in 1938 to $14.54 a car in April this year.

Harry F. Kelly, secretary of state, is an active member or an ex-officio member of a dozen state boards and commissions. Some of these include: state administrative board, board of auditors, board of tax administration, liquor control commission, board of state canvassers, board of escheats, board of fund commissioners, bureau of labor and industrial statistics, Michigan highway reciprocity board and others. His office is charged with the responsibility of compilation, publication and distribution of the laws, documents and reports of the various departments and institutions, issues patents, commissions, warrants and requisitions for extraditions, etc.

It is indeed a dull day when the secretary of state does not have from one to five state board meetings on his schedule to attend. "It is all in the day's work," is Mr. Kelly's comment.

Sound Sleeper

Armada—Edward Schwandt, a Mt. Clemens milk man, awoke as usual at 3:30 one morning and reached for a bedside lamp. Not finding it, he groped his way to the wall and switched on a light. Missing were the table, table lamp, radio, floor lamp, two rugs, table scarf, two pictures, two pillows and some ash trays. An open front door and muddy footprints on the porch explained the theft—and Schwandt had slept through it all.

portance in the way of accomplishment. Civil service has been emasculated. Labor legislation has dwindled to a faint echo of the late Governor Fitzgerald's original program. Welfare control has been divided between supervisors and the state with $9,000,000 a year allocated for the entire state. If the budget is balanced, it will be a miracle of first magnitude, and a genuine feather-in-the-hat for Governor Dickinson.

Such is a minute picture of Lansing today.

Unemployment Law Change

Proposed by the state unemployment compensation commission and approved unanimously by the house is a bill which would reduce the waiting period from three to two weeks for jobless workers and would give employers the benefit of four years in application of their reserve funds.

The act of 1937 provided that an employer, if the level of employment had been fairly stable and few employees had become jobless, could build up a reserve fund. After 1946 this employer might have to pay only the minimum, 1 per cent, instead of 3 per cent. The tax would depend upon the extent of unemployment in his business.

The house mensure would put the reserve fund benefit into effect in 1942 instead of 1946.

But regardless of whether all employees were kept on the payroll year in and year out, each employer would still have to pay 1 per cent to the state. This payroll tax is the minimum.

More Tax Problems

A hint that a special session of the legislature might be necessary to provide more funds for unemployment relief was made by Governor Dickinson, while the senate wrestled with a problem of the intangible tax.

The governor said frankly that if more money was to be appropriated, new or additional taxes were inevitable as he opposed the incurring of a further deficit. Former Governor Frank Murphy left a $25,000,000 deficit which Senator George McCallum, chairman of the senate taxation committee, would retire by ear-marking revenue from an enforceable intangible tax.

Michigan's present intangible tax law is openly ignored. If it were enforced strictly according to the letter of the law, automobile concerns threaten to move out of the State. Wealthy citizens would do likewise, so it is said.

Senator McCallum's tax proposal would raise approximately $8,000,000 a year—an amount which Senator Earl Munshaw suggested be set aside to pay off the $25,000,000 indebtedness.

Treasurer Miller Dunckel had advocated increasing the sales tax from 3 to 4 per cent which would be paid by poor and wealthy alike. Auditor General Vernon J. Brown, frowning on the imposition of any additional tax, declared that old-fashioned economy would solve the state's financial troubles.

Detroit's 49th State

The Detroit city council, which previously had viewed sympathetically a proposal to create a 49th state out of the metropolitan area, got a dose of its own medicine the other day at Lansing.

After officials had bemoaned the fact that Detroit paid more to the state of Michigan than it received back in benefits, state representatives slapped $300,000 annual cost on the city of Detroit by passing a bill limiting all municipal firemen to 72 hours a week. All Wayne county legislators except one voted for it.

This bill, now before the senate, would affect all large municipalities which maintained firemen on full-time duty.

City officials had denounced it as an invasion of home rule rights, while firemen pleaded that their hours of work should be reduced to conform with other classes of labor.

School Aid Delayed

Cagey in his thinking is Representative John Espie of Clinton county, chairman of the house ways and means committee.

To thwart a threatened "raid" by school interests on the state treasury, Chairman Espie has announced that the $37,000,000 school appropriation bill would be locked up in committee to make sure that other appropriations were not boosted by legislators. He said: "Any money appropriated in excess of the committee's recommendations will have to come out of the schools' funds."

Teachers' retirement fund would receive $200,000 annually, instead of $325,000.

An additional $100,000 would be granted for burial of old age assistance recipients, making a new annual total of $300,000 for this purpose. On April 30 a total of 76,999 persons were getting old age pensions, average $16.14 a month per client.

Law School Graduates

Among the professional groups which seek to raise their standards by legislative enactment, the State Bar of Michigan (to which all attorneys must belong in order to practice within the state) recently sponsored a bill requiring attendance at an accredited law school as a requisite for state license.

The bill received only eight votes in the senate. Twenty-two senators voted against it.

White-haired Senator John VanderWerp of Muskegon, for 18 years a circuit judge, was responsible for the overwhelming defeat. In an eloquent speech he declared that he had learned law in another attorney's office and pointed out a long list of Michigan attorneys who attained high standing in their profession despite a handicap of a lack of law school training.

The Michigan State Dental society was victorious in obtaining legislative sanction to prohibit all advertising except a "professional card." No dental prices may be mentioned. Newspaper publicity of dental care, however, may be printed as acceptable to the profession.

Wherever You Drive

You're SAFER on New

FIRESTONE

CHAMPIONS

The Only Tires Made with the New Safety-Lock Cord Body and New Gear Grip Tread

On any roads, in any car, in any weather, you are safer on Firestone Champion Tires. And here's the reason:

The Firestone Champion Tire is different—entirely new designers swept into the discard all conventional tire building patterns. They created a revolutionary new type of cord body—and an amazingly safe, new styled tread design.

STRONGER CORD BODY

The new Firestone Champion Tire is built by an entirely new method in which each and every component part of the tire is locked and interlocked into a super-safe, inseparable unit of amazing strength. This is accomplished first by the use of a completely new type of tire cord called "Safey-Lock" in which the cotton fibers are more compactly interwoven to assure cooler running and provide greater strength. Then, the fibers in each individual cord, the cords in each ply and the plies themselves, are securely locked together by a new and advanced Firestone process of Gum-Dipping which provides amazingly greater strength. And greater strength means greater safety.

MORE NON-SKID MILEAGE

The new Safety-Lock cord construction provides the extra strength needed for the use of the new, thicker, tougher, deeper Firestone Gear-Grip tread which delivers remarkably longer non-skid mileage. This sensational new tread is called "Gear-Grip" because of its unique design—it has more than 3,000 sharp-edged angles which grip the road with a sure-footed hold to protect against skidding and assure a safe stop.

Firestone LIFE PROTECTOR the Tire within a Tire

This amazing new Firestone development makes a blowout as harmless as a slow leak.

Should a blowout occur the exclusive Firestone Safety-Valve holds sufficient air in the inner compartment to support the car until it is brought to a safe stop.

Drive in today and let us equip your car with the extra non-skid safety and blow-out protection provided in a new set of Firestone Champion Tires—The only Tires that are Safety-Proved on the Speedway for Your Protection on the Highway.

shot and killed the dog when it emerged from the barn of his employer, L. A. Spafford. The dog became lost from a hunting party April 8 and took refuge overnight in the Spafford barn. Judge Andrew Carlson quoted the state law which says that only police officers may kill licensed dogs, even though they are caught trespassing, unless the animal attacks stock or persons.

A dictator would have a tough time in America. People don't even obey the laws they make themselves.

E. A. Loop, that Grand Rapids pal of Glenn See's, sure got the surprise of his life while out perch fishing Sunday. He hooked a 2½ pound brook trout, which is enough to surprise anyone and a mighty fine prize, too.

To see the school band with its young musicians parading and playing down Bridge street last Saturday sort of raises a lump in a fellow's throat. A band's a mighty fine thing.

Summer can't be so far off after all. Notice quite a few of our regular summer residents on the streets—the Fielders, Schearers, Julius Gilbert, Tramels, Carpenters — so the migration has started. The Steiners are at the Belvedere and W. E. "Bill" Flynn and the missus have arrived. Them's sure signs alright.

They say the South Sea Islands have the same weather the year around. Wonder how on earth they start a conversation down there?

Art Bergeon has prettied up the front of his store and made a lot of fine improvements inside, too.

Mrs. Ben Nowland writes that she and many others she's talksd to agree with this column's arguments against certain phases of the New Deal and takes the administration to task for buying Argentine beef for the navy because it is cheaper and better than American canned beef. That reminds me of what a member of congress was quoted as saying. He claimed now that President Roosevelt had failed to solve the American farmer's problems, he was trying his hand at correcting Argentina's. Some people are just born meddlers, I guess.

It just doesn't make sense. Being poor is one of the hardest things in the world, and still one of the easiest.

Charlevoix is to lose an old landmark — the O'Neil taxi, formerly Wood livery barn—on Bridge street. Workmen are now razing the structure.

As a general thing a newspaper editor shuns poetry because if he encourages the plentiful genius existing, the first thing he knows he is snowed under with more contributions than space permits. However, Arthur L. Fitch, prompted to defend the perch when a movement was under way to promote a lie-telling contest in connection with the Perch Festival, comes out with a verse entitled "The Lowly Perch," which this writer stole off him and publishes herewith because it is unusual, good and timely:

THE LOWLY PERCH
(Perca flavescens)
By A. L. Fitch

One who would lie about a perch
Is fit to drown without a search.
How fast they bite, or how many you took
Should never be written in any book.
For Nature made it the poor man's take,
Whether on a dish, or in the lake.
No fancy tackle, no giddy lure
Will make your catch one whit more sure.
The freckled boy with a string and pin
May best the guy from Fisherman's Inn.
For this finy tribe belongs to mnn,
Can't tell a minnow pail from an oyster can.
You may aim for the mighty muskellunge,
Or the tarpon with his fight and plunge.
You may know no fish but the speckled trout,
But when its o'er you will turn about
And find the guy with a frying pan
Sweetened with fish that's made for man.
You may have a bent for small-mouthed bass
As you sneak away from early mass,
You may love your whitefish, or a tuna loin,
Or a plate of smelt from the River Boyne.
You may have your chicken-of-the-sea,
But bring some perch when serving me.

SEEK FARM EMPLOYMENT FOR YOUTHS OF CITIES

15th Coogressional Dist. Republican Club Behind Movement

In an endeavor to take youths off the city streets this summer, the 15th Congressional District Republican club has set up a "Job on a farm for the unemployed youth" committee.

It is believed the movement will fill a long felt need and by directing youthful energy toward healthful and gainful occupation on a farm will prevent aimless wandering on the city streets.

Through the cooperation of newspapers the committee has on file several hundred applications from youths anxious to work on farms this summer for their room and board and whatever wage they may prove worth. Farmers desiring to employ one or more of these youths may write the committee secretary, Arbeda Morey, 2274 LaMothe, Detroit, Michigan.

FOREST FIRE DAMAGE HEAVIEST IN HISTORY

Total of 397 Fires Destroy 62,684 Acres Up to May 7th

A total of 397 forest fires had burned over 62,684 acres of land in Michigan up to May 7, according to the forest fire section of the department of conservation.

This figure includes the Onaway fires where thousands of acres were burned over by wind-fanned flames apparently of incendiary origin, on May 6, 7 and 8.

During the week ending May 7 a total of 75 fires was reported in the upper peninsula and 599 acres were burned by the fires. Nearly 100 times as much acreage was burned over in the lower peninsula during the same week where 131 fires ravaged 58,891 acres.

Major part of the acreage burned was in District No. 9 which includes Montmorency, Alpena and Presque Isle counties. The 22 fires reported in this area burned a total of 57,147 acres.

Aside from suspected incendiarism, carelessness in the woods retained its place as the cause of 90 per cent of all Michigan fire damage. Carelessly tossed away cigarettes and matches thrown out of car windows are among the most common fire causes. Broken bottles left on carelessly kept camp sites may catch the sun's rays as does a magnifying glass and ignite dry grass which acts as tinder for the flames.

PERCH FESTIVAL CLOSEO SUNDAY

TERMED VERY SUCCESSFUL TOURIST ATTRACTION

Prizes Awarded to Winning Anglers at Festival Dance Held Saturday Night at The Argonoe

Sunday brought to a close Charlevoix's first annual Perch Festival, generally termed the most successful tourist attraction ever staged here.

While rain Sunday cut down the number of fishermen to a great extent, visitors over the previous week end out-numbered any previous similar period and activity throughout the past week was considerably above average.

The Perch Festival dance held Saturday evening at The Argonne drew a capacity crowd. Clair S. Webster, president of the Board of Commerce, expressed appreciation to all cooperating in making the event a success, and presented Sam King, representing the Charlevoix Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, co-sponsors of the Festival, who awarded prizes to winning fishermen.

A reel from Culver & Beaudoin was presented Mrs. H. L. Drake of West Palm Beach, Fla., the fisherman coming the greatest distance; William Quirk, 76, of St. Louis, Mo., won a tackle box and drop line from Mac's Trolling Camp, as the oldest fisherman; 8-year-old Charles Francis Kniper of Grand Rapids, won the Fessenden & Son camera as the youngest fisherman; a perch weighing 29 ounces won a rod and reel awarded by Wood Brothers for the largest perch; Henry Strong, Traverse City, entered a catch of 50 weighing 24 pounds, 2 ounces to win two prizes. He was awarded a combination landing net and gaff hook from Staley Hardware Co. and a rod and reel from the Don Clothier Trolling Camp for the 50 perch weighing the most and for the most perch caught by a single person.

The Festival was largely attended by lower Michigan sportsmen, as well as those from many out-of-state points. From a commercial standpoint the event produced good returns for trolling camps, restaurants and other business places. Plans are already under way to repeat the event next year and, in all probability, the entertainment program will be enlarged upon. It is generally felt that returns justified the small expense in sponsoring the festival many times over.

VACATION CHURCH SCHOOL JUNE 5-16

CLASSES ARE PLANNED AT THE SCHOOL BUILDING

Program Sponsored by Community Council of Religious Education Is Announced

(By Mrs. John Alexander)

The Community Council of Religious Eduoation planned some time ago to have a Daily Vacation Church school in Charlevoix this summer.

As stated in a former article the schonl is a place of growth in Christian character and true citizenship. In our school for Charlevoix the Congregational, Baptist, Church of God and Methodist churches are cooperating with financinl support and providing teachers and helpers. A careful consideration of texts from different churches and the cooperative interdenominational texts was made by the committee and by the chairman. Most of the texts selected are those recommended by the leader of the Seminar on Weekday and Daily Vncation Church School Curriculum at the state meeting in Lansing. The rest of the texts are selected from the various denominational material.

Mr. North and the school board have very kindly consented to the use of the school building. Since we hope every child of school age from kindergarten to and including junior high grades will enroll, we have planned to have a fully graded school. The splendid cooperation of the workers from the various churches also makes this possible. Date for this school has been set for June 5th to June 16th, except Saturday and Sunday, and the time for the daily sessions will be from 9 a. m. to 11:45 a. m.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By Ken Usher

The reason tlat the fire siren sounds different is that it is different—a different siren. The old one's getting repaired, we understand. The substitute siren is kinda weak because myself and a lot of others didn't even hear it the other morning when it was sounded for the McGeagh fire, although a fellow with a free conscience like my own is hard to awaken sometimes. Just sleep harder, that's all.

Remember the old Str. Missouri that used to come into Charlevoix harbor every summer? Well, it almost burned up with a loss of $20,000 one night last week at Muskegon. The ship is now flagship of the Wisconsin-Michigan Line.

This week's issue of the Courier carried the first of a series of "Vacation in Michigan" advertisements for the Michigan Bell Telephone company. This is the 12th consecutive year that the Michigan Bell has carried such a series of advertisements extolling Michigan's tourist attraetions. A Michigan corporation boosting Michigan is a commendable practice and one that many other businesses of this great state of ours could well do to their own and the general public's advantage.

While I was barging along the Pine river down west of Leroy last Sunday I saw a fellow wading down the stream quite a distance away whose face looked familiar. Thought I had seen him somewhere, so sat down to wait for him to get closer and sure enough, it was none other than Chet Bonney, former local game warden now stationed at Reed City, I believe. He had his head draped in netting to keep off the mosquitos and looked more like a Sahara dessert Shiek than a game warden. Might say Chet dressed like that to sneak up on the poor unaware fisherman, but we all know Chet never

Memorial Day

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

The Michigan state legislature is now entering into the elosing days of the regular session—five months of activity.

The past few weeks have been, in the opinion of Representative Elton R. Eaton of Wayne county, editor and publisher of the Plymouth Mail, a "gala season for greedy, selfish, grasping interests and special pressure groups."

Serving his second term in the legislature and experienced in state affairs as secretary to Governor Groesbeek, Representative Eaton is convinced that legislation in Michigan is largely the result of "pressure groups" who go out selfishly to make sure their own interests are cared for, usually at the expense of the public.

While all bills sponsored by these well-organized blocs are not passed, "unfortunately a very large percent of them are," comments Mr. Eaton, who adds, "and that's why the poor overburdened farmer and working man complain so much about taxes and the cost of things they have to buy and the services they have to have." In an illuminating analysis

A one-sixteenth inch rain fell Friday night, and an inch Saturday night and Sunday. There was scarcely any in the east part of the county and at Detroit, none, Friday. It will help crops immensely.

A large Townsend meeting of about 125 people was held at Jordan town hall last Friday evening. They are sending three delegates to the national meeting in Indiana. The Townsend bill will be voted on in congress soon.

Mrs. Sadie Kirby is back to Central Lake, very much improved in health. She is stopping at the home of her daughter and attended graduation baccalaureate services of her granddaughter, Bentrice Kirby, last Sunday evening.

Kenneth and Allen McKay attended Mr. Mathias' funeral at Mancelona last Saturday. Their schools at Grand View and Greenwood, respectively, closed last Friday. Lyle Morse and Ethel and Arlene Knowles also attended the funeral.

A recent visit to the E. R. Jones family at Norwood found them fixing up their little farm in fine shape this spring. Mrs. Jones has recovered from a seven weeks' attack of high blood pressure trouble. Their school closed a week ago Friday.

E. C. Rowe, former noted psychology teacher at Central Michigan college at Mt. Pleasant, is back on his farm again, west of town, and his resort on the east shore of Torch lake. Several new cottages and cabins are being built on the shore this spring.

Mr. and Mrs. George Williams and two children were up from Detroit visiting friends and relatives at Jordan River and East Jordan. Mr. Williams says times appear to be picking up a little in Detroit. He has employment on the outskirts of Detroit, in a sawmill.

William Ward's two boys at Greenwood now have the measles. Eben Dawson's family and the Clark and Yeoman families there have measles and scarlet fever. The Bradley family at Green River have been quarantined with scarlet fever since April 24th, hoping to be out June 11th.

WILL NOT ENLARGE FERRY FLEET AGAIN THIS YEAR

Five State-Owned and One Leased Boat Will Be Operated

Michigan's white fleet at the Straits of Mackinac will not be enlarged in 1939.

It will be the first time in three years that a new boat will not be added to the fleet of ferries operated by the state highway department between the upper and lower peninsulas. Commissioner Van Wagoner said this week the saturation point has been reached in the number of boats that can be handled efficiently.

Five state-owned and one leased vessel are now operated at the Straits during the summer tourist season. The railroad ferry Chief Wawatam is also available for emergency duty.

The two largest boats in the fleet have been added the last two years. In 1937, the department purchased a former railroad ferry, reconditioned it, and christened it the City of Cheboygan. Last year another railroad ferry was purchased and christened the City of Munising.

Michigan, the only state in the union with ferry service as a function of its highway department, has a capital investment of $1,080,000 in its white fleet. Traffic at the Straits has grown from 10,000 vehicles in 1923 when service was started to about 275,000 vehicles annually at this time.

Sees Way to Cut Gamble—In Corn

Five dollars a day for three weeks just by staying out of a 10-acre corn field might seem absurd, yet tests at Michigan State college have revealed this possibility.

By taking a well adapted hybrid corn and filling silo when the corn is well dented the middle of September rather than in the milk stage in late August the profit occurred in greater feeding value obtained from corn used at the proper time for silage.

County agricultural agents have been advised by H. C. Rather on methods of determining suitability of varieties and of hybrids for different areas in Michigan. Farmers debating use of different seed supplies are advised by Rather to contact their county agricultural agents for advice on planting for either silage or grain.

"Best corn to grow for silage," says Rather, head of the farm crops department at Michigan State college, "is the biggest variety or hybrid which will get well dented by silo filling time.

Earlier varieties will produce silage of good quality but lacking in yield. Later ones produce a little more green weight, but practically all of the extra weight is water and the product is of lower feeding value."

Farmers interested in using hybrid seed are being advised that for corn growing localities north of the Bay City-Muskegon line the Michigan Hybrid No. 1218 and Minny Hybrid No. 402 are good ones for silage. South of the line the Michigan Hybrid No. 1218 seems the most dependable hybrid for grain. Michigan Hybrid No. 561 is an excellent silage corn for central Michigan but will consistently mature grain only on the better soils of the southern counties.

ANIMAL WEEK

Pig Has Two Rears

Buchanan—"This little pig went to market, and this little pig stayed home," but this little pig at the William McConaghy farm started out as one pig and ended up as two. The animal had a single front end, but the body divided about midway, and formed two rears.

Sentimental Dog

Grass Lake—A dog belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Sam Hill is either sentimental or particularly fond of young things. The dog unearthed a nest of rats containing the mother and six little ones. The dog killed the mother rat, and then carefully removed the young rats from the nest. Carrying them in his mouth, he placed them in a pile, but declined to kill them.

Tail-less Calf

Bangor—In competition with freak animals having extra heads, arms, and legs, a calf was born near here recently on the L. Daniels farm without any tail. All according to specifications in other respects the calf hasn't even a stump where the tail should be. The mother cow has 10 other calves, all perfectly normal.

Cow Bears Triplets

Mt. Morris — A jersey cow 3½ years old recently gave birth to triplet calves here. The calve sweighed in at 35, 35, and 40 pounds. T. B. Glendening, the owner, reported the mother and her offspring to be in good health.

A Lot of Bull

Hastings — Setting a new record for the Highlands Dairy herd, a bull calf weighing 182 pounds at birth was born to one of the cows in the herd, according to Robert Cook. When six weeks old, the calf tipped the scales at 290 pounds. Cook says calves weighing 100 pounds and over are not rare in his herd.

Cat Saves Family

Kzego Harbor—"Pete," a big maltese cat, is credited by the Lee Taylor family with saving them from asphyxiation. Shortly before midnight one evening, the cat, who had been shut up in the kitchen, awakened Taylor with his meows and wild scampierings. Investigating, he found the kitchen filled with gas, and the main gas jet on the stove turned on.

Hen Mothers Cats

Dearborn—Three kittens owned by Nichols Prince were mothered by a bantam hen from the time of their birth on Easter Sunday. A continual battle went on between the hen and the kittens' own mother, with the hen pecking the head of the cat on any attempt to enter the nest. When taken away from the kittens, the hen found them again and refused to leave.

Raymond Laniereaux is much improved in health, and is able to work at the electric wiring again on the rural line. The poles are now scattered as far south as west of Bellaire in the Clam Lake neighborhood and at the Hemstreet and Davoc farms which are anxiously awaiting its coming.

The Percy Empey family have made some improvements on the Teboe farm since going there three years ago. Their son Kenneth graduates at Charlevoix high school this year. They were formerly residents of Central Lake and Bay View. Mr. Empeys niece, Beatrice Kirby graduates this year at Central Lake high school.

A letter from Alfred Christensen says that he is now located at Star Commonwealth Boy's Camp near Albion. He states that there are 130 nice boys at this camp. They have no Sunday school, but have a service at 11 o'clock each Sunday, and have a fine choir of boys. He states that he misses the Sunday school work and hopes some day to be located up here where he can help in that work, that is to help the folks in the neglected rural communities. He would especially like to be up at Turner's again. Am sure we all miss him, and hope he will soon return.

Miss Elsa Bradley is closing two years' successful teaching at Grand View school, Knowland district, this week. We visited her school and found the pupils were very proficient in illustrating the measurement problems. We found after leaving, that the Wickersham children were nieces and nephews of Charley Bennett of Eastport, a former pupil of the writer. We have visited a dozen schools this spring and have found in all relatives of former pupils of ours. Miss Bradley was a former pupil of ours in the second grade at Green River, and is certainly a live-wire teacher. She goes to Irontnn next year with an increase in salary.

Otho Mathias' funeral was held Saturday at Mancelona. People from Bay View and other parts of the county attended. About 150 people were present. Rev. DeViney of Mancelona M. E. church read the funeral sermon. Otho Mathias was much respected by people with whom he came in contact in his school and other work throughout the county, and his passing will be very much missed by many. His was a true Christian character, and he had taken part as teacher in the Sunday school in his home town and had been president of the Epworth League there. Sympathies are extended to his bereaved family. Many little acts of kindness had been extended Mr. Mathias during his illness. He had been visited by many of his former school friends and fellow teachers who had given flowers and other things to in a measure eleviate his suffering.

Release of Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. Proved Instructive Feature

Through the efforts of W. H. Wallace, local distributor of the Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., a sound movie entitled "Under the Hood" was shown at Tuesday night's meeting of the Kiwanis club.

The picture was thoroughly instructive in its analysis of motor operation, showing the importance of good lubrication. A comparison of the explosive power of gasoline with nitroglycerine and dynamite showed the tremendous power released in a modern engine.

Speed Stars Make Final Tune-up For Indianapolis

When 33 of the world's finest drivers line up for the start of the Indiannpolis Race the morning of May 30th, this quintet of speed aces will be rated among the most formidable contenders for the big cash purses. A year of engineering refinement and sizeable cash fortunes have been spent on their cars. Like every Indianapolis winner for the last 19 years, they will ride on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. TOP, Rex Mays, (left) the speed artist from Glendale, Calif., puts the finishing touches on his motor. Lou Meyer, (right) the only three-time Indianapolis winner, makes adjustments on the motor that he, himself, has built with watch-like precision. BELOW, (left) Babe Stapp makes a few last minute changes in his Italian Alfa-Romeo car. Stapp has led the race 9 of the last 11 years until mechanical trouble forced him to the pit. Floyd Robert (center) last year's winner, established a new record, averaging 117.2 miles per hour for the 500 miles. Jimmy Snyder (right) the Flying Chicago Milkman, will drive a car almost identical in design to the one being used by Rex Mays. In 1937 Snyder established a lap record of 130.4 miles per hour for the 2½-mile distance.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT

Develop Correct Posture in the Young Child

Since man became an upright animal, parents have worried about the posture of their children, often needlessly. Knock-knees in a three-year old, for example, are the rule rather than the exception. Further physical development, however, improves the strength of the leg, permitting the body weight to be carried more easily.

Many an over-anxious mother has so far yielded to plausible salesmanship as to purchase for her child shoulder braces and abdominal supports thus causing wenkened muscles to remain in that condition. Corrective footwear has been forced on many a child when the foot itself was not at fault and needed no correcting but was trying to compensate for wrong posture in some other part of the body. If corrective shoes are prescribed for a foot condition, they should be discarded as soon as possible.

The ideal posture for the child is one with feet parallel, at a comfortable distance apart, turned neither in nor out and placed neither too far apart nor too close together. The chest should be elevated, the abdomen in and the waist carried slightly forward. The pelvis is also tipped slightly frontward. Such a posture may be assumed in walking, running or sitting.

Most common causes of poor posture are due to abnormal shortness and, occasionally, to unusual length of the calf and the hamstring muscles, to underdevelopment of the abdominal muscles and over-development of those along the spine. The forward-thrust of the head is due to over-development of those along the spine and shortening of the shoulder muscles.

Much can be done to prevent the appearance of these defects and nearly all can be corrected.

Even after the infancy stage is past, the young child should not be allowed to sit too long in an upright position. Low, short-seated chairs should be used. The bed should be flat and firm.

Apparent postural deformities may appear after a severe illness but these are quite often due to fatigue and weakness of some muscles as compared with others which have recovered their tone more quickly.

Development of all muscles equally should be the parents' aim and this is best fostered by allowing the child to play various games demanding physical activity. When there is reason to believe that an actual defect exists and threatens to become permanent, the family physician should be consulted as he will consider the body mechanism as a whole and will avoid prescribing for the feet, the chest or the back when these may be merely reflecting trouble originating elsewhere.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE NEWS BULLETIN

Legislators, Also, Will Use Uniform Plates Like You and I

That the legislature of Michigan fully endorses the action of the department of state with relation to its adoption of uniform license plates for 1940 was evidenced by action as reported in the Senate Journal of May 16, as follows:

"A message was received from the house of representatives transmitting House Concurrent Resolution No. 42, entitled

"A concurrent resolution commending the determination of the Honorable Harry F. Kelly, secretary of state, that all privately owned passenger cars for 1940 shall bear plates uniform in size, uniform in lettering and numbering and shall be issued in sequence.

"Whereas, The secretary of state has determined that all privately owned passenger cars for 1940 shall bear plates uniform in size, uniform in lettering and numbering and shall be issued in sequence so as not to grant special privileges to anyone; and

"Whereas, If the par license plates have been manufactured for the special purpose of being issued to representatives and senators; now therefore be it

"Resolved by the house of representatives (the senate concurring), That, as there can be no confusion in this question, the legislature highly commends the system of uniform plates, and it is an expression of the legislature that the secretary of state rigidly adhere to the same, and that the plates that have been prepared specially for senators and representatives in the past be not manufactured or issued in the future; and be it further

"Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be transmitted to the secretary of state.

"The message informed the senate that the house of representatives had adopted the concurrent resolution; in which action the concurrence of the senate was requested.

"Pursuant to rule 59, the concurrent resolution was referred to the committee on rules and resolutions."

AT THE MOVIES

Beery and Taylor in "Stand Up and Fight"

The outdoor action melodrama, dear to the hearts of film fans ever since the days of such early western stars as William S. Hart, William Farnum and Tom Mix, comes into its own again with Wallace Beery and Robert Taylor as its protagonists, in "Stand Up and Fight," which opens May 27 at the Palace Theatre for 3 days.

Teamed for the first time, Beery and Taylor co-star in a story of western Maryland in the 1850's, when the railroads and stagecoach lines were engaged in a bitter struggle for right-of-way as the population of the United States surged westward.

Florence Rice wins her most important assignment to date as Taylor's leading lady in the adaptation of the Forbes Parkhill novel, while notable supporting cast includes such names as Helen Broderick, Charles Bickford, Charley Grapewin, John Qualen, Barton MacLane, Robert Gleckler and Clinton Rosemond.

150-Word Announcement

For the second time the cast of "Young Dr. Kildare" was assembled to re-act their original roles in the second of the "Kildare" series of pictures, "Calling Dr. Kildare," which opens May 20 at the Palace Theatre. Throughout the series the central characters remain the same, as in the "Judge Hardy Family," with additional characters introduced in each new story.

Lew Ayres again fills the title role as young Dr. Jimmy Kildare. Lionel Barrymore plays Dr. Gillespie, Lynne Carver is Ayres' boyhood sweetheart, Nat Pendleton is the hospital ambulance driver, Samuel S. Hinds and Emma Dunn enact Ayres' parents and Marie Blake is the amusing hospital switchboard operator.

"Four Girls in White" Coming to Palace Screen

Hospital life as viewed from the eyes of a nurse is revealed in a stirring new picture coming to the Palace Theatre for a 2 day showing June 1 and 2. It is "Four Girls in White," with the four nurses of the title played by Florence Rice, Una Merkel, Ann Rutherford and Mary Howard, and the man in the case enacted by Alan Marshal.

Prominent roles in support of the principals are played by Kent Taylor, Buddy Ebsen and Jessie Ralph. S. Sylvan Simon, who filmed "Road to Reno" and "Spring Madness" directed.

Those who are true to God will be true to others.

PLANNING MEMORIAL FOR JAPANESE AMBASSADOR

Will Be One of Features of National Cherry Festival Program

One of the outstanding events of the National Cherry Festival this year will be a memorial service for the late Hirusi Saito, Japanese ambassador to the United States, whose ashes recently arrived in Japan aboard a U. S. warship.

In 1937 Ambassador Saito came to Traverse City from Washington to participate in the cherry festival. He crowned the National Cherry Queen, danced with her at the Queen's Ball and in other ways helped make the event a success. He made thousands of personal friends in the Grand Traverse region who are anxious to include a memorial service in the festival program.

Saito was first invited to the festival because of the cherry blossom fetes in Japan and their similarity to the National Cherry Festival. He came to Traverse City on a special train from Washington, accompanied by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg and the embassy staff.

It is more difficult to keep and protect liberty than to win it.

OVER THREE BEAVER TO EACH MICHIGAN TRAPPER

Conservation Dept. Records Show 6,422 Taken This Spring

The average Michigan beaver trapper caught almost three and one-fourth beaver, according to statistics released by the Lansing headquarters of the field administration division of the department of conservation.

With a total catch of 6,422 beaver checked in by conservation officers and 1,969 licensed trappers in the field, the catch was valued at at least $77,000. The average price received for pelts by most trappers averaged about $12 each, as the catch included "kits" or small beaver. Top prices were about $20 for the "blankets," or big beaver skins.

Leading all other conservation districts in number of beaver taken was District No. 7, Mackinac and Chippewa counties in the upper peninsula where 269 trappers brought in 930 pelts to be checked at district headquarters.

Fish is claimed to be a brain food, but a goldfish will do those collegiate swallowers no appreciable good. They each need two whales to bring them up to mental normalcy.

LANSING LETTER

of legislation by pressure groups, the Plymouth editor gives the following picture of how and why many bills are passed at Lansing. We quote leading excerpts:

Candidates Interviewed

How are "special pressure group" bills jammed through the legislature?

That's an easy question to answer.

The "plotting" takes place months and months before the legislature meets. In fact, it is started before members of the legislature are even nominated or elected.

These "special groups" watch the local newspapers like hawks. Most of them maintain a newspaper clipping service. If they do not maintain a service of this kind, they generally subscribe for the local papers. What for? To find out who the candidates are for the state legislature.

"Executive Secretary"

Always these groups maintain a highly specialized "legislative agent" generally termed an "executive secretary" or some other sort of a misleading title.

The girls hired to read these newspapers discover that John Hiram, Promiser of Hickory Corners, has announced that he is going to be a candidate for the state legislature in the forthcoming primary.

Immediately John Hiram Promiser will get a letter from Lansing, Detroit or some other city in Michigan in which he is advised that the announcement of his candidacy for the state legislature has been read with interest.

"We are greatly interested in your campaign. We plan to have before the coming session of the state legislature a bill which will be of wonderful benefit to the voters of your district and the people of Michigan. We would like to know how you stand on it, and if you can give us your support, we will be glad to see to it that all of our members in your district will vote for you," most of these letters read.

"Voters Await Answer"

During the last primary campaign, the writer received twelve letters of this type from various pressure groups sponsoring, in nearly every case, miserable, selfish legislation. Of the twelve letters received there were possibly two or three that were relative to proposed measures worthy of real consideration.

If the candidate does not reply to the first letter, he generally receives another one in a few days, telling him that no reply has been received and "the voters of your district are anxious to know how you stand on these questions."

Some candidates, especially those who are new to the legislative field, "fall" for these letters and become pledged to a legislative bill before they are even nominated or elected to the legislature.

These "executive secretaries" keep a careful card index on each candidate and what he says as to how he will vote on some certain bill if that subject gets before the legislature.

Count Votes in Advance

As a result of this system when the legislature convenes, these pressure groups generally know just exactly how many votes they have in the legislature for the bills they are interested in. Members of the legislature who have had the courage to do as they should and refuse to promise this or that before they know what it is all about, are immediately subjected to pressure from the so-called "executive secretary."

The "executive secretary" is a polite title for most of these slick, smooth-working lobbyists who are out to get the thing for which they are paid, irrespective of what benefits might be gained for all the people of the state. In all justice, however, it should be said that there are some so-called lobbyists who provide valuable information to members of the legislature and who do not resort to questionable practices in having passed any bill they might be interested in.

Every opportunity is made to contact the members of the house and senate by these fellows. But always the first thing they attempt to do is to see to it that the "right one" is appointed chairman of the committee to which will be referred the bill they especially desire passed.

Chairman Wined, Dined

If not successful in having their selection made, then the "executive secretary" begins an immediate cultivation of the good will of the chairman who has been appointed. They know that the chairman of a committee has a whole lot to do with getting their pet bill under motion, as well as getting it passed through the legislature.

That's why the chairman of a committee, if he is willing to stultify himself, is wined and dined at the City club in Lansing, or in the best hotel dining rooms in the city at the expense of the legislative fixer. That's why certain types of lobbyists "lovingly" swing an arm around the shoulders of a committee chairman and smilingly whisper in his ear so those who happen to be near might not hear what is said.

How Laws are Made

There is a legislative rule that lobbyists cannot be on the floor of the house during a session. They are compelled to remain in the gallery or loaf in the cloak rooms during the sessions.

A while back there was a bill pending in the house of representatives. The chairman of the committee that had reported out the bill just previous to a discussion of the measure looked to the gallery to get the eye of his lobbyist-friend. For a minute he couldn't locate him. But it was only for a moment, as the "executive secretary" soon showed up, and following an exchange of smiles, the "chairman" did his stuff.

That's the way many new laws get on the statute books. That, too, is why there is so much complaint about legislatures and the laws they enact.

Government by Pressure

Representative Eaton's portrait, as given above, presents a vivid mirroring of the Lansing scene that is all too familiar to members of the legislature.

The system being as it is and legislators being only human after all, many bills receive official sanction much in proportion to the "build up" that can be effected by the sponsoring group always in the name of the public whose welfare is so zealously espoused.

It has become government by pressure, not only at Lansing, but at Washington.

It is the force that motivates, to a large extent, the recent trend towards more centralized authority by government—more bureaus and commissions — and the inevitable price of all this, larger payrolls to be supported by taxes and fees.

It will never cease to be a thrill to see wild deer and Albert Cook and his missus had that privilege right close to home last Sunday. They saw three of them drinking at the shore of Lake Michigan just beyond South Point early Sunday morning. The deer stretched their necks, looked them over carefully and then bounded down the shore to the south and into the wood. Also heard that a party of mushroom pickers came across a small fawn in spotted coat down towards Norwood one day last week. The little fellow was almost too young to stand yet and bet the mother deer wasn't very far off when they came upon it.

Those lads you see stationed at the various busy street intersections with the Sam Brown belts on are 5th and 6th grade boys training for regular street patrol duty when school opens next fall. It will be and now is their duty to direct grade children in crossing streets and riding in the school bus. The business-like expression on their young faces indicates they are taking their duties seriously and a moment's observation will show they are doing a good job. The School Safety Patrol is the result of a cooperative effort between the Automobile Club of America, Police Chief Clarence Heise and the public schools. Let's help these lads out by being careful drivers when approaching street intersections used heavily by young school children.

The Charlevoix County State Bank is to be commended on the public relations meeting held Tuesday evening. Salesmanship as it pertains to relations with summer guests was the theme and the talk by R. J. McDowell of the Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., showed in a resounding manner that it takes a stranger to point out our faults and show us how we appear to the other fellow. If anyone didn't get any good out of that meeting it is because they are too stubborn to admit their own faults and I'm including myself along with the rest.

PIANO AND ORGAN RECITAL BRILLIANT AFFAIR SUNDAY AFTERNOON

An outstanding program of unusual merit and one of real enjoyment was given Sunday afternoon in the Congregational church, when the Misses Marielle VanAllsburg and Margery Edwards were presented in a piano and organ recital by Mrs. A. J. Stelter.

These two high school young women are talented musicians as well as being outstanding in school and other activities. Both played their selections on the piano and organ in a delightful and satisfying manner. Their two piano numbers were played with excellent expression and also with a precision of unity in the rhythm.

The church was attractively decorated with pink and white geraniums and palms, making a pleasing setting for the musical.

Please notice the change in time for the Ironton service.

For several years our church has held special memorial services for those who passed away during the 12 months previous to this service. We will hold such a service next Sunday. The service is not for our church members only but for any one who would like to thus honor their loved ones. If anyone would like to remember their loved ones in this manner would you please hand their names to the pastor not later than Friday night.

Naturally a well planned and graded vacation school requires money. The churches are helping with contributions and there may be other contributions from other sources. Since we are striving to meet a good educational standard by using the newer and better texts, as well as interesting project books or handwork for every child, we are asking for a 5 cent registration fee. However no child is to stay away if he or she does not have the nickle; we want everyone to feel free to attend. The nickle is only a small portion of the average expense per child, but we believe that where it is possible to do so, the child will feel a greater responsibility and better spirit of cooperation and helpfulness if he or she shares in some material way.

We are planning a daily assembly period for the children of the third to eighth grades in which there will be emphasis on group singing, together with slides or pictures illustrating songs. In this period during the first week Mrs. Sally Blake will have charge of an interesting study of good citizenship and the effects of alcohol; during the second week Mrs. Parker will have charge of missionary education through the use of stories, slides and pictures. In next week's issue there will be further details of the courses, schedules and activities.

SALESMANSHIP THEME OF TUESDAY MEETING

Charlevoix County State Bank Sponsored Public Relations Instruction

Salesmanship, as it pertains to better customer relations with summer guests was presented to a large group of local business representatives at a public relations meeting held Tuesday evening at the K. of P. hall.

The meeting was sponsored by the Charlevoix County State Bank under the direction of Robert Bridge, president. Originally planned for the institution's own personnel, the instruction was provided for a large group of the bank's customers.

Three sound movies, "Sound Business," dealing with proper use of the telephone; "The Human Touch," released by the Coca-Cola corporation through Robert Freeborn, Petoskey, regional distributor, and "Selling America," all dealt with salesmanship by illustration of proper methods in relations with customers.

Community salesmanship, in this case "Selling Charlevoix," was presented in a talk by R. J. McDowell, director of merchandising, Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. Summarizing Mr. McDowell's remarks by saying that Charlevoix business representatives probably never had their everyday problems presented in a more instructive, intelligent and forceful manner, would cover this feature of the evening's program.

ALBERT FISHER VICTIM LAKE TRAGEDY

DIED OF HEART ATTACK WHEN BOAT UPSET

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. C. Palmer Saved from Drowning by Son, Benjamin at Long Lake, Tuesday

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Palmer owe their lives to the heroism and efforts of their 19-year-old son, Benjamin, who saved them from drowning in a tragedy Tuesday at Long Lake, near Traverse City, which took the life of their nephew, Albert Henry Fisher Jr., 16, a junior in Charlevoix high school.

All four were thrown into the water off Grier's Point about 1:30 Tuesday when a steel boat in which they started for a small island for a picnic dinner capsized after becoming water-logged by a leak into the stern air compartment.

Benjamin, an excellent swimmer, first took his mother several rods to shallow water. He returned and dove for Albert, who had gone down, and took him ashore. After showing his mother how to apply artificial respiration to Albert, he returned after his father, who was clinging to the bow of the boat which had sunk stern first. Both were nearly exhausted before reaching safety.

Mrs. Palmer obtained help from workmen on a nearby cottage who called Dr. H. B. Kyselka, coroner, whose cottage was in that vicinity. Albert, a Boy Scout and an excellent swimmer, was pronounced dead from heart attack.

Albert Fisher was born in Muskegon, February 10, 1923. He lived there all his life until last fall, when he came to Charlevoix to live with the Palmers.

Surviving him are his father, one brother, Russell, of Muskegon, and two sisters, Mrs. Jennie Chapman of Grand Rapids, and Ida Marie at home. His mother preceded him in death in 1930.

The body was taken to the Sampson Funeral Home in Traverse City. Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at Maple City with Rev. C. H. Meeker officiating. Interment was in the family lot in East Kasson cemetery.

Officials at Traverse City have begun efforts to obtain a Carnegie award for Benjamin for his heroism.

SPORTSMANS CLUB PROGRAM STARTED

STOVER CREEK PONDS FILLED TO CAPACITY

Oden Hatchery Furnished 79,000 Brook and German Brown Trout —Plant 17,500 Brook Trout

The summer fish propagation program of the Charlevoix Sportsman's club is under way at their Stover creek rearing ponds.

Following completion of pond improvements, which included drainage and elimination of large predatory trout, installation of new screens and repairs to the retaining walls, 79,000 brook and German brown trout have been released for rearing to advanced fingerling stage.

The fry, furished by the Oden hatchery through Charles Olm, foreman, included 46,000 German brown and 33,000 brook trout. Five upper ponds are devoted to the brook and the lower ponds to the German browns. The ponds are filled to capacity deemed advisable for good rearing results without overcrowding.

In addition to the fish placed in the rearing ponds, 17,500 advanced brook trout fry were planted last week in Horton and Monroe creek under the direction of Roy Ranger, president of the sportsman's club. The fish were furnished by the Pere Marquette Railway company through Bennie Nickerson, local agent.

CITY PAID HOMAGE TO ITS WAR HEROES

IMPRESSIVE MEMORIAL DAY PROGRAM TUESDAY

Judge Parm C. Gilbert Gave Address During Services Held at Brookside Cemetery

Charlevoix paid homage to its soldier and sailor dead with ceremonies at Memorial Park and Brookside cemetery as veterans of past wars and the public participated in a solemn observance of Memorial Day, Tuesday.

While missing from the ranks were veterans of the Civil War, the parade was an impressive sight, led by Motor Patrolman Edgar Behrens and with veterans' organizations, coast guardsmen, Girl Scouts, boys' Safety Patrol, Legion drum and bugle corps, school band and children in trucks participating.

The ceremonial of casting a wreath upon the water for the sailor dead was observed at Memorial Park. Taps were suunded as the march was resumed to Brookside cemetery.

Numbers on the impressive program at the cemetery included "Star Spangled Banner" by the school band; invocation by Rev. G. R. Parker; exercises by the Woman's Relief Corps; duet, "God Bless America," by Frank Poole and Charles Hamlin, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. A. J. Stelter; "Gettysburg Address" by Mary Lou Clocklin; address by Judge Parm C. Gilbert of Traverse City, substituting for William E. Hampton, who was unexpectedly called away; salute, taps; "America," by school band, and benediction by Rev. G. R. Parker.

Judge Gilbert was frequently interrupted by applause dbring an address in which he pleaded for the United States to avoid foreign entanglements which might result in the country being drawn into another world war. It was a timely message, delivered on an occasion in commemoration of our war dead and at a time when Europe is, as it has been for months, tottering on the brink of another conflict and is using every possible means of carrying this country into it with them.

GENERAL FISHING OPENS ON JUNE 25

ALL MICHIGAN WATERS THEN OPEN TO ANGLERS

Size and Legal Limits Remain Unchanged from Last Year Conservation Dept. Reports Show

With less than four weeks to go, Michigan anglers are completing preparations for the opening of the lake fishing season Sunday, June 25.

Opening of lake fishing marks the lifting of closed season on all Michigan waters except those closed by a special order. All seasons continue open until Labor Day when the trout season ends except on rainbow and steelhead trout in certain lakes and streams (named in the law).

Season on largemouth and smallmouth black bass runs until December 31 in all lakes and streams except trout streams and trout lakes. Bluegills and sunfish may be taken until March 31 in non-trout streams and in all lakes except pike lakes and trout lakes.

Principal quarry of the anglers will be the bluegill, mainstay of Michigan's fishing population. A total of 19,500,000 bluegills was planted in Michigan waters during 1938 by the fish division of the department of conservation. Nearly 1,000,000 black bass have also been planted.

Size and catch limits remain unchanged this year. On rock, calico, strawberry and warmouth bass, bluegills, sunfish and yellow perch the limit is 25 of any one kind or a combined total of 25. All except warmouth bass must be at least six inches in length. Black bass and landlocked salmon must be ten inches long and not more than five per day may be taken of each species. Size limit on muskellunge is 30 inches. There is no limit to the number taken in a day. Limit per day on pike, great northern, grass pike or pickerel and on walleyed pike or pike perch, is five of each kind. They must be 14 inches long.

GRADUATION PROGRAM IMPRESSIVE

FINE ADDRESS GIVEN BY DR. EDWARD THOMPSON

Fifty-Eight Seniors Awarded Diplomas at 51st Commencement Wednesday Night

A banquet at Hallett Hotel for senior class members and guests, and the annual Senior Prom at the gymnasium Thursday evening, brought to a close graduation activities of the Charlevoix high school senior class of '39.

Sunday evening's baccalaureate services and commencement exercises Wednesday evening, filled the gymnasium to capacity as parents and friends of the graduates gathered to witness honors bestowed upon the 58 students, the largest class in the history of the school, who completed their scholastic careers in Charlevoix.

Baccalaureate services were impressive. Rev. Father Edward F. Neubecker's sermon was befitting the important turning point in the lives of the graduates and was filled with sound advise. The musical numbers on the program were especially fine.

Graduation exercises were equally impressive. Edward A. Thompson, D. D. of Grand Rapids, speaking on the topic, "What Is Vital in These Times," brought out that to think straight, cooperate, live adventurously and to follow through, were essential; that graduates should make use of the experience and mistakes of the past to make a better future; that they should not wait for the proper position to come along, but should fit themselves into their own niche. He stated: "The world is what we are—this is a moral world with the law of consequence, 'whatever a man sows, so shall he reap'." In his remarks, Dr. Thompson frequently amplified the thoughts expressed by the valedictorian, Marielle VanAlstine and the salutatorian, Bernice Howe.

Harry Wathen's clarinet solo, accompanied by the school band, was a highlight of the program. The class was introduced individually by Harry E. Bingham, high school principal, to Henry W Partridge, president of the Board of Education, who presented the diplomas.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By Ken Usher

City Superintendent Don Herrick reports that the new main sewer on Michigan avenue was completed Wednesday. That's a fine improvement and one which will eliminate annual complaints by summer residents of trouble resultant from a system inadequate to care for the needs of that important residential district.

Let us all hope that the influx of tourists over the Memorial Day week end is a sample of what we can expect during the summer. That northern Michigan was flooded with tourists is putting it mild. Highway traffic was extremely heavy as out-of-state and southern Michigan vacationists sought pleasure in this region. There were more fishermen and camps along the Jordan river than during the opening week end of the trout season, despite bad weather Saturday and Sunday. Gordon B. Todd, secretary of the Board of Commerce, reports counting 3,037 persons pass the office on Bridge street between the hours of 1 and 2 p. m. Tuesday on foot and in automobiles. That's a lot of people.

As the result of a measure passed by the legislature which just adjourned, Charlevoix residents and those of many other Michigan communities will be incurring sales tax every time they turn on an electric light switch. The measure provides for collection of Michigan's 3% sales tax from municipally-owned electric light systems which have previously been exempt. Reports have it that Rep. Douglas Tibbits of Boyne City, Charlevoix-Leelanau representative in the House, let Charlevoix "down the river" in supporting and voting for the measure. It is said he argued that inasmuch as citizens of Boyne City and East Jordan, served by a public utility, were subject to the tax, it was unfair that Charlevoix

The policy of the 1939 State Fair at Detroit, as revealed by action just taken by the fair's executive committee, will be to emphasize Michigan's agricultural and industrial resources.

From a statement just released by Elmer A. Beamer, state commissioner of agriculture, it is apparent that the Hollywood movie-radio glamour which has characterized the 1937 and 1938 enterprises may be greatly subdued, if not missing altogether.

Arrangements are under way to have light harness racing, use of the grand stand for outdoor entertainment both afternoon and evening, enlarged livestock and farm machinery displays, and a comprehensive program for the 52,000 club members of 4-H clubs.

Assisting Dr. Linwood Snow as manager will be managers of three of the most successful fairs in Michigan. They are Robert Buckley, Huron County Fair at Bad Axe; Harry Kelly, Hillsdale county fair at Hillsdale, and Lester H. Schrader, St. Joseph county fair at Centreville.

CHARLEVOIX - FLINT PARTY AN ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

Former Residents Held 10th Annual Get-together Last Friday

The following account of the annual Charlevoix-Flint party, held last Friday, has been received from Mrs. Howard H. Bennett of Flint:

"About 65 former residents of Charlevoix gnthered on Friday evening nt the I. M. A. club rooms for their 10th annual party. A cooperative dinner was served nt 7 o'clock at tables decorated with attractive center pieces of crystal bowls filled with lilacs and tulips.

"The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, William R. Coates; vice-president, Elmer J. Meggison; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Howard H. Bennett.

"Harker Kirby, the retiring president, furnished the entertainment of the evening, which consisted of the exhibiting of several reels of movies of recent interesting events in Charlevoix. At this time we, as a club, extend our many thanks to the kind friends who sent the pictures for a most pleasant evening, as we recognized friends we hadn't seen in years.

"Out-of-town guests present from Detroit and Wyandotte were Archie Carey, Grace Papineau and the two younger children of Mr. and Mrs. George Papineau, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Bettes, Mrs. Charles Cornwell, Mrs. Levi Hebert and daughter, and Miss Alene Hebert.

"The committee making arrangements for the meeting were Mr. and Mrs. Harker Kirby, Mrs. Oscar McCutcheon and Mrs. Harold Jacobs."

FEEDERS' DAY AT MSC IS SCHEDULED FOR JUNE 9TH

Annual Feeders' Day at Michigan State college will attract livestock men from all sections of the state to the farms and college campus Friday June 9, at East Lansing.

Visitors will see samples of feed and feeding stressing differences found in experiments with silage and hay.

The Sabbath was made for man, not by man; therefore man should not regulate it, but let it control him.

AT THE MOVIES

"Sergeant Madden" Next Attraction at Palace

Son of a Kansas City policeman, Wallace Beery plays his first police characterization in the title role of "Sergeant Madden," story of the New York police which opens Saturday, June 3, Palace Theatre.

With Beery typifying one of "New York's Finest," Alan Curtis appears as his son, a rookie cop who attempts to win promotion by "smart" short cuts and thus runs afoul of the law he is sworn to represent. Then it becomes the father's duty to put a halt to the criminal career of his own son.

Tom Brown is seen as Beery's adopted son who idolizes his foster-brother but is true to the ideals of his foster-father. And Laraine Johnson is the Irish waif whom Beery makes his adopted daughter. After she marries Curtis she finds herself unwittingly sharing the life of a criminal.

Virginia Bruce, who is teamed for the first time with Walter Pidgeon in "Society Lawyer," opening Tuesday, June 6 at the Palace Theatre, is one of Hollywood's most enthusiastic autograph seekers. During each of her pictures, Miss Bruce keeps a huge leather-bound autograph album on the set and obtains the signatures of every player with whom she works under the dates of their birthdays. To date she has 212 birthday inscriptions in her book, most of them being famous names.

Down through the years from the long-remembered "Over the Hill" to "Of Human Hearts" have come a series of motion picture dramas which must be seen with the heart, but never has there been a drama closer to the heart of the average moviegoer than William K. Howard's production of "Back Door to Heaven" which Paramount will present to local audiences on Tuesday, June 6, at the Palace Theatre. The story of "Back Door to Heaven" starts with a boy who might have been you—or you—or you. He grows up in a small town—it might have been any small town. But the pattern of his life is not an even one. He doesn't fall into the usual job, marry, raise a family, and become a respectable citizen. He tries though, and Wallace Ford, playing this boy grown to manhood, has one of the best roles of a career marked by outstanding characterizations. This story of his life is peopled with characters who try to help him, or who remain blind to his problem — Stuart Erwin as a friend he makes in reform school, Patricia Ellis as the girl who grows up with him, loves him and stands by him, and Aline MacMahon as the school teacher who believes in him.

DAREN'T START DRY

EVEN if this is the camel that holds all records for going-without-more-drink, how long could he last if he had to start dry? Your car and your engine oil can't last either if you keep starting dry this Summer. But how can you help it?

You can't . . . not with any of these oils that are always in a rush to drain down to the crankcase completely.

You certainly can help it though, by getting your engine OIL-PLATED.

NEVER all down in the crankcase, no matter how long or how often you park your car, OIL-PLATING is lastingly close-knit to every inner engine surface by the action of Conoco Germ Processed oil. Patented Germ Processing creates the strong "power of attraction" that fastens non-detachable OIL-PLATING throughout your engine. Does chrome-plating drain down at a standstill? Neither does OIL-PLATING. Therefore actually in advance of starting, OIL-PLATING is ready to slide every working part into easy motion, without rasping dryness. And since OIL-PLATING doesn't fly off or fry up it helps your engine to shatter the record for going-without-more oil. That's why you want to OIL-PLATE today with Germ Processed oil, at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station. Continental Oil Company

SEWING CLUB CLASSES PUT ON A STYLE SHOW

Interesting Feature Presented Wednesday Night at Gymnasium

The T. M. T. M. club and sewing classes of the high school, under the direction of Miss Josephine Schuur, presented a fashion show in the gymnasium Wednesday evening.

Along one side of the gym hung a long line of slips and aprons made by the girls; hand-monogrammed towels were shown on a table; and the clothes displayed, with the exception of several old-fashioned dresses and a group of formals for the J-Hop, were also made by the members of the sewing classes.

First on the program were the gowns in the styles of 30 years ago and more; then came a group of girls in sport and daytime dresses, followed by three girls modeling playsuits. Six girls in gay housecoats came next, and last were 10 girls modeling the formals they wore to the J-Hop. All the models except those in the old-time styles came down from the stage and walked among the audience to allow a closer view of their dresses.

Throughout the program an off-stage chorus of girls sang songs appropriate to the various styles—some in the original versions, such as "The Old Spinning Wheel," and "When Paw Was Courtin' Maw;" and several popular tunes were sung with new lyrics composed by Miss Schuur, Miss Geraldine Millar, and Miss Muriel Tobin.

URGE OWNERS KEEP DOGS OUT OF WOODS IN SPRING

With pheasants, partridge and quail now nesting in Michigan, dog owners are reminded by the game division, department of conservation, that they should not let their dogs run loose in the woods.

Nesting gamebirds are easily disturbed by dogs running wild. Hunting dogs, as well as dogs of other varieties, have been known to kill young rabbits, nesting pheasants and young pheasants discovered in the fields.

BOY SCOUT SUMMER CAMP IS ANNOUNCED

Camp Greilick, Near Traverse City; Opening Date June 18th

The summer camp program of the Scenic Trails Council, Boy Scouts of America, was announced today by Chas. A. Boyer, scout executive.

The camp will be held at Camp Greilick, 12 miles southeast of Traverse City, starting on June 18 and running for 4 weeks. Fifty boys each week can be taken care of at camp under direction of expert leadership, Mr. Boyer announced.

The bulletin announcing the camp program to the scouts, tells of the various camp activities offered which include expert instruction in swimming, life saving, boating, handicraft, game leadership and scout advancement.

Each camp period begins at 2 p. m. on Sunday afternoons and runs until noon on the following Sunday. Medical examinations are required before a scout comes to camp and a physical check-up upon arriving, was also announced to the field.

The general impression any active scout would gain from reading the bulletin would be that only the best of good times are assured him if he attends the camp run by the Scenic Trails Council this summer.

The only two staff members announced in the bulletin, were Chas. A. Boyer, scout executive as director, and Harold Oatley, commissioner of the central district, as the assistant. Announcement of the complete staff was promised in the near future.

MICHIGAN SEASON ON FROGS OPENED TODAY

June 1st Official Opening Day—Best Way to Catch is Revealed

The addicts of "frogging" and those who are not addicts but who like the frog in their frying pans turned out in force for the opening of the frog season which runs from June 1 to October 31.

No license is required to take or sell frogs and there is no size or catch limit other than those self imposed by the froggers who point out that a frog has to be of fair size to be marketable or edible.

Attention is called by the conservation department to the fact that frogs may not be speared with artificial lights.

While spears may account for the major part of the froggers catch, recent years have seen a new development, fly fishing for frogs. "Veterans" of one or two years experience claim that a Red Ibis skillfully dangled before a frog's nose is practically infallible. Except on a very light rod the "fight" put up by a frog is admittedly negligible but it is considered by some as more sport than spearing.

If no Red Ibis's are available a small piece of the angler's recently retired red flannels has been found to often do the trick.

PREMARITAL MEDICAL EXAMINATION ACT AMENDED

Couple Now Have 30 Instead of 15 Days for Examination

Marriage-bound couples hereafter will have 30 days instead of 15 in which to complete their medical examination requirements previous to applying for a marriage license, it has been announced by the Michigan Department of Health.

Act No. 112, P.A. of 1939, providing for this extension of time was signed last week by Governor Dickinson and becomes effective immediately.

The new law also corrects a provision of the 1937 act which worked a hardship on certain persons having so-called "Wassermann-fast" cases of syphilis which would not respond to treatment. Under the amended law, marriage is possible for persons who have syphilis in a non-communicable stage, providing there is no danger to the health of the marital partner or to the issue of such a marriage.

Certificates for this special dispensation will be granted by the state commissioner of health upon application by the examining physician. Special application forms for this purpose are now being prepared by the Michigan Department of Health. County clerks will accept the special dispensation certificate signed by the state commissioner of health in lieu of the regular medical examination certificate. The special certificates granted under the amended act are not public records.

SECOND BOAT ADDED TAHQUAMENON RIVER

Summer Runs of Sight-Seeing Boats Were Started May 19th

A second boat will be put into service this year on the Tahquamenon river and will be used to carry passengers on the Tnhquamenon Falls run from Soo Junction.

The new boat, to be named the Paul Bunyon II, will be 70 feet long and 18 feet wide. Power will be supplied by a large cruising launch. The boat will accommodate 400 passengers and will supplement the service of the 800 passenger stern wheeler "Tahquamenon."

Summer runs on the river began Friday, May 19, with high school graduates prominent among the first group of passengers. The Toonerville Trolley leaves Soo Junction at 10 a. m. and connects with the boats at Hunters Landing half an hour later. Passengers are allowed approximately three hours for sightseeing at the famous falls, the return trip coming back to Soo Junction at about 6 p. m.

The new boat, when it goes into service, will be placed on a late run, probably leaving about noon and returning at 8 p. m. Her predecessor, the Paul Bunyan I, will be temporarily retired from service or held in reserve.

Plows Up Cash

East Lansing—While Frank Amon was plowing up his yard, he turned up an old purse, crammed with currency totaling $340. All the bills were the old size, and some were gold certificates. Latest discernable date was 1908. The bills were sent to Washington for replacement.

Hunger Nabs Chuck

South Lyon—Emerson Vickery of Vanderbilt was surprised to see a tin can bouncing erratically along the highway. Investigating, he found a large and somewhat hysterical woodchuck attached to the can, caught by the rough edges of the open top. Apparently it had stuck its head in, lured by the smell of food. Vickery released the animal.

Loud Fire Alarm

Lapeer — Shotgun shells are the new type of fire alarm developed here, quite by accident, recently. The Arthur Blue family was awakened about 2:30 one morning by the exploding of shotgun shells in an adjoining room. Looking for the cause of the explosions, the family found the house on fire.

Expensive Fuel

Elsie—Rather expensive heat was enjoyed, and later lamented, by Ernest Blunt when $311 worth of checks were thrown by mistake into the Blunt furnace. They had been cashed that afternoon in the store where he is employed and Blunt had taken them home for listing.

Took Their Medicine

Allegan — Thieves who recently rummaged Miss Betty Johnson's car took their medicine literally, and as a result, officers were looking for someone becoming suddenly healthy. Miss Johnson is a family health counsellor, and among other things taken from her car was a goodly supply of cod liver oil. Later visiting another car, the thieves left some of Miss Johnson's things—but they kept the cod liver oil.

Tables Were Turned

Iron River—It was the teachers and not the students who were late to classes here, following a spring holiday. A number of the teachers had gone to their homes in lower Michigan for the week end, and experienced difficulty in making ferry connections at the Straits of Mackinaw. As a result, some were late to their desks when school reconvened.

One advantage of the changed theater of hostilities is that every season (or oftener) we learn a new set of geographical pronunciations.

MICHIGAN DAYS for MICHIGAN PROSPERITY

GOVERNOR URGES SUPPORT OF DRIVE

PROCLAIMS JUNE 1 TO 10 AS "MICHIGAN DAYS"

Lauds Campaign's Objectives On Eve of Opening of 10-Day Chain Store Promotion

Lansing, June 1 (Special)—On the eve of the chain-sponsored "Michigan Days" campaign, Governor Luren D. Dickinson last night proclaimed the period of June 1 to 10, inclusive, as "Michigan Days for Michigan Prosperity."

The Governor's proclamation, issued at the executive offices, urged citizens of the state "to give their wholehearted support to this drive that it may succeed in its purpose to increase prosperity in our state."

Referring to "Michigan Days" as a "public spirited movement" designed to "spur industrial activity in our state and put men back to work," the governor lauded the campaign's objectives.

Twenty-six chain store organizations in the state conceived and promoted the drive to increase consumption of Michigan products, and thereby provide employment opportunities for Michigan workers. The chains invited all other retailers to join in the ten-day drive.

Governor Dickinson urged all industry and agriculture to accept the invitation to unite for prosperity. He listed benefits that manufacturers, employees and farmers would derive from the campaign.

The proclamation declared that "the markets for superior products of Michigan's farms should be expanded to increase farm income and in general stimulate economic recovery in the state."

Vigorous attempts to stimulate consumption of the state's industrial output are urgently required, the governor indicated, now that modern methods of industrial production have been perfected.

"Michgan industry," he asserted, "has developed to its highest point the system of mass production which has made such great contributions to the American standard of living; and, therefore, benefits from efficient distribution of its products."

The text of the proclamation follows:

"Whereas, a large segment of the retail industry of Michigan has inaugurated a campaign to spur industrial activity in our state and put men back to work; and

"Whereas, all industry and agriculture has been invited to join in this public-spirited movement, and

"Whereas, markets for superior products of Michigan farms should be expanded to increase farm income; and in general stimulate economic recovery in the state, and

"Whereas, Michigan industry has developed to its highest point the system of mass productinn which has made such great contributions to the American standard of living; and, therefore, benefits from efficient distribution of its products, now

"Therefore, I, Luren D. Dickinson, Governor of the State of Michigan, do officially proclaim the period of June 1 to 10 inclusive to be 'Michigan Days for Michigan Prosperity,' and urge all Michigan citizens to give their wholehearted support to this drive that it may succeed in its purpose of creating prosperity in our state."

STATE PRESS AIDS MICHIGAN DAYS TO CREATE MORE JOBS

Alleman Calls Campaign Constructive Effort to Aid Michigan

Lansing, June 1 (Special)—Newspapers of Michigan are cooperating fully to make "Michigan Days for Michigan Prosperity" a complete success, Gene Alleman, field manager of the Michigan Press association, announced today.

His statement came as the drive—aimed at creating jobs by increasing consumption of Michigan products—opened on a state-wide basis under the auspices of 26 key chain store organizations and other retailers.

"The promotion of Michigan products will have a beneficial effect on the economic well-being of the state," Alleman declared. "The press of Michigan is in hearty accord with the drive."

Alleman said the extensive promotion and advertising of Michigan products pointed the way for a permanent drive to boost prosperity of the state.

"The first step toward increasing consumption of Michigan products is to tell people about the quality of those products," Alleman said. "That is the step undertaken in the 'Michigan Days' campaign."

AUTO INDUSTRY BUILT ON MASS PRODUCTION

Auto Manufacturers to Benefit From "Michigan Days" Drive

Detroit, June 1 (Special)—A gigantic chorus — the deep-throated voices of thousands of factories — sings daily the song of man's greatest industry—the automobile manufacturing of Michigan.

It is the song of mass production developed to its highest pitch in the Wolverine state, and blended with mass distribution as perfect complements in a system that has raised the American standard of living far above that of any nation in the world.

The song of the factories is tuned to a high pitch today as the major mass distributors of the state embark on the "Michigan Days for Michigan Prosperity" campaign; a drive to make mass production work still more effectively by linking it directly to mass distribution in an effort to "create jobs by stimulating consumption of Michigan products."

It has become an axiom that America's prosperity rises and falls with the prosperity of her automobile industry. Economists paraphrase the political slogan by saying, "as Michigan goes, so goes the nation."

The automobile industry, largest in the nation, turning out nearly 5,000,000 passenger cars and trucks every year valued at almost $4,500,000,000, in 1939 is the basic factor in the American economy. Its invested capital is $1,370,000,000 — with one out of every seven persons gainfully employed in the United States deriving livelihood directly by work in the many branches of the industry.

The principles of mass production and mass distribution applied scientifically to the making of automobiles have created this twentieth century miracle. Every engineer, designer, craftsman, mechanic and salesman who has taken part in the industry since Michigan's first auto concern was organized only 42 years ago has helped to apply those principles, so that the standard of living in the nation might be raised.

KROGER IS STEPPING UP BUYING FOR CAMPAIGN

Already Spends More Than $20,000,000 Annually for State Products

Detroit, June 1 (Special) — Already spending more than $20,000,000 a year for Michigan products, the Kroger Grocery & Baking Co. has substantially increased its expenditures for "Michigan Days," E. A. Elliott and Lawrence Griffin, Kroger members of the chain store committee for Michigan Prosperity, reported today.

The chain store industry is sponsoring the ten-day "Michigan Days" drive to increase consumption of Michigan goods and thereby raise the purchasing power of the state's 5,000,000 citizens.

The Kroger chain has been among the most active organizations participating in the drive, the managers explained, because of its "enormous stake in the state's general economic welfare."

Besides its annual purchases of $20,000,000 worth of Michigan goods, the company maintains 667 units in the Wolverine state, employing thousands of Michigan men and women. Kroger's also has some 1,400 stockholders in the state.

Michigan property owners receive a total of $752,400 a year from Kroger's for rentals, and proportionately large sums are expended for heat, light and power, repairs and trucking. Salaries paid in Michigan aggregate about $6,000,000 and state and local taxes exceed $1,570,000 annually.

Among Kroger's larger expenditures for Michigan products are: dairy products, $4,750,000; fresh and smoked meats, $3,700,000; fresh produce and fruit, $1,835,000; cereals and flour, $1,653,000; canned goods, $1,187,000; potatoes, onions and navy beans, $1,152,000; and beet sugar, $1,000,000.

FARM INCOME BOOST SEEN FROM CAMPAIGN

Committee Predicts Increase in Consumption as a Result

Lansing, June 1 (Special)—Michigan's commercial production of fruit in a normal crop year is great enough to supply each family in the state with four bushels of apples, two bushels of peaches, one bushel of pears, 47 pounds of cherries and 105 pounds of grapes. This was revealed today as the result of a survey by the agricultural committee for the "Michigan Days" campaign, designed to promote the consumption of Michigan farm and factory products.

The report stated that the prosperity of the producers and processors of these fruit crops will be "tremendously increased by the ten-day 'Michigan Days for Michigan Prosperity' drive."

"This campaign," the report continued, "will widen the market for Michigan products and stimulate the consumption of canned fruits, jellies, extracts and juices, thus paving the way for larger shipments in the fall harvest season. Employment and farm income should rise simultaneously."

Pointing out that the total income from these fruit crops averages more than $12,000,000 a year, the survey said that "the rich and fertile soil of the Wolverine state, together with the thrifty and efficient methods of its farmers, make it one of the nation's great horticultural centers.

"Apples are by far the most important crop. Over $6,000,000 worth were harvested in 1938 and it required more than 1,000 freight cars to haul the crop to market."

According to the survey by the agriculture group, the figures on apple production were supplied by R. J. Martin, secretary-manager of the Michigan Apple Institute, Bangor. In reporting to the committee, Martin commented on the "Michigan Days" drive and its effect on the state's agricultural population.

"The promotional campaign of 'Michigan Days for Michigan Prosperity'," Martin said, "is heartily recommended and endorsed by the Michigan Apple Institute. This drive cannot but help to produce added revenue to the apple growers and other farmers, and should give impetus to an increased annual consumption of the state's agricultural products.

"This re-awakening in the public mind of the quality and value of Michigan agricultural products should have a far-reaching effect for a greater agricultural prosperity. The Institute also wants to extend publicly its thanks for the splendid cooperation of the chains in the last year's apple surplus campaign, when the consumer-producer drive moved thousands of dollars worth of apples and prevented a glutting of the market. We urge the apple growers and other farmers to get behind this commendable sales campaign and give it their wholehearted cooperation and support."

Another comment on the benefits anticipated from the "Michigan Days" campaign was made to the committee by M. R. Smith, of the Millburg Growers Exchange. Smith declared that "any effort to promote consumption of Michigan farm and horticultural products is a step in the proper direction and this June campaign of the chain stores will surely be of great benefit to Michigan agriculture."

The agricultural committee pointed out that, although apples constitute Michigan's largest fruit crop, other fruits contribute substantially to the cash income of the farmer. Values of other 1938 Michigan crops of major commercial importance, the survey revealed, were: peaches, $1,743,000; cherries, $1,073,000; pears, $1,020,000; and grapes, $845,000. The survey revealed that all of the crops, particularly cherries and grapes, were relatively small due to the unusually heavy frost.

BEAN PRODUCERS URGE PUBLIC SUPPORT 'DAYS'

Chain Stores' Drive Called Aid to Bean Industry by Group Head

Elkton, Mich., June 1 (Special)—Michigan bean growers and shippers, handlers of the second largest bean crop in the U. S., united today in calling for public support of the "Michigan Days" campaign, June 1 to 10.

Pointing out that Michigan agriculture is fighting its way back to prosperity after a $30,000,000 slump in cash farm income last year, both the Michigan Bean Producers association and the Bean Shippers association hailed the "days" campaign as a constructive effort to stabilize farm economy.

"Without the chain stores," said Clarence Swanabeck, president of the Bean Producers association, "farmers would have little chance of restoring their cash income. The chains offer wide markets among the low income groups and make possible greater consumption of farm products."

Swanabeck pointed out that last winter when bean growers were faced with an overwhelming surplus, the chain stores came to their aid with an intensive producer-consumer campaign to market the extra crops at a time when the price structure of the bean industry was seriously threatened.

"This helped to avert a glutted market and a ruinous fall in prices," Swanaback said, adding that the "Michigan Bean Producers association is greatly in favor of the current effort of the chains to increase consumption of Michigan products."

The Bean Shippers association also endorsed the campaign, pledging their complete support. The endorsement was in line with recent action by the shippers condemning chain store taxes as "un-American and discriminatory."

Emphasizing the need of the bean industry for the mass distribution facilities of the chain stores, Swanabeck pointed out that Michigan, with 466,000 acres in dry bean cultivation, ranks second only to California as a bean producing state. In 1937, he pointed out, Michigan produced 4,559,909 100-pound bags of beans, which brought farmers a cash income of $12,000,000.

The bean crop, he pointed out, has been particularly important to Michigan farmers since 1899 when the Wolverine state moved among the leaders with a crop of 1,082,400 100-pound bags.

"Since that time," Swanabeck said, "the increased facilities of mass distribution have aided in the marketing of beans to increasingly large groups of consumers. Without those facilities, the bean industry would not be the important factor in our agricultural life it is today."

Swanabeck said that he expected the "Michigan Days" campaign to provide a permanent increase in the market for Michigan beans because it would bring home to consumers the high quality rating of those beans. "We should all get lasting benefits from this intensive promotion of Michigan products," he said.

MICHIGAN POTATOES EARNED 15 MILLIONS

Crop During 1938 Ranked Third in the United States

Fifteen million dollars is not a drop in the bucket of any state's income, so Michigan is learning to take pride in its potato crop, which is the most important cash crop in the state.

In the last 10 years the annual average Wolverine crop has been worth $15,027,600. In 1038 Michigan farmers produced 30,000,000 bushels to rank second in the nation.

Extension work of Michigan State college and experimentation by staff members in the agricultural division has played a part in developing suitable varieties, fertilizer practices, cultural methods, storage, grading and marketing systems.

To expand upon this service to the state's potato growers, a new bulletin has been made available at the college. It is "Better Potatoes for Michigan," Extension Bulletin 49, prepared by H. C. Moore of the farm crops department.

* OF INTEREST TO FARMERS *
By B. C. Mellencamp

Fruit Men to Hear T. A. Merrill, Specialist, on Friday, June 2

Fruit growers in Charlevoix county are invited and urged to attend a fruit meeting to be held in the East Jordan city hall on Friday afternoon, June 2, a 2 o'clock. As a result of last year's experience, it will be to every fruit growers advantage to discuss the spraying program for best results. With a large variety of different materials to use, many men are uncertain as to the best material.

This meeting will be very informal so that any topic, that might be of interest to fruit growers, may be injected into the discussion. Along with spraying, some time will be devoted to cultural methods. Fertilization will likewise be considered.

While every farmer is extremely busy at the present time, it is hoped that the value to be secured from this type of meeting will warrant your attendance. Remember Friday afternoon, June 2, in the East Jordan city hall at 2 o'clock.

Sign-up for Grasshepper Bait Nearly Completed

Judging from reports already received from several supervisors, the request for bait to protect crops from grasshoppers is greater than in any other year. Last year's bitter experience has taught us to be prepared for any conditions that might arise. The allotment of materials contributed to this county for this campaign is based on the number of farmers and the number of acres signed up. Thus, the importance of a complete sign-up is very evident.

It is expected that this season will be somewhat later than last. In all probability, the Boyne Falls station will not be open until June 15. Already hoppers have hatched out but, due to the cold weather, many hatches have been killed.

If you have not already signed up for materials which are free of charge, be sure and see your supervisor. We are not in a position to promise that you can use this prepared bait unless you have officially requested it. Do this at once.

Bulletin Offers Hen Feed Hints

Poultry offers pocketbook angles that affect nearly every rural family in the state. Production of eggs and meat from poultry keeps many a farm household in Charlevoix county equipped with cash for some of the current expenses.

One of the most recent aids for economy in feeding and production of eggs is a new bulletin now made available through Michigan State college. It is Extension Bulletin 51, "Feeding for Egg Production." Copies may be obtained through the county agricultural agent's office or by writing the Bulletin Room, Michigan State college, East Lansing.

J. A. Davidson, the author, admits the bulletin is not a complete text on poultry nutrition, claiming it is designed for but one phase of poultry, feeding for eggs.

Readers will find portions devoted to proteins, carbohydrates, fats, water, minerals and vitamins.

Davidson offers hints on sources of these feeding elements and their use by the hen. Feeding for egg quality and feeding for hatchability also are discussed. Formulas for mashes are offered.

TELEPHONE COMPANY BOOSTING MICHIGAN

Opens Series Ads Extolling State's Resort Attractions This Week

Starting with this issue, the Charlevoix Courier, together with 249 other Michigan newspapers, begins a series of "Vacation in Michigan" advertisements inserted by Michigan Bell Telephone company. This is the twelfth annual series to be run by this concern, boasting the advantages of Michigan as a vacation state, especially for people living in Michigan.

The advertisements feature the diversified activities possible to young and old, the splendid boys' camps in the state, the healthful climate and outdoor life, good highways, beaches and camps, state forests and historical spots, the scenery and the recreational facilities.

A minimum of space is taken for advertising the firm itself, since the advertising and news manager, C. W. Hungerford, knows that to advertise the state is to advertise the state's great utilities, including the Bell Telephone System.

"MICHIGAN DAYS"

Governor Dickinson has officially proclaimed the period, June 1 to 10, "Michigan Days for Michigan Prosperity."

During these ten days, twenty-six of the state's chain stores, joined by other retailers, will conduct an unprecedented statewide drive to increase consumption of the quality products of Michigan's farms and factories.

All residents of the Wolverine state will approve of the threefold objective set by the chain store committee sponsoring the campaign:

Jobs for Michigan Workers!
Markets for Michigan Products!
Savings for Michigan Consumers!

Michigan is in a strategic position to benefit from this concerted drive toward prosperity. Current indices for virtually every industry indicate a brightening of the state's business horizon. More men are at work than in 1938, their earnings are greater, and their dollars buy more of the necessities and luxuries of life. As one of the nation's key industrial states, Michigan is thus is a position to make a lasting contribution to national recovery.

All elements in the state's economic life have indicated their awareness of the opportunity offered the state by the chain stores. "Michigan Days" has been endorsed by congressmen, state officials, consumers, farmers and businessmen.

Like Governor Dickinson, they have hailed the drive as a "public spirited movement."

We agree with Governor Dickinson that the state should seize upon this opportunity to stimulate economic recovery; that all Michigan citizens should "give their wholehearted support to this drive that it may succeed in its purpose of creating prosperity in our state."

An Issue for 1940?

The ides of June find the five-month session of the state legislature a matter of public record.

Observers are carefully analyzing the results in an effort to detect possible issues for 1940. Those lawmakers who hoped in vain for a "clean-up" of the Republican party from convention control by Messrs. Frank McKay and Edward Barnard insist that the legislature's failure to curb so-called boss abuse has created a major issue for the next campaign.

From Rep. Elton R. Eaton of Plymouth, captain of the anti-boss element, comes this dire warning: "Unless the Republican party cleans house in the next primary, no one can rightly predict what might happen in the next state election."

The budget-balancing efforts of the present administration, other observers feel, may overshadow the reform issue. This may be true especially if public opinion continues to disapprove, as Gallup surveys continue to reveal, the vast spending splurges at Washington.

It is too early to forecast accurately what will be he effect in 1940 of what the present legislature has done or has not done. An administration's record does not depend wholly on a five-month legislative record.

News Writers Puzzled

The attitude of Governor Dickinson to the McKay investigation and the Barnard convention bill has puzzled metropolitan newspaper correspondents at Lansing.

W. A. Markland, writer for the Detroit News, says that Michigan's new governor "is an extremely irritating puzzle to a lot of peop'e." This comment was inspired chiefly by the governor's veto, as recommended by Emerson R. Boyles, legal adviser first retained by the late Governor Fitzgerald, of a bill which would have legalized the continuation of the McKay probe.

Although prior to the veto the governor was visited by two members of the legislative investigating committee who urged him to sign it, he later said that he had not read the bill and evidenced surprise that the veto would close an inquiry into McKay's bond fees of $105,000.

Frank Morris, Detroit Times correspondent, intimated openly the same day that the governor's "pipe line" was in the direction of Grand Rapids, home of Mr. McKay.

Guy H. Jenkins, head of the Booth newspapers' bureau at the statehouse, declared: "When the curtain is rung down on the 1939 Republican legislature the record probably will disclose the enactment of more selfish, sniping, noisy-minority group laws than any in the history of the state . . . Pressure groups have been more overbearing than ever before."

Jenkins took the house of representatives to task for indulging in what he called "petty politics" . . . Blasting "supervisor-poor superintendent patronage hounds," he opined: "The people as usual take it on the chin, but they make targets of their chins when they elect so many pseudo statesmen."

No Liquor Legislation

One of the curious results of the legislative session was the failure to enact one liquor control bill.

With the driest chief executive in many, many years at the helm uf the administration, liquor interests were apprehensive earlier in the year that drastic measures would be passed to correct some of the persistent, ever-present "liquor evils."

Because the governor was an officer of thr National Anti-Saloon league and president of the state league, it had been taken for granted that something would be attempted before adjournment May 26 to tighten the state's control if not to abolish outright the system of state-owned liquor stores, as recommended by Fitzgerald.

On May 14, two weeks before adjournment, Governor Dickinson took the churches to task. He said; "I never was in the legislature or around the capitol during a legislative session when there was as little encouragement from outstate on such lines as during this session . . . I regret to say that thy churches, as such, have given slight expression."

It was a tardy appeal for drys to "lobby" at Lansing. Organized effort, he asserted would have resulted in passage of laws to restrict advertising of alcoholic beverages including beer and wines as proposed in Senate bill 298 which died in committee.

Civil Service, Vandenberg

Will enactment of the new civil service law, called n "ripper" law by its critics—react unfavorably on the administration?

James Thomson, chairman of the state republican central committee, is confident that the people back home were rebellious over the cost of Murphy's civil service act. Payrolls doring the first 18 months totaled $93,537.

One cannot help but observe that 1940 will be a presidential campaign year, one in which it is entirely possible that the Republican nominee will be Michigan's senior United States senator, Arthur H. Vandenberg. In a gigantic tussle with the New Deal, the party would be occupied chiefly with national issues. In such a situation all legislatively-made issues—bossism, civil service, and so on—would go easily into total eclipse so the theory goes.

Vandenberg's triumph in defeating the Florida ship canal project brought a nicely-timed declaration by Michigan administration leaders that Vandenberg "should be drafted" and that "Michigan will ask his nomination." The rising stock of the Michigan senator was noted by the Chicago Tribune which reported a few days ago that "sentiment among local politicians indicate that Vandenberg is the candidate being most favorably considered by Republicans in many states, not only in the west but in the east."

On the Vandenberg bandwagon is Howard C. Lawrence, of Grand Rapids, former state treasurer, who is credited with having proposed the administration's statement and who, incidentally, is being mentioned in the press as n potential candidate for either United States senator or for the governorship.

Lawrence is being backed by the McKay-Welsh alliance in the furniture city. His boom was hailed by McKay's own weekly newspaper, "The Michigan Times."

FARMERS MAY NOT KILL DEER ON OWN PROPERTY

Sufficient Evidence of Crop Damage Must be Shown First

Attorney General Thomas Read said Thursday it is the duty of county prosecuting attorneys to prosecute farmers who kill deer on their own properties unless there is satisfactory evidence showing that the deer actually are damaging crops.

He expressed that view in a letter to William R. Barber, prosecuting attorney of Alcona county, who said the killing of deer by farmers had become n problem in that section of the state.

CHILD'S GARDEN AIDS INITIATIVE

Digging in the dirt is a natural inclination exhibited by children. That desire easily can be turned to a bit of useful education, suggests Catherine Miller, director of the nursery school at Michigan State college.

It takes some supervision but the easiest way out is to assign a portion of the family garden for use of the small child.

What ought to go into that portion?

Miss Miller suggests some easily grown flowers such as nasturtiums. Lettuce and carrots are two vegetables not too hard to produce. They also are ideal in that it will enhance a child's appetite for vegetables to be able to go out into a garden and find vegetables ready for the table.

Gardens also lend themselves to offering an education about nature. How seeds germinate and grow into plants and how water and plant food nourish these garden plants are valuable lessons in nature.

For the small child a small sized set of tools helps create and maintain interest, Miss Miller suggests. Development of responsibility and initiative are two products that can be brought out by a little parental cooperation.

SUMMER SERVICE AT STRAITS UNDER WAY

Five Boats Placed in Operation Thursday for Holiday Traffic

The state highway department's fleet of five ferry boats began its regular summer schedule at the Straits of Mackinac last Thursday at midnight.

Hourly schedules will be maintained from both St. Ignace and Mackinaw City with two additional trips scheduled late in the evening and in the morning. During rush periods all five boats will operate without schedules and load as fast as possible.

Van Wagoner explained that the regular schedule ordinarily does not go into effect until June 1 but an anticipated rush over the week end prior to Memorial Day occasioned the change.

Whatever little esteem people may hold for Hitler is now dissipated by starting his birthday broadcast at 5 a. m., central standard time.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT

Nursed or Bottle-fed?

For generations, mothers accepted without question the statement of their physicians that the breast-fed infant had a decided advantage over bis bottle-fed contemporary. It was unnecessary for the doctor to urge the mother to make the sacrifice; she was prepared to accept her responsibility cheerfully. To be unable to nurse one's own baby was regarded as a misfortune, whatever the cause, and bottle feeding was resorted to when all else had failed.

Since the World War, however, women have entered on new social, business, professional, even political activities. Many tolerate motherhood but are inclined to shirk its duties. The doctor can no longer assume that the new mother will nurse her baby if she is able to do so. The baby specialist, in response to popular demand, has exerted himself to perfect formulas, based on cow's milk, which are certainly superior to the older, unscientific methods of artificial feeding but which, nevertheless, leave much to be desired.

The fact is that science, though it is often able to achieve apparent miracles, can not duplicate mother's milk and probably may never do so. The cow has its place as a wet nurse to the human infant hut it is assuming entirely tno important a role in modern child-rearing. The result has been shown statistically by health authorities and baby specialists.

Two Chicago physicians have reported on their study of 20,000 infants, divided into three groups. In the first, or wholly breast-fed the sickness rate was 37 per cent; in the second or partially breast-fed it was 53 per cent and in the bottle-fed it was 63 per cent. Of 10,000 babies in the first group, only 15 died; of 8,000 in the second group, 59 died and of 1700 in the third group, 144 died.

The figures are comparable to those derived from studies undertaken in England. In British industrial towns, it is said, where mothers must return to factory emplnyment as sonn after the birth of their baby as is possible, artificial feeding is the rule. And in these areas, according to the health officers, 300 of every 600 infant deaths might have been prevented by breast-feeding.

Dr. J. C. Spence, famous baby specialist, asserts that the mother who nurses her child is much better off physiologically and mentally than one who does not. He expresses the belief that proper management of the mother after confinement would allow a greater number to nourish their children and he deplnres the tendency of the nurse to thrust a bottle into the infant's mouth as the solution for a problem which often calls for perseverance and skill. Dr. Spence also criticizes his colleagues for their seeming indifference tn the value of breast-feeding.

There is sufficient evidence at hand to warrant the statement that the bottle-fed youngster is not as robust as the breast-fed. Indifference to this welfare indicates indifference to the future of the race.

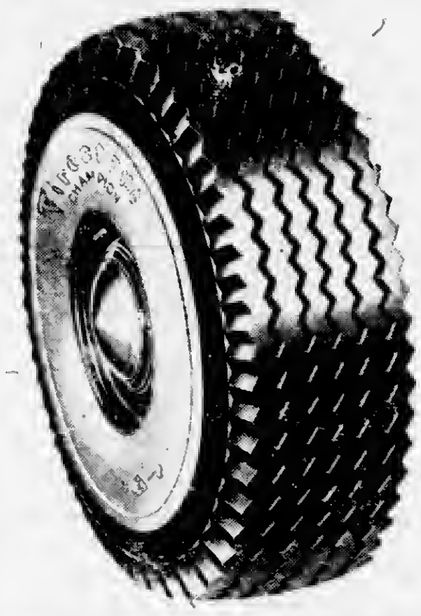
Install New Tires and Drive with SAFETY and COMFORT!

For the Utmost in Tire Service — Equip Your Car with the New

Firestone Champion



Particular drivers everywhere select the Firestone CHAMPION because this great new tire is the safety sensation of 1939. In thirty-nine years of tire experience the manufacturers of Firestone have never before heard of such instant and unanimous approval of a tire as has been accorded the CHAMPION. When a tire is accepted by the motorists of the world with such enthusiastic approval it is convincing proof that the CHAMPION is in a class by itself. Here is the tire that has everything—the tire with the New Safety-Lock Cord Body and the New Gear-Grip Tread—providing greater safety and more miles under all kinds of wear. The CHAMPION has been swept to surprising heights of popularity because of its marvelous gripping power. Because of its superior performance motor car manufacturers have adopted it for their 1939 models. It is truly a great achievement in safety engineering.

STRONGER CORD BODY. The new Firestone CHAMPION Tire is built by an entirely new method in which each and every component part of the tire is locked and inter-locked into a super-safe, inseparable unit of amazing strength. This is accomplished first by the use of a completely new type of tire cord called "Safety-Lock," in which the cotton fibers are more compactly interwoven to assure cooler running and provide greater strength. Then, the fibers in each individual cord, the cords in each ply, and the plies themselves, are all securely LOCKED TOGETHER by a new and advanced Firestone process of Gum-dipping, which provides amazingly greater strength, and greater strength means greater safety.

Firestone LIFE PROTECTOR the Tire within a Tire

This amazing new Firestone development makes a blowout as harmless as a slow leak.

Should a blowout occur the exclusive Firestone Safety-Valve holds sufficient air in the inner compartment to support the car until it is brought to a safe stop.

MORE NON-SKID MILEAGE. The new Safety Lock cord construction provides the extra strength needed for the use of the new, thicker, tougher, deeper Firestone Gear-Grip tread, which delivers remarkably longer non-skid mileage. This sensational new tread is called "Gear-Grip" because of its unique design—it has more than 3,000 sharp-edged angles, which grip the road with a sure-footed hold to protect against skidding and assure a safe stop. Join the Firestone Save-A-Life Campaign today by calling on your Firestone Dealer and equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Champion Tires, the only tires made that are safety-proved on the speedway for your protection on the highway!

citizens should be exempt, or words to that affect. Tibbits' action gives no credit to a city ambitious enough to better its position by owning its own electric light system. He would penalize such a community for the excuse that other cities of his district must pay the sales tax. His action is even more disgusting to the average citizen when it is known that public utilities have been waging an endless battle to ham-string municipally owned systems, and are no doubt behind the measure. Unless a remedy is found, you and I are going to be reminded of this new law to the tune of around $2,000 each year while the utilities smile at our discomfort.

History—He mumbled a few words in church, and he was married. He mumbled a few words in his sleep, and he was divorced.

Speaking about fish! The conservation department reports its 1938 plant in Michigan waters totalled 154,000,000 of all species, which is quite a few fish. The plant represented approximately 160 tons of young fish and trout fishermen might get quite a lot of satisfaction in knowing that of the 160 tons, around 57 tons were brook trout.

Wouldn't it be nice to be a kid again. After Friday all we'd have to think about would be what to do to amuse ourselves the next three months.

Like the spring smelt and perch "runs" lake trolling is getting a late start. A few scattered steelhead have been caught so far in Lake Charlevoix, and those during the past week, and trolling for mackinaws in Lake Michigan is rather spotted. Only a half dozen or so have been taken. The next few weeks should see some fine fishing, however. And Charlevoix sure did get a fine bit of publicity out of its Perch Festival. Those who came here had the novelty of being sent home with fish from a "fishin' festival" and the perch are still biting good.

Joe: "So you met your wife at a night club? Wasn't it romantic?"

Jim: "Naw, it was disastrous. I thought she was honey taking care of the kids."

Michigan's state officials are having a scrapping time down at Lansing over purchases for various departments. One accuses the other of buying at a price too high, and then another refuses to O. K. some one else's purchase because it was done without so-and-so's approval, and so on. Whenever politics enter the picture, someone is bound to get their toes stepped on, but one thing you can say about these Republicans is that they aren't afraid to bring their troubles out in the open, a sign of conscientious objections which they don't mind having the public know about. Bet a nickel the Democrats had the same trouble, only they were too cautious to let inter-party difficulties be aired publicly.

They're getting along right smart with that new fill over Loeb creek on M-66. A short detour through the Loeb Farms is being used while the job is under way.

If every former Charlevoix resident was as big a booster for the old home town as is Winfield Emrey, who is now here on a visit from Lowell, Mass., it certainly would give us a lot of nice publicity.

We realize that next Sunday, June 4, is not Whitsunday, or Pentecost Sunday. Sunday, April 23, the proper day, was given over entirely to memorial, for that reason we choose to consider Pentecost next Sunday. We are not so interested in the exact day but we are intensely interested in the message of that day. If one is interested in a successful Christian life he should be present Sunday morning.

We will have a young people's service Sunday night at 6:45, to make plans for the future.

NEW VACATION CHURCH SCHOOL OPEN MONDAY

Classes to Open for Students from Kindergarten Thru Junior High

It is generally conceded that many children in these days do not receive adequate religious education.

It is to improve this condition that the churches of Charlevoix are uniting in providing two weeks of vacation school instruction beginning next Monday, June 5th.

As announced last week the instruction will be given at the school building from 9 to 11:45 a. m. each school day.

Courses of study are planned from the kindergarten age through Junior high. All who can are asked to bring a 5c registration fee to help defray expenses.

Some of the cooperating churches have sometimes carried on their own vacation schools but this is the first union effort and it is hoped the success of the venture will warrant its continuation in the future.

TONY ACCETTA TO GIVE EXHIBITION AT EAST PARK

Comes to Charlevoix Through Courtesy of Wood Brothers; Is Outstanding Performer

Fishing enthusiasts of Charlevoix will have an opportunity to see Tony Accetta, world's professional bait and fly casting champion, in action at East Park, Wednesday evening, June 21st. Mr. Accetta comes to Charlevoix through the courtesy of the Shakespeare Fishing Tackle company of Kalamazoo, by invitation of Wood Brothers.

In gaining recognition as the world's professional bait and fly casting champion, Accetta has twice won the all-round title at the national tournament of the National Association of Scientific Angling Clubs.

As a member of the Cleveland Casting club, whose supremacy in winning club honors at the national meets is universally known, Accetta has been instrumental in the promotion of many casting clubs in Ohio and nearby states.

One of his favorite sports is to fish with the local champion and to show him that he can fish as well as hit targets. Naturally, the fact that he may make three casts to the ordinary fisherman's one aids in producing a good catch.

Many fishermen have found it advantageous to show Accetta their present fishing equipment so that he may make suggestions as to how it can best be used.

Tony is more than a champion who can consistently "hit the mark"—he's a teacher, in the true sense of the word, as many sportsmen can testify.

A kindly suggestion from Tony has made fly casting a pleasure for many who despaired of ever learning how to master the art.

Through his efforts many anglers are now realizing the joy of landing game fish with light tackle and have discarded forever the idea that a 24 or 30 lb. test line and a heavy rod are needed to land a six or eight pounder. He's teaching the joy of fishing with a 6 ounce casting rod, an aluminum spool reel and a 9 or 14 lb. test silk line.

Tony's favorite stunt is to stand at one end of a football field and throw a 5-8 ounce casting lure over the crossbar at the opposite end of the field. Naturally it takes tournament equipment to perform this feat.

SIXTEEN FINISHED TRAINING COURSE

GRADUATION CERTIFICATES WERE AWARDED FRIDAY

Over Half of Students Have Been Placed in Positions—Express Thanks for Cooperation

The resort training school sponsored by the Board of Education and the Board of Commerce, completed its six-weeks course last Friday, with sixteen members graduating.

The school, which was conducted with the co-operation of the State Department of Vocational Guidance and the West Michigan Tourist and Resort association, was under the supervision of O. P. North, superintendent of schools, with Mrs. Irving Hallett as instructor.

Splendid support was received from resort hotels in this region and from many local people, which has been very much appreciated. Several hotel managers gave talks to the students, and offered facilities for training and observation. An out-of-town field trip, in cars donated by Brown's Garage, was made to Traverse City, where the students were guests at the Park Place Hotel. Members of the class served at the recent librarians' luncheon and the senior banquet. Over half of the students are now working, and several expect to start work within the next week.

COUNCIL SETS DEPARTMENT SALARIES

ANNUAL RESOLUTION ADOPTED MONDAY NIGHT

New Schedule of Electric Light Rates Adopted Will Benefit Large Users of Current

The city council at Monday night's session adopted the annual salaries resolution, setting compensation of departmental employes for the ensuing year, approved a new schedule of electric light rates and transacted other routine business.

Large users of electric current will be the principal beneficiaries of the new rates. While the long term residence rate was unchanged, the long term commercial, short and long term residence and commercial were changed by the addition of a step providing for a 3c rate for consumption over 160 kilowatt hours. The previous rate under these classifications was 4c for over 60 kilowatt hours. The long term residence rural minimum was increased from $1 to $1.50, the short term commercial minimum from $1 to $2.50 and the short term commercial rural from $2.50 to $3.50. The first step in both short term residence and commercial starts at 9c for the first 10 kilowatt hours instead of 10c as in the previous schedule.

It is anticipated the city's loss in revenue by the lowered rates will be made up through increased consumption.

Other business of the session included granting of liquor license to O. Gatti of the Colonial Club; appointment of William Tumath (Chicago Club night watchman) as special policeman without compensation, and approval of estimate of the Muskegon Construction company, city hall contractors, in the amount of $9,761.29.

Details of the annual salaries resolution will be found in the council proceedings published on page 7 of this issue. This issue also includes the annual audit of city books as completed by Ole Lyngklip, Detroit accountant.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By Ken Ushee

Heard Frederic Fechheimer, well known north side summer resident, complaining about the high cost of fish the other day. It seems Mr. Fechheimer broke a $20 rod while landing a 6-pound steelhead the other day and, according to my arithmetic, that brings fish flesh to around $3.33 1-3 per pound. It was a nice one, though, and broken rods are a part of the sport.

The city street department is busy getting ready to handle the usual heavy summer automobile traffic. Bright yellar paint marks the places where you can and can't park your car, places where there are "No U Turns," etc.

The boys down at the electric light plant seem to be awfully pleased with the new diesel engine which has been installed and is now producing "juice" for us folks to use. They say the big engine "ticks 'em off" just like a watch and is mighty simple to operate in comparison with some of the earlier models. One thing we can rest assured of—we won't have to worry about having all the electric current we need for the summer season, even if there is a break-down of one of the units.

In view of all the agitation for restrictions on commercial fishing operations as a means of saving the fishing industry of the Great Lakes, a pamphlet entitled "Conservation of the Great Lakes Fisheries—Are the Great Lakes Fisheries Doomed?", written by John R. Schacht, president of the Great Lakes Fisheries association, provides some interesting material for thought. Despite the fact the current cry is that the Great Lakes faces depletion of commercial species through over-fishing, etc., statistics compiled by the United States Bureau of Fisheries and quoted by Schacht show only a very small difference in the seasonal take of

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

"Michigan seems to have a weakness for state boards. It is true the state has as yet no trustees of washbasins or toothbrushes, but if we keep on as we are going there will be nothing from fish eyes to fox tails that will not be supervised by a board."

With almost prophetic foresight, Chase S. Osborn made this comment in his first message to the state legislature as governor 25 years ago.

"The Sage of the Soo," who incidentally was the first and only governor to come from the Upper Peninsula, foresaw the growing trend toward centralization power of state government—a trend which has been paralleled at Washington, D. C., and which has continued throughout all recent administrations, Republican and Democrat.

A glance at the legislative record at Lansing for 1939 reveals the following examples of what former Governor Osborn had in mind.

Dry Pastures Bring Warning

Indications point to a shortage of pasture in many sections of Michigan this summer. Weather conditions in April and May were unfavorable for pasture growth and many legumes such as sweet clover and alfalfa were seriously injured by heavy frosts.

Livestock farmers in Charlevoix county should make a careful inventory now of the amount and condition of pasture available for the next three months, suggests G. A. Brown, head of the animal husbandry department at Michigan State college. This should be followed by plans and preparation for additional pasture if it will be needed.

"For sheep and hog pasture," says Professor Brown, "perhaps the best crop to be sown in June is Dwarf Essex rape. On the heavier soils this is usually broadcast at the rate of six to seven pounds an acre. On lighter soils the seed frequently is drilled in rows 28 inches apart and cultivated.

For cattle pasture the most satisfactory crop for June growth is Sudan grass broadcast at the rate of 25 pounds an acre.

Beef cattle especially will do well upon mature grass pasture if there is abundance of it. Sheep and swine differ and require fresh, succulent green feed throughout the season if satisfactory gains are to be made."

Where permanent grass pastures are depended upon to carry the flock, it is considered advisable to provide some rape pasture on which lambs can be weaned in July or early August. This is especially good practice if second crop alfalfa or clover is not available right after weaning.

Livestock which marks time or loses weight and condition in July and August can prove a serious loss to the owner, yet Professor Brown's suggestions offer means of avoiding this loss by anticipating pasture needs for these months.

Canning Demonstration to Attract all Housewives

Through the generosity of the Ball Brothers company, Muncie, Indiana, their special representative, Miss Ina B. Rowe, will conduct a special canning demonstration in the Boyne City high school gymnasium on Wednesday afternoon, June 14, beginning at 2 p. m. The very latest information on canning will be shown the public.

This demonstration will be most timely as at the present time of the year much home canning can be done and it is early enough to take care of the bulk of canning programs in the immediate future. Remember, all ladies are most cordially invited and urged to attend this demonstration at the Boyne City gymnasium, on Wednesday afternoon, June 14, at 2 o'clock. You certainly cannot afford to miss this opportuniy. Don't come alone! Bring a friend with you and enjoy a most delightful afternoon.

Poultry Farmers to See Demonstration on Caponizing

As a result of many poultry raisers requesting help on caponizing, plans have been made for a caponizing demonstration to be held at Bebling's Warehouse, Boyne City, on Monday afternoon at 2 on June 12th. O. E. Shear, poultry specialist from Michigan State college, will be in charge of the demonstration.

It is a well known fact that caponized birds make a far more rapid growth of higher quality meat than ordinary fowls. With our coming summer resort trade, there is always a good demand for high quality birds.

In addition to caponizing work, an informal discussion will be held covering feeding, care, and management of the poultry flock. Mr. Shear will be available Monday forenoon, June 12th, and Tuesday forenoon, June 13th, for visits throughout the county. If you have any particular problem and would like to have Mr. Shear visit your farm, inform your county agent right away and we will try and see you. Remember to be present Monday afternoon, June 12th, at Behling's Warehouse in Boyne City at 2 o'clock to see how caponizing is done.

JUNIOR FARM BUREAU GROUP IS ORGANIZED

Officers Chosen and Future Activities Are Outlined

A group of thirty-three young young farm people between the ages of 18 and 28 met at the Charlevoix high school recently and, with the assistance of C. B. Carey, district representative of the Michigan State Farm Bureau, Fred Willis, manager of the Charlevoix Co-Op. Co., and B. C. Mellencamp, county agricultural agent, went on record as favoring the organization of a Junior Farm Bureau.

The aim of this group is to better fit themselves to carry on the program of their elders when such time arrives that they become the active farmers; namely, that the Michigan State Farm Bureau was founded on the principle that the welfare of the farmer is dependent on their ability to maintain an organization in which they can assemble and analyze the facts pertaining to their own business, write their own program, and then make that program effective through the strength of that organization.

Temporary officers elected were: Carlton Smith, president; Adolph Ecklund, vice-president, Miss Lulu Mitchell, secretary.

The second meeting of the group was held June 6, in the recreation room of the high school. After an hour of recreation, they came to order for one hour of serious discussion. It was decided that the best means of raising funds was to sponsor a box social. This social is to be June 20, place to be announced later. Miss Iva Howe was elected program chairman, and has as her committee Adolph Ecklund and Freda Willis. Those in chaige of selecting the place for the social are Miss Merle Blanchard, Leola Henley, and Clnrence Himebaugh. After favoring a special meeting for June 12, the group adjourned and light refreshments were served.

"FIRE WATER" BRINGS TERMS AT BOYNE CITY

Local Woman Gets 60 Days in County Jail—2 Others Given 30 Days

Judge Gilbert M. Lindsay and Boyne City police officers convinced two Indians and n white woman companion Monday that too much "fire water" in Boyne City is "bad medicine."

The Indians, John Keshatn, 25, a Hayes township laborer, and John Tepakeyah, 31, of Charlevoix, were arrested with Edna Thomas, 33, who gave her home address as Charlevoix, as the three drank beer in an auto parked on a downtown street Saturday night.

In justice court, Judge Lindsay sentenced the woman to 60 days in the Charlevoix county jail and gave each of the Indians a 30-day term.

IS NOT TOO LATE FOR GARDENERS TO PLANT

Time Right for Second Plantiog and for Late Storage Vegetables

Early gardeners may find more angleworms, but there still is sufficient time for vegetable gardening if a wise selection of the proper kinds is made.

Suggestions made by H. L. Seaton, vegetable specialist at Michigan State college, include an assortment that will add considerable to a farm or city larder.

The vine plants such as melons, squash and cucumbers are due to go into the ground. It's also time for lima beans, for second plantings of sweet corn and snap beans although it is too late for the crops that hot weather would nip. These are peas, lettuce, radishes and ordinary spinach.

Carrots for fall storage can he put in the garden now, also late tomatoes and late potatoes.

If the gardener laments inability to raise spinach, Senton does have one suggestion for summer greens. That is the New Zealand spinach which thrives in hot weather. Because it is not sensitive to heat, the plants put out and continue to offer long tender tips that please the gardener.

Late cabbage and cauliflower can be seeded right in the garden. Later in the month of June such plants as late tomatoes or partly grown out cabbnges and cauliflower can he set out.

So there is the assortment for the man with the hoe, who earlier in the season found other work than gardening to do.

LANSING LETTER

Clearly an innovation in governmental function and one which is almost "New Dealish" in its scope, the milk marketing law will be administered by a five-member commission. Milk producers have protested for many months about low milk prices. Forming an agressive bloc at Lansing, they persuaded legislators (most of whom are from rural areas or small towns) that price-fixing by the state was the possible remedy.

Marketing and advertising of apples are to be the responsibility of a state apple commission.

The legislature abolished the offices of fire marshal and state hospital director and eliminated the state legislative council. Then it created a labor mediation board, court of claims, welfare commission, athletic board of control, probation commission, and commission to pass on need for state-owned automobiles.

Laws were also enacted to tighten state restrictions as administered by state boards, for the licensing and practice of real estate brokers, funeral directors, chiropodists, dentists, and nurses. Other laws required state licensing and control of soft drink manufacturers and residential building contractors.

Special Session

By leaving the state budget $6,000,000 to $15,000,000 out of balance when they adjourned May 19, lawmakers left at Governor Dickinson's door a virtual invitation to call a special session.

As we pointed out in this column May 18, "if the budget is balanced, it will be a miracle of first magnitude." Dickinson insisted on general non-intervention in legislative affairs as did Frank Murphy in 1937, and the financial results were somewhat similar.

While Murphy's legislative deficit was $18,000,000 by actual appropriations, Dickinson's dilemna consisted chiefly of two parts: (1) $15,000,000 school aid authorized and only $8,000,000 appropriated and (2) $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 welfare aid authorized and only $8,750,000 appropriated.

These figures come from Emerson R. Boyles, the governor's legal advisor, Grover C. Dillman, state budget director, puts the pending legislative deficit at $6,000,000 to $7,000,000. Both estimates do not include the so-called "Murphy deficit" which may be near the $25,000,000 mark by June 30, end of the state's present fiscal year. The legislature took no step to establish a debt retirement fund as recommended by the late Gov. Fitzgerald.

"Pay-As-You-Go"

Governor Dickinson, thrifty farmer near Charlotte, insists firmly that the legislature must balance the budget.

This "pay-as-you-go" principle, he points out, was an integral part of the Fitzgerald program which also proposed to accomplish it without resorting to new taxes. The legislature has several choices to make when it convenes for the special session scheduled for early in July:

1. Reduce authorized expenditures for schools and welfare to meet Dillman's budget requirements.

2. Maintain present appropriations and impose a new tax or two—raise the sales tax from three to four per cent; a tax on amusements or tobacco; a state income tax. (These have been suggested by state officials or legislators in the past few years.)

3. Grant Governor Dickinson the same appropriation-cutting power that the 1937 legislature handed to Murphy.

The situation is not discouraging, however. The legislature did reduce state expenditures, as of 1937, with the leading exception of schools and welfare. As the Lansing State Journal points out, "other daily papers expected too much. The State Journal has lived close to legislatures for a long time and so has learned not to be disappointed."

This Lansing newspaper, with some sophistication, observes further:

"Newspapers, which deride the legislature, have never done anything, so far as observed, to get better ones. The general public very largely utterly disregards the legislature until it reaches Lansing."

This legislative weakness, as such, may be an inherent part of our democratic system. Taking a long-range viewpoint, it may be a source of strength. The British would say, "We'll muddle through." Governor Dickinson who has been a part of six state administrations expects confidently to balance the budget by doing just that — "muddling through" the present confusion and disorder.

More Liquor Control

The legislature's special session will not be limited to financial matters.

The general problem of state control of liquor should be overhauled, the governor has indicated.

While it is doubtful that any step will be taken to remove the state from the business (or control) of sale of liquor through state-owned stores, as the late Gov. Fitzgerald once recommended, the legislature may do something about the discriminatory tax on California and other out-of-state wines, proposed licensing of drinkers, and new restrictions on roadhouses located outside corporation limits of municipalities.

According to Murl H. Defoe, state liquor control commissioner whom Dickinson once said was his "personal" representative in liquor matters, "the legislature evidently was not in sympathy with the governor's ideas for liquor reform." (The governor is president of the Michigan Anti-Saloon league and vice-president of the National Anti-Saloon league.) He also is head of a state which sells liquor through its own stores.

Providing the state commission has legal authority to do so, Defoe proposes that it effect the following reforms by administrative action:

Reduction of the number of licensed liquor outlets by one-third.

More police supervision of roadhouses.

Better enforcement of present liquor laws and regulations.

As for licensing of drinkers, Governor Dickinson is opposed to that on the general ground that he doesn't want any new commission (like Chase S. Osborn) "unless it is one to abolish commissions."

Van Wagoner Fares Well

With only nine Democrats in the senate and a handful in the house, Murray D. Van Wagoner, state highway commissioner, fared rather well with the 1939 legislature.

While the $5,000,000 annual highway appropriation from general funds was eliminated, the legislature turned down proposals to strip Van Wagoner of his up-state organization by turning back maintenance of state trunk highways to counties and to have the state highway department pay part of the cost of lighting state roads inside municipalities.

The house approved the county maintenance bill, but the senate left it in committee where it died.

The lighting bill never passed the house.

How did Van Wagoner accomplish all this? Answer—Mostly by getting republican legislators to see his side of the proposals. A division among republican legislators in both the house and senate also contributed to Van Wagoner's defensive success.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT

Community Cooperation Aids in Prevention of Smallpox Epidemic

With the presence of several smallpox cases throughout the southern and central counties of Michigan, the District Health Department No. 3 has taken the opportunity to stress the importance of vaccination against this disease in the counties of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego, these past few weeks. Since many of the rural schools have already closed, the health department staff have turned their attention mainly to the city schools in an endeavor to protect the majority of the school children in each town. Since this campaign began over three weeks ago, over 4,000 persons have been protected in this area.

This district has been fortunate in not having had reported a single case of smallpox since 1931 or for seven years. By impressing upon our citizens the importance of vaccination we may again add another year to this record. Already 266 cases of smallpox have been reported in Michigan this year. The counties who have reported cases closest to our district are, to the south of us—Benzie, Wexford, Missaukee, Roscommon, (the latter county having had 25 cases). With this disease in such close proximity we would do well to have this simple but effective protection if we have not been vaccinated within the last five years.

Smallpox is not limited by age or sex or occupation. It may attack any susceptible person. It is to a certain extent a seasonal disease; the larger percentage of cases occurring in the spring. It is also a disease of periodicity in that epidemics occur at fairly regular intervals of six or seven years. When smallpox is epidemic, vaccination is widespread. With the resulting drop in cases comes carelessness in revaccination. At the end of six or seven years a large group of the population is again susceptible, and an epidemic is the result.

The practical value of vaccination is too well known to need much comment. However, as an illustration we cite the value as found a few years ago in Detroit. Of 1,610 cases of smallpox occurring during one year in Detroit, the epidemic of 1924, not a single person who contracted the disease had been successfully vaccinated within the previous five years. A study of 9,903 cases occurring in the United States during 1925 showed that 91% of the patients had never been successfully vaccinated; 7% were successfully vaccinated more than seven years before; and 2% had been vaccinated less than seven years before.

In general, the earlier in life a person is vaccinated the milder will be the reaction. Children should be vaccinated before their first birthday. Vaccination every five years is advised.

A fine response has been received throughout the twenty schools vaccinated in this district which is an indication that parents appreciate the value of this protection and which may in turn do much to avert an epidemic in this area.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE NEWS BULLETIN

Insured Shares, Savings and Loan Increase in Michigan

In the past twelve months the number of Michigan investors placing their savings in insured savings and loan associations in both federal and state-chartered associations increased from 31,123 to 54,623 announced Harry F. Kelly, secretary of state. The amount of such insured savings on May 1 was $48,190,336. Each shareholder is protected up to $5,000 on his holdings.

During April the 43 insured associations in Michigan made 415 loans on homes totaling $1,145,000. As of May 1, the aggregate amount of "direct reduction" loans on the books of these institutions was $33,800,000. A "direct reduction" loan is one which decreases with each monthly payment. The payments are applied both to principal and interest.

Harry F. Kelly, secretary of state, on May 31 announced the appointment of Addison D. Alguire of Gladstone, as divisional head of District No. 5, department of state, which embraces the entire Upper Peninsula. Alguire, who is a major in the 337th Infantry, Officers Reserve Corps, is adjutant of the Upper Peninsula Association of American Legion Posts. In 1936, Major Alguire was field representative for the state board of tax administration.

AT THE MOVIES

"Let Freedom Ring" Has Stellar Cast of "Names"

Not since such memorable pictures of the past as "Grand Hotel" and "Dinner at Eight" has such a galaxy of stellar film performers been gathered together for one motion picture as that presented in the cast of the new Nelson Eddy starring vehicle, "Let Freedom Ring," thrill-splattered drama of the romance and adventure in the western hoon days of '69, which comes to the Palace Theatre Saturday, June 10, for a 3-day engagement.

With Eddy, fresh from his recent triumph in "Sweethearts," now cast as Steve Logan, a Robin Hood of the prairie who sings and fights his way through scenes of roaring excitement in the Ben Hecht drama, the lavishly-cast production also features Virginia Bruce, last seen opposite Frederic March in "There Goes My Heart;" the redoubtable Victor McLaglen of "The Informer," "Gunga Din" and "Pacific Liner" fame; Lionel Barrymure in his first role since "Young Dr. Kildare;" Edward Arnold, who comes to the picture direct from his triumph in "Idiot's Delight," and those two inimitable comedy stars, Guy Kibbee and Charles Butterworth. Also in important characterizations are H. B. Warner and Raymond Walburn.

Sylvia Sidney, Leif Erikson Top Film Cast

Two of the screen's leading dramatic players, Sylvia Sidney and Leif Erikson, play the chief roles in Paramount's ". . . one third of a nation. . ." the screen version of the sensational Broadway play, which will have its first local showing Tuesday, June 13, at the Palace Theatre.

Exciting New Thriller Set in Mystery Castle

The setting of a weird old castle and a story keyed by mysterious buried treasure supply thrills aplenty in the new "Bulldog Drummond" adventure film, "Bulldog Drummond's Secret Police." The H. C. (Sapper) McNeile thriller, which has its local opening June 13, at the Palace Theatre, features John Howard and Heather Angel in a fast-paced story with exciting new angles.

Ways Given to Detect Racketeers

Facts that reveal how many up-to-date, everyday rackets operate, as reported by the victims are listed in The American Weekly with the June 11 issue of The Detroit Sunday Times. An exceptionally informative article, illustrated in colnr, and prepared from facts supplied by the victims of swindlers—a helpful article pointing out fundamental rules to follow if you want to avoid becoming the victim of racketeers.

various species over a 10-year period. He points out that the fluctuation in the annual catch of given species is subject solely to the change in natural elements, those affecting spawning particularly, and shows where one season produced record catches, while the next year, perhaps, would be a poor one. In other words, it is the contention that fish production almost runs in cycles, beyond the power of human control. Summed up, the writer of the pamphlet makes a plea for conservationists to quit meddling with something they do not understand and leave it to the fishermen themselves—the fellows who have everything tied up in the industry—to work out their own problems. Such reasoning does not seem entirely out of line, especially in view of the figures used to prove such contentions. In conclusion, the pamphlet says: "In our stand on these matters, we are sometimes termed obstructionists offering nothing constructive. We have the highest regard for scientific research and fully realize its value. But scientists disagree among themselves, and they are frequently over-zealous and blind to the views of others. At times even scientists are wrong, and unfortunately we cannot appeal their theories and decisions to a higher court for review. We object to being called obstructionists simply because we draw different conclusions from given data. We should not be criticized because we refuse to turn over control of our valuable fisheries to a group which has held itself aloof from commercial fishery interests. It is high time the fishermen stop bickering among themselves. It is time the conservationists and scientists stop crying 'Wolf', and cease attempting to increase their power and to force through drastic legislation by the 'hue and cry' method. It is time the sport fisherman buried the hatchet."

An interesting piece of literature came to this desk last week in the form of a map sent out by the Kroger Grocery & Baking Co. It showed an outline of Michigan, where and what different areas produced and more particularly the volumn of produce purchased by the Kroger company from those areas such as dairy products, canned goods, farm produce of every description, etc. It all proved very enlightening and produced a greater appreciation of the fact that Kroger is one of Michigan's biggest customers for Michigan products. The map was a feature in connection with the "Michigan Days for Michigan Prosperity" promotion extending from June 1 to 10. It left you with the thought that Kroger, as well as all firms, must buy before they can sell, and showed that this firm uses a whale of a lot of Michigan products.

To the complete satisfaction of sportsmen generally, and trolling camp operators particularly, steelhead have started "hitting" in Lake Charlevoix. The start was somewhat belated—late by two weeks like the smelt and perch spawning "runs." "Fritz" Webster, president of the Board of Commerce, repaid radio station WJR, Detroit, for the fine publicity given the recent perch festival. He had as guests Sunday on a fishing trip Robert Clark, staff organist from station WJR, and Edward Werner, prominent Detroit attorney. They landed three nice steelhead. Don Clothier reported five fish between two parties and numerous other boats came in with one or more.

HOLIDAY TRAFFIC AT STRAITS WAS GREATER

Increase of 15.5% Over Last Year Reported by VanWagoner

Increased tourist travel in Michigan during 1939 is indicated by the traffic records established this week at the Straits of Mackinac. Ferry crossings are an important "barometer" used by the Michigan state highway department to gauge tourist travel.

State highway commissioner, Murray D. VanWagoner, pointed to a 15.5 per cent increase in the number of vehicles transported during this Memorial Day week end as compared with last year. The week end included the five days, Friday, Saturday, Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday.

Five ferries operating on a summer schedule for the first time this year, transported 5,185 vehicles during the five-day holiday week end. This compared with 4,486 vehicles for the same period a year ago.

BELOVED LOCAL WOMAN TAKEN BY DEATH FRIDAY

Mrs. Charles Carey Succumbed After An Extended Illness

Friday evening, June 2nd, saw the passing of a well beloved Charlevoix woman in the death of Mrs. Charles Carey at the family home on South Bridge street.

She had been in failing health since suffering a severe stroke while visiting in Washington, D. C., more than six years ago. Her indomitable will caused her to rise and dress daily and take care of her own needs even though it took much of her failing strength until March 22nd last, when she had the flu, resulting in complications which caused her death.

Emma Alcock was born January 19, 1864, at Uxbridge, Ontario, the daughter of Simon and Anna Jane Alcock. She was the last survivor of a family of ten children. She was married December 25, 1883 to Charles Carey at Goodwood, Ont., and came with her husband to Charlevoix in August, 1890, and had since resided here.

She leaves to mourn their loss besides the husband seven children: W. A. Carey, Detroit; Bert of Charlevoix; Lafayette of Washington, D. C.; Leo of Charlevoix; Agnes Papineau, Dearborn; Jennie Durance, Flint and Erma Weller, Saginaw; also 20 grandchildren and a host of relatives and friends. A son, John Keith, died in infancy.

Mrs. Carey was a life-long member and a consistent worker in the Baptist church, and a member of the Eastern Star. She was a loving and devoted mother, a true friend and neighbor, and will be missed by all who knew her.

Funeral services were held from the See Funeral Home at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, Rev. G. R. Parker officiating, assisted by Rev. John Small. Interment was at Brookside cemetery.

Pigeon is His Pet

Yale—Theodore Yeskov, hotel porter, sometimes surprises Yale people with his trained pet pigeon, which follows him around wherever he goes. For instance, a grocery clerk thought he was seeing things when he looked at a pigeon perched on Yeskov's shoulder, where there was nothing a moment before. The bird had been ordered to wait outside, but he wanted to be with his owner, so when the store door opened, flew in.

DEPARTMENT ESTIMATES DAMAGE OF THREE FIRES

Final estimates of the forest fire organization set the total loss in Michigan's three biggest forest fires this year at $188,600.

The three principal fires were the Presque Isle fire, also referred to as the "Onaway" fire, where the damage reached $163,348; the Grass Lake fire where damage totaled $20,897, and the Bear Lake fire where damage amounted to $4,455. This estimate of loss includes only that of timber destroyed or ruined by the flames.

It is considered very difficult to place value on the damage done when fire destroys a large tract of second growth or game cover. Such factors as the cost of putting seedlings through a nursery, the cost of several transpluntings and the cost of "scalping" and preparing the burned area for the transplants must be taken into consideration.

Card of Thanks

We take this method of thanking our neighbors and friends for their kind expressions of sympathy in the death of our mother, Mrs. Barbara Krulik. These expressions have been deeply appreciated. The Children. —Adv. 23t1pd.

WATERFOWL BELIEVED TO BE ON THE GAIN

More Rigid Protection, Better Breeding Grounds, Great Help

Latest reports indicate that the upward trend in number of waterfowl continues throughout the country.

The increase is attributed to the combined program of habitat restoration and improvement and of restriction of the legal take each season. Study of bag reports made out by duck hunters also indicates a lower average kill than was believed current. According to these reports the average American duck hunter killed 4.4 ducks and 0.23 geese daily. During the entire open season he killed less than nine ducks. A total of 1.4 ducks was lost by the hunter. Average expenditure of ammunition was one box of shells per hunt or about 5.6 shells per duck.

Reports indicate that, while the gain continues in the various species of ducks, a falling off has occurred in many areas in the numbers of geese. Alaskan nesting grounds remarked a definite drop in the number of geese seen.

The exaltation of government to supreme authority and power over all things means the degradation of mankind.

COUNCIL APPROVES INCREASED BUDGET

RESOLUTION SETS FUNDS FOR ENSUING FISCAL YEAR

Budget of $37,514.27 Will Require Tax of 15 Mills, the Same Rate as Last Year

Adoption of the annual budget and setting the tax rate for the July or summer roll, constituted one of the major items of business transacted Monday night by the city council.

The budget, providing funds for the various departments as well as for the interest and sinking fund to retire bonded indebtedness, was set at $37,514.27. This sum is an increase of $357.77 over a year ago when the figure was $37,156.50. To provide this amount, the council adopted a tax rate of 12 mills for general purposes and 3 mills for interest and sinking fund, the same rate as a year ago.

Following are the comparative budgets for 1939-40 and 1938-39:

Fund	New	Old
Contingent	$ 9,536.70	$ 8,867.69
Health	300.00	300.00
Cemetery	2,500.00	2,000.00
Police	3,000.00	2,300.00
Fire	2,200.00	1,900.00
Park	4,000.00	5,000.00
Street	5,000.00	6,000.00
Sewer	1,000.00	1,000.00
Advertising	1,875.00	1,875.51
Auto Camp	500.00	400.00
Airport	100.00	100.00
	$30,011.75	$29,725.20
Int. & Sink.	7,502.92	7,431.30
	$37,514.27	$37,516.50

Increases include $669.01 in the contingent fund, $500 in the cemetery fund, $700 in the police fund, $300 in the fire fund and $100 in the auto camp fund. Decreases of $1000 are noted in the park fund and $1000 in the street fund.

A resolution approved application to the public debt commission to borrow $15,000 in anticipation of collection of unpaid taxes aggregating $30,011.75 and to issue notes therefor for the purpose of obtaining funds for general operating expenses, and a second resolution authorized the borrowing of $5,000 on the account of the electric utility fund on promisory note payable not later than September 15, 1939, from earnings of the utility.

Bids received for the purchase of an automobile for the police department were referred to committee for action at the next meeting.

Charlevoix sportsmen are looking forward with anticipation to the appearance of Tony Accetta, world's professional bait and fly casting champion, who will demonstrate his art at East Park on Round lake, Thursday evening, June 21st, at 7 o'clock.

Accetta has carried his message to better than two million anglers — teaching them the joy of bait casting with light line and lure. His demonstration includes a long list of accomplishments almost unbelievable to the average angler. Given a novice who has never fished, he demonstrates his casting theories by teaching the novice how to cast in five minutes time.

Mr. Accetta represents the Shakespeare Fishing Tackle Co. of Kalamazoo, and comes to Charlevoix under auspices of Wood Brothers, local Shakespeare dealers. Providing inclement weather prevents Wednesday evening's program, Mr. Accetta will give his demonstration Thursday evening at the same hour.

X-RAY SHOWS TWO TUBERCULOSIS CASES IN COUNTY

Seven Milder Childhood Type Reported by Dr. Carleton Dean

Two persons who may have active adult type tuberculosis were found at the Michigan Tuberculosis association's recent x-ray clinic in Charlevoix county, according to the report sent out from the health department by Dr. Carleton Dean, director.

Seven persons who have the mild childhood form of the disease were also discovered, as well as one person with heart disease and one with nonactive tuberculosis. Two persons who had formerly been tuberculosis patients were x-rayed and found to be doing well.

Persons who may have tuberculosis, but who need further study are urged by the officials of the Michigan Tuberculosis association to cooperate with their physicians in having check ups and x-rays to make sure no trouble is brewing. If the childhood type of tuberculosis is present usually only a little more careful healthful living as the doctor orders is necessary as a precaution against becoming sick.

These x-ray clinics are paid for by the tuberculosis Christmas seal sale.

PRESENT MARQUIS, THE MAGICIAN, AT GYMNASIUM

New Program to be Featured by the Familiar Marquis in His Current Appearance Here

Boasting that he can escape in less than fifteen seconds from a tightly nailed packing box Marquis, the Magician, will have to make good his claims when he appears here Wednesday night, June 21st, at the high school gymnasium sponsored by the Charlevoix Kiwanis club.

The Kit Curson Lumber company has constructed a heavy duty packing case such as those used in transoceanic shipping for this feature. At the conclusion of his two hour show of wonders Marquis will submit to a thorough "frisking" by a local committee and after it is proved beyond a doubt that the magician can not rely upon the aid of concealed tools he will be securely bound in rope by well known marine men of the vicinity. Next he will be lifted and placed within the box which will be nailed by local carpenters who will use over ten pounds of nails. The box will be bound in cable by the seamen. Marquis promises to make his appearance outside the box in less than fifteen seconds.

Marquis has successfully escaped from heavy, tightly nailed boxes submerged in San Jacinto Bay, the Mississippi River, and even in the treacherous waters of the Bay of Fundy. Recently Marquis was the near victim of an "over enthusiastic" committee which secretly poured ether in the box. Without fresh air in the box Marquis affected his escape and collapsed upon the stage.

The Marquis Show will arrive from Petoskey where the B. P. O. E. will sponsor the magician and the company will depart to Saulte Ste. Marie for an engagement under Lions club auspices.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By Ken Usher

Most Charlevoix younger folks will remember Dwight Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Smith, local residents. Well, Dwight is prominent in Takamo Park, Wash., business circles and vice-president of its Chamber of Commerce. Have in front of me a newspaper clipping which tells about his acting as master of ceremonies at a recent annual spring banquet and doing a mighty neat job of it. The clipping also relates: "Mr. Smith's songs, as always, were delightful, especially his rendition of Annie Laurie. He gave many encores." Can't especially remember Dwight's ability as a singer, but you never know what a fellow may turn out to be. The important thing is that he is successful in his chosen field. Congratulations!

There's a fellow named Tucker down at Mt. Clemens who operates a fishing boat livery and knows the value of publicity. He keeps a complete record of the catches made by people renting his boats, setting down the date, size, number, besides the name of the angler and, if possible, obtains a photograph. It is said the fish taken are muskellunge, ranging from 10 to 40 pounds. The point about the whole thing is that here's a fellow who has the "proof of the fishing" and when a skeptical angler comes along, he's really got something to entice him with.

After six years on the job, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace comes out with the belief that trade barriers between states are retarding economic recovery. He suggests that a lot of these state barriers be removed. Such a thought suggests to us that it would do the American farmer a whole lot more good if Wallace would forget tinkering with state barriers and start putting up some between the United States and foreign countries as a means of elim-

Father's Day

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Despite the threat of educators to mobilize their efficient school pressure group if legislators comply with Gov. Dickinson's budget-balancing demands, there are increasing signs in evidence that old-fashioned economy, like virtue, may triumph after all.

Back home from a wearisome five-month session, law-makers have been appraising their legislative record. They also have been listening to comments of voters.

The official deficit for the next fiscal year, starting July 1, is estimated by Grover C. Dillman, budget director, to be $6,000,000 to $7,000,000. But taking a realistic view of welfare needs, for which the legislature set aside $9,000,000 and which social workers forecast will require $15,000,000 in state aid, the 1939-40 deficit may reach $12,000,000 or more, according to Emerson Boyles, legal advisor to the governor.

Then, sharpen your pencil and add the accumulated deficit of the previous administration — $25,000,000 to $27,000,000 (estimate for June 30)—and you get an unvarnished picture of what's what.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

Squash Borers Threaten Crop

If gardeners or commercial vegetable growers in Charlevoix county have experienced trouble with squash borers in previous years and expect to grow a squash crop in 1939, it's time to get out the poison remedies.

Suggestions made by Ray Hutson, head of the entomology department at Michigan State college, provide simple control measures.

The squash vine borer always seems to pick out the most vigorous plants. Not only that, but into the perforations in the vines go disenses that bring added damage.

Good control of the pest by the large scale grower is to apply a liquid mixture. Three pounds of lead arsenate to 100 gallons of half strength bordeaux mixture is sprayed on the vines at intervals from the middle of June until the latter part of July.

Some growers cover the vines with a few hoefuls of soil at the joints along the vines. Those joints then take root and help support the plant even if borers start tapping its strength. Gardeners also find that this practice is helpful although it is more a means of living with the borer than a control.

Another pest is the squash bug, a hard-shelled pest also known as the stink bug. Hutson suggests throwing a spoonful of calcium cyanide on the ground underneath the plant.

Grasshopper Poison Bait Available at Boyne Falls

With the arrival of five tons of bran and five barrels of sodium arsenite, everything is now in readiness for a real campaign to eliminate grasshoppers. The material is available at the new building constructed last year and located just east of the railroad tracks and possibly eighty rods north.

A real effort has been made this year to contact all farmers who want to use this bait, giving them an opportunity to officially sign up for the number of acres they desire to protect. This material will be given out free of charge to those who have requested protection from grasshoppers. Kindly follow the advice given by the manager of the station as well as the printed information appearing on the tags, always keeping in mind that this is deadly poison and should be carefully handled. The station will be open from 9 until 4:30 until further notice. Use this material properly and you should derive splendid results.

Odd Hiding Place

Portland — A farmer near here tucked a $5 bill in an overall pocket, to use on a shopping trip, and went to the barn to do some chores. Ready to drive into town, he noticed the money was missing. Search proved fruitless. Came spring and the farmer was loading manure for field fertilizer. Seeing a bit of green paper near his feet, the farmer stooped and picked it up—the same $5 bill, still neatly folded.

Unusual Bequest

Sparta — Perhaps Joseph Idema didn't like one of his brothers, or maybe there was some other reason, but when he died he left some unusual bequests to 10 relatives. Two brothers were willed $1,000 each; another was left $5.00. Strangest of all was the bequest of "one rocking chair and one toy balloon to another brother."

AT THE MOVIES

Singing Star Has Modern Role in Lavish Musical

Taking full advantage of the versatility of its star, "Broadway Serenade," starring Jeanette MacDonald, comes to the Palace Theatre for an engagement of three days on Saturday, June 17. The new musical, which traces the struggles of a young singer and her husband in their fight for stardom, offers music lovers the full scope of Miss MacDonald's voice. The melodies include everything from grand opera to semi-classical and popular selections.

Appearing opposite the singing star is Lew Ayres, whose ace performances in recent film hits won for him the male lead in this picture. Ayres, a musician and composer in real life, plays a parallel role as Jimmy Seymour, Miss MacDonald's husband.

"Hopalong Cassidy" — America's favorite hero of the wide open spaces —meets two "menaces," one romantic, the other criminal, in "Renegade Trail," Paramount's new outdoor action film, which Producer Harry Sherman will present next Tuesday and Wednesday, June 20-21, at the Palace Theatre. Portrayed once again by William Boyd, the two-fisted "Bar 20" foreman crosses two states to help his best pal, "Marshal."

The stirring and dramatic experiences of a beautiful French girl, who finds herself locked behind the cold, gray walls of a reform school for girls, located on the outskirts of Paris, is poignantly and movingly told in Alexander Korda's "Prison Without Bars," which comes Tuesday and Wednesday, June 20-21, to the Palace Theatre, with Corinne Luchaire, Mr. Korda's newest discovery, playing the heroine of the story.

The supporting cast of "Prison Without Bars," headed by Barry Barnes and Edna Best, also features a trio of newcomers—Mary Morris, Lorraine Clewes and Sally Wisher—three lucky girls who are headed for stardom.

LESS TRAPPING SIGNAL BETTER ECONOMIC TIMES

Moothly Average of 250 Coyotes Drops to 64 for April

Improved economic conditions are reflected in latest figures on predatory animal control work of the state department of conservation, its officials point out.

Considerably short of the 1935 "depression time" monthly average of 250 coyotes trapped for state bounty payments is the figure of 64 for April this year. This brought the first quarter total to 179, which portends that 1939 will total a fraction of the 1935 all-time high of 3,021 coyotes caught.

The drive against the animals was intensified two years ago when the state bounty law was amended to raise the bounty on male coyotes from $10 to $15, and on females from $15 to $20. Since then seven state trapper instructors have been employed to aid county conservation agents and residents in trapping activities.

It's a wise man who can appear stupid at times, but some men carry it to excess.

YOUR MICHIGAN—AND MINE

True Stories of Human Interest (Michigan Press Association)

Shot a Birdie

Cassopolis — Donna June Lewis, while playing golf at a nearby country club course, shot a birdie, but it didn't count on her score card. She had driven the ball down the fairway and it struck and killed a bird in flight. Her father witnessed the shot.

Strong Finger Snap

Iron River—Joe Cozzuol was playing cards. His partner revealed the dummy hand, and the disappointment was too much for Joe. He snapped his fingers in disgust, and an empty glass on the table fell into a pile of pieces. The snap was pitched exactly to that of the glass, and cracked the thin tumbler.

Picks Up Trees

Lincoln Park — An over-zealous citizen is the only type of person that would be likely to commit this crime. During Lincoln Park's clean-up and beautifying campaign, someone removed three pine trees from the yard of Leland Vogel's home. All were two feet tall, and valued at $11, Vogel told police.

First Fish Story

Harbor Springs—From this northern Michigan resort city comes the summer's first fish story, and a good one, too. It's about a record catch of perch, hauled in by two Petoskey men in a little over two hours. They caught 61 perch, with a total weight of 62 pounds. Many weighed two pounds and over. This is believed to be an all-time record catch here.

Fire-less City

Stanton — On May 9, 1938, the Stanton city fire department answered a call to a local home to extinguish a small blaze. The department has not had a city call since that date. There wasn't even a chimney or roof fire during the winter. Only work for the firemen has been answering a few rural calls.

"Early" Cucumber

Grand Ledge—Mrs. C. Strickfaden has the first home-grown cucumber in Grand Ledge this year. She wins this record not by a special method of gardening, but by preserving one from last year. On display is a local bank window is a cucumber picked last September, which seems to be in a perfect state of preservation.

A Muddy Rainstorm

Iron River—West siders thought it had rained mud when they awoke one morning and found windows, automobiles and buildings spattered with dusty drops. The official weather observer, however, explained the phenomena by declaring that rain had carried down with it a suspension of dust blown in from prairie states.

Heavy Payment

Bad Axe — Bill Parker paid a heavy bill recently, but it only amounted to $2.00. He paid the whole thing in pennies—200 of 'em—rather surprising the city recorder, who no doubt was thinking of the counting task.

Trapped by Shoestring

Homer—While attempting to bring downstairs a chair from the attic in her home, Mrs. M. Randall suffered a painful accident recently. Her shoe string in some manner was caught, and Mrs. Randall was thrown between the rafters in the attic closet. Unable to free herself, it was almost three hours before someone heard her call of help.

WARN FARMERS SPRAY AGAINST FRUIT FLIES

Infestation Now Under Way in Many Fruit-Growing Counties

The state department of agriculture has broadcast a warning thruout Michigan's fruit belt that the annual infestation of the fruit fly is under way and spray should be ready for immediate use.

The fly, considered Michigan's most destructive fruit insect, made its appearance in Berrien county last week.

The department predicted that the fly is particularly feared in 11 counties—Berrien, Van Buren, Allegan, Manistee, Charlevoix, Antrim, Grand Traverse, Kent, Leelanau and Oceana—because those counties produce more than 90 per cent of the state's $2,264,000 average nnnual crop.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT

Pasteurization

Dr. Charles H. Mayo of Rochester, Minnesota, while serving as health officer of that city declared in an authorized interview that, in his opinion, pasteurization is the best of all the known treatments for the nation's milk supply, nnd, in the final analysis, for all of its dairy products.

"The nation's milk constitutes a problem that is the source of no little concern to our health authorities particularly," said Dr. Mayo, "and to our medical practitioners generally. Properly handled the situation is not a particularly difficult one to control; neglected, it may quickly become a menace involving countless lives."

"After having studied for many years the problem of safe milk," Dr. Mayo has officially declared, "I am of the opinion that pasteurization is the only known treatment which adequately serves the purpose for which it was intended, namely, that of destroying germ cells without materially reducing the food properties. I do not contend that pasteurization will make unclean milk clean. I do contend, however, and can prove it by the records, that pasteurization can make unsafe milk safe."

The comment of Dr. Mayo relative to epidemics and the part the milk supply generally plays in them is interesting. "Even though we are able through rigid and constant supervision of our herds and their surroundings to offer the public reasonable protection against impure milk, epidemics have not been prevented," he said. "This fact indirectly supports what I have previously stated as my belief, that pasteurization, while not making unclean milk clean, will make unsafe milk safe. In case of an epidemic it has been demonstrated that pasteurization properly performed will destroy the germs responsible for the disease, prevent its spread and consequently restore the community to normal, healthful conditions."

As to diseased cattle Dr. Mayo remarks: "Often we have found hundreds made sick by the impure supply from one unhealthy cow. It is comparatively simple to trace trouble of that sort to a herd which is infected, but to trace it to a single animal is a much more difficult matter. But whether the contamination originntes from one or a dozen cows, pasteurization is an insurance against the continuation of the outbreak."

Dr. Mayo declares that the opposite of the pasteurization treatment, which aims to destroy germs by instant and continuous chilling, signally fails of purpnse for the reason that it does not destroy. "Such a treatment," he said, "prevents germs from multiplying and nothing else. Multiplication is resumed immediately the chill is sufficiently out of the milk."

Questioned as to the often-repeated statement hat pasteurized milk is not the best for babies on the theory that its food value has been reduced, Dr. Mayo declared that "babies, fed raw and pasteurized milk, show a slight average difference in the net daily gain in weight during the feeding period when given orange or tomato juice. The slight difference might truthfully be said to be in favor of the milk that has undergone the pasteurization treatment."

NATIONAL HOTEL WEEK OBSERVED JUNE 11-17

Slogan: "An Asset to the Community —Service to the Nation"

Michigan hotels, an important cog in the $330,000,000 state tourist business, this week are celebrating "National Hotel Week" June 11-17 with a proclamation by Gov. Luren D. Dickinson to remind the public of their economic value.

A recent survey made by the Michigan Hotel association reveals that travelers in 1938 left approximately $37,000,000 with hostelries in Michigan. Of this sum, one-fourth or $9,200,000 formed the hotels' part in the state's growing tourist business, second only to the automobile industry in trade volume.

"Hotels of Michigan contribute materially to the prosperity of our state," said Bruce Anderson, past president of the Michignn Hotel association and chairman of the East Michigan Tourist association executive committee.

"In purchases of Michigan-grown food, hiring of Michigan labor and payment of taxes tn Michigan local and state governments, the hotels add substuntially to the economic welfare of the state. The use of Michigun food products alone means much to the farmer nnd to the merchants in small towns who are dependent largely upon the farmers' income."

In connection with week's observance, the slogan: "An asset to the community—service to the nation," has been ndopted.

We're glad so many Fathers use our bank for it makes their job easier when they use the convenience of a checking account and the security of savings.

Next Sunday is HIS day. Hats off to the greatest man in the world.

FIND JOBS IN RESORT INDUSTRY

One month resort training courses in Ludington, Benton Harbor, Dowagiac, Grand Haven, Charlevoix, Traverse City and Manistique were offered by the Michigan National Youth Administration, in cooperation with the State Board of Vocational Education, to relieve the shortage of trained hotel and resort employees during the summer months. The girls in the above picture at the NYA resident work project in Dowagiac are doing actual kitchen work that is part of their training course. Less than a week after the courses closed more than half those completing them had obtained jobs in the resort field

Either the schools must take a cut along with others or the legislature will have to seek new sources of revenue in order to balance the budget.

New taxes would be just as repugnant to the present administration as failure to duplicate the fiscal success of former Governor Fitzgerald's first administration, especially with a national campaign looming next year with emphasis upon taxes and spending.

Fitzgerald's Promise

What is called an "ironclad promise" by the late Gov. Fitzgerald to grant public schools $44,000,000 state aid a year is now being revived by the Michigan Education association in an effort to avert an appropriation cut.

Along with a pledge to slash state payrolls $8,500,000 in six months, the late governor made a signed statement favoring an increase in school aid to $44,000,000 in 1939-40 and more in 1940-41.

The payroll reduction pledge never materialized, Fitzgerald conceding that he had stretched things a bit in taking in so much. In fact, the number of persons on the payroll early in June was only a few hundred less than the total at that time during the Murphy regime.

However, economy plans are brewing; watch for developments after July 1.

Whereas the schools received approximately $41,000,000 last year under the Murphy administration, the proposed reduction in the face of Fitzgerald's pledge would cut the allocation to $38,250,000.

Dr. Eugene B. Elliott, superintendent of public instruction, declared that $50,000,000 annually was needed and suggested more taxes instead of less.

Speaker Howard Nugent's view was practical: "If we are going to give the schools more money, we must levy new taxes."

Influential Group

Most efficient and influential of all "pressure groups" which maintain lobbyists at Lansing is the Michigan Education association, of which A. J. Phillips is the executive secretary.

This is more of a compliment than a criticism, for the M. E. A., as it is generally known, is well organized in every county and has a record of getting things done that puts other state groups to shame.

A glimpse of its power was given a few days ago by H. Franklin Donner of Wayne county, president of the School Board Members and Superintendents of the M. E. A. Donner deplored the governor's statement that "the schools must take a cut too," declared that Dickinson was "incompetent and wholly unfit for the high position of governor," and warned legislators that the M. E. A. "will inform every school board member, every teacher, every P. T. A. club and every maintenance employe in each district of the position taken by the individual members of the legislature."

In other words, legislators who uphold Gov. Dickinson's budget-balancing demand and vote to reduce school aid to $38,250,000 will face a ballot reprisal in 1940 from the above mentioned persons. Donner's statement could leave no other interpretation. (School teachers are not going to accept a salary cut next year sitting down; they will stand up and fight.)

College, University

Confronted with an anticipated 11 per cent enrollment increase next fall, Michigan State college has just announced a 10 per cent reduction in its 1939-40 operating and maintenance budget.

President Robert S. Shaw said the economy move was necessary due to the legislature's trimming of the college appropriation from $2,646,000 received in 1937-38 to $2,500,000 for 1939-40.

The University of Michigan's annual appropriation was lowered from $4,673,253 to $4,475,000. The House had wielded a heavy axe, but the Senate finance committee was more generous, and the final result was a cut of $198,000 as compared with the amount received by the university in 1937-38.

Plugging Tax Loopholes

An improvement of 25 per cent in collection of the sales tax on purchased automobiles has been effected, according to Orville E. Atwood, sales tax director, under a new law which requires automobile dealers to pay the tax at the time they transfer a title or buy license plates.

Under the statute the secretary of state is prohibited from issuing a certificate of title unless he has proof that the tax has been paid.

By plugging loopholes in the law, such as above, and by creating a department of finance for the collection of all state levies and taxes, the Michigan Tax Study commission estimated in recommendations released in January, 1939, that $15,000,000 more annually could be added to the state treasury without imposition of a single new tax.

Collection responsibilities are now divided among 12 major departments and commissions and 15 examining and licensing boards.

Guarding Conservation

Among the legislative committee which did a commendable job in 1939 was Senator Miles Callaghan's conservation committee. Callaghan "went the limit" in defending the interests of sportsmen.

Among the threats which did not succeed were the following:

Land bill to deprive the state conservation department of all control over tax-reverted land in northern cut-over counties.

Bill to increase bag limits and shooting seasons for numbers of private sportsmen clubs.

Bill to deprive the conservation department of authority to prosecute game and fish violators without approval of prosecuting attorneys.

Ben East, outdoors writer, enthused over Callaghan: "One of the best friends the sportsmen of Michigan ever had."

How to Make Friends

Illustrative of the way Murray ("Pat") D. Van Wagoner, state highway commissioner, has of making friends is this true story:

Governor Luren D. Dickinson travels daily in a state police car between his country home in Eaton county, near Charlotte, to the statehouse at Lansing. It so happens that M-50, a gravel trunkline road, is not in top good condition. A stray remark by the governor was relayed unofficially to Van Wagoner who investigated personally. Result: The state department will "black-top" the highway this summer.

Add it all together and you have another example of why Van Wagoner wooed and received republican votes in the recent legislative session to defeat certain bills. "Pat" knows how to make friends.

Governor Milks College Cow

Governor Luren D. Dickinson participated in the May 31 "kickoff" of Michigan's observance of National Dairy Month in June by milking a Michigan State College Holstein cow on the capitol lawn in Lansing. With an escort of coeds from the college the 80 year old executive helped pay tribute to the state's 70 million dollar industry. Leaders in the milk producers' and the milk dealers' organizations in Michigan are being aided by dairy department members at the college in attempting to stimulate greater consumption of the state's dairy products for the sake of health and economy and also for better returns for dairymen.

SIX RULES CITED TO INSURE HEALTHIER CHICKS

When Chicks Come Out of Brooder Is the Most Critical Period

When chicks come out of the brooder house they enter the most critical period when their treatment determines whether they will be profitable to the flock operator in the fall and winter laying seasons.

Farm work may be pressing, admits J. M. Moore, poultry specialist at Michigan State college, yet he believes attention to six major points will pay dividends this summer.

One involves feeding. Chicks should be given credit for high intelligence. With free access to a suitable growing mash and scratch grain the growing birds will balance their own diets. As they grow older they will eat more grain and less mash, allowing them to develop before the protein in the feed excites egg production.

Clean fresh water is pointer two suggested by Moore. A green succulent range matched with mash, grain and water take care of feeding.

Four health pointers suggested by Moore include vaccination if any fowl pox has been present in the flock or in neighboring flocks. Another suggestion for health is to move water fountains and feed hoppers frequently. Some poultrymen put these supplies on wire stands to help prevent infection.

Pullets ought to be reared away from the present laying flock and their range should not have had poultry in the past two or three years.

Sixth pointer is to avoid crowding. July and August are critical months in housing, for the pullets are growing and need more room at night. An outdoor summer shelter for roosting, Moore says, can be constructed with materials costing about $20 and sizeable for 100 to 125 pullets. Lice and mite treatment on perches may be necessary if these pests show up.

PROSPECTIVE MOTHERS MUST HAVE BLOOD TEST

New Law Requires Attending Physician Must Take Such Measure

Protecting the health of future generations from the ravages of congenital syphilis is the purpose of Act No. 106, P. A. of 1939, recently signed by Governor Dickinson and given immediate effect, according to the Michigan Department of Health.

The new law requires that every physician or other person attending a pregnant woman shall have a blood test for syphilis made for the prospective mother at the time of his first examination. Detection of syphilis early in pregnancy followed by prompt treatment assures the birth of a healthy child.

Blood tests required under this act must be made in a laboratory approved by the Michigan Department of Health. As usual, there is no charge for tests made by the Michigan Department of Health laboratories.

A further provision of the new law requires physicians to report on the child's birth certificate the date when the maternal blood test was made; or if no test was made, the reason therefor. Results of such tests are not reported on the birth certificate. The standard birth certificate issued by the Michigan Department of Health is now being revised to comply with this provision.

MICHIGAN CROPS BETTER USUAL AVERAGE IN JUNE

For the state as a whole, crop prospects in Michigan were above average on June 1, according to Verne H. Church, senior agricultural statistician for the Michigan Co-operative Crop Reporting Service. Warm, dry weather in the southern counties during May reduced the condition of small grains, hays and pastures below the unusually favorable conditions reported a year ago, but prospects for those crops on June 1 were reported somewhat above average.

HEAT THREATENS FOOD IN HOMES

First of the warmth of summer days brings a reminder from the home economics extension service of Michigan State college. Protection of foods from spoilage and rancidity means protection from heat and light.

Refrigeration is fast becoming more common in usage in Michigan through more widespread use of electricity in rural areas. Most foods, then, are receiving the added protection of cooling temperatures.

Another point in food protection has recently been discovered, and that is the effect of light upon certain foods which contain fats or oil.

Green, black or foil containers thwart some of this effect of light upon oil bearing foods, it has been discovered by the bureau of chemistry and soils of the United States Department of Agriculture. Rancidity is appreciably delayed when such containers are used.

Trials were used on potato chips. They turned rancid within a week when packed in ordinary commercial bags, but when in green paper the potato chips remained fresh and edible for at least two weeks.

Cashew nuts were placed in a clear glass bottle and exposed to direct sunlight. Rancidity developed in four days. Another sample of the cashews in a green bottle under similar light conditions kept fresh for more than eight months. Cornmeal, peanut butter, walnuts and lard gave the same results.

Most effective shade of green is a grass green for containers to protect foods from effect of light. College home economics specialists suggest the homemaker try to approximate this color for storage of coffee, fruit juices and fat bearing foods, keep perishables cool as well as dark and purchase in small quantities in warm weather.

EDITORIAL

THE LIMITATIONS OF LABOR

The pendulum swings.

At times labor has the upper hand and uses its power for its own interests.

Sometimes employers are in command.

For several years labor has had its inning. Its case was founded upon the bad days of the depression. Now labor has overplayed its hand. The reaction is the other way.

Good labor conditions will prevail only when employers are just and generous and labor organizations sympathetic with employers and when they fully recognize that labor can go no further than the profits and resources of industry and business permit.

Daniel Tobin, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters recently gave some good advice to members of his organization.

"I have repeatedly asked our local unions when preparing wage scales not to ask for the impossible. Get away from the old theory that the more you ask the more confident you are of getting something. Bear this in mind, that industry can only absorb so much expense and that industry must have some reasonable return on its investment or else go out of business. Of course I fully realize that unless you demand a decent wage and a reasonable number of hours you will never get anything from the employers, but there are two extremes and some of our newly admitted members believe that just as soon as they join the organization they should be able to tip the world over immediately. Use some common sense and reason in your pleadings for betterment of conditions."

This is encouraging.

EUTHANASIA

That is the way—euthanasia—one fellow, retired army officer, widely quoted, but severely condemned, would dispose of old people above 70. He would hurry them into the next world by a painless process of elimination. Thus, he would do it in a kindly, though none the less effectual manner. He repellent idea is to solve the relief problem and wipe out the need of existing and proposed old-age benefit laws. Oldsters who have worked and saved until they have passed 70, would be pushed off the earth to permit distribution of their hard-earned accumulations, thus making at least temporarily easier traveling for heirs. An oldster who has plowed through the years, supporting a large family, besides paying taxes and meeting other public demands, and who has failed to arrive at 70 without sufficient competence to quit work must be extinguished to absorb young idlers and thus lighten the economic load, according to this coldly materialistic suggestion. Dr. Osler got in bad with everybody over 60 several years ago by advising that all attaining that age or beyond ought to be chloroformed. Notwithstanding the cruel methods proposed to solve depression problems, scientists have been devoting much time and thought to figuring out ways to prolong old age.—Wayne (Neb.) Herald.

CHARACTER ASSASSINATION

That "McKay incident" has been a boomerang to those who tried to damage the standing of a man who has done more to build up and pull Grand Rapids out of the depression of the past six years than any other 25 men. Even his political enemies admit that; which goes to prove that any man who fails to do anything worth while is a "no good," and any man who by energy and brains accumulates a fortune and gives employment to thousands is a "no good," in the eyes of the non-thinking public. Henry Ford has been much more roundly criticised for making money than McKay ever was, but the fact McKay is a Republican and a former state treasurer, makes the Booth newspapers who cannot control him try in every way possible to damage the standing of a real business man. A man who has already put half a million dollars in Greater Muskegon industry and with proper encouragement from the press and public, that would be only the beginning of what he might do for the Muskegons.—G. O. Curry, Editor and Publisher, Muskegon Heights Record.

A PRAYING GOVERNOR

Charlotte, Mich.

When Luren D. Dickinson, veteran of many sessions of the state legislature, accepted the nomination for lieutenant-governor before the last election, little did he think that he would be called upon to assume the duties of that office because of the passing of Governor Fitzgerald.

Among the first rules which Governor Dickinson promulgated when he came into the governor's office was one that there should be no official business transacted with him on the Sabbath. There were to be no interviews and no conferences upon state matters so far as he was concerned. He has strictly adhered to his purpose to fill his accustomed place as a teacher in the Sunday school in the little white church in Eaton Center where he has served for more years than he cares to admit.

In opening the services of his Sunday school class, a short time after he took the oath of office as governor he offered this simple but fervent prayer:

"God, our Father, we are gathered here today with but one thought. We seek Thy guidance. We ask for it in the affairs of our state, in our relationships with our neighbors and in the ordering of our homes. Give us, we ask, the utmost Thou hast to give. In the name of Christ, Amen."

Surely, when the governor seeks such guidance, the affairs of the commonwealth are in safe hands.—Christian Science Monitor.

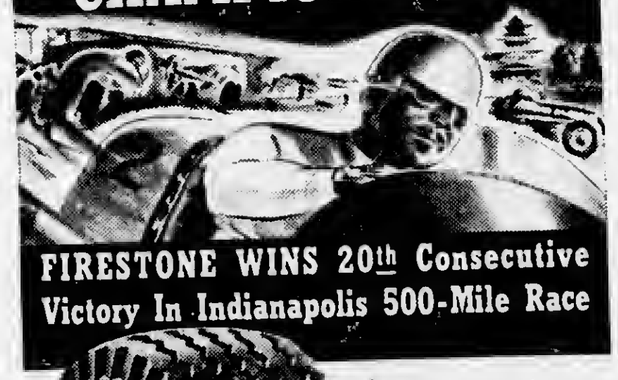
Firestone
CHAMPION TIRES



FIRESTONE WINS 20th Consecutive Victory In Indianapolis 500-Mile Race

A merciless sun beat down upon the speedway as Wilbur Shaw drove to victory on Firestone Champion Tires. The blistering brick of the main stretch and the granite-hard surface of the turns and the back stretch put tire safety to the test supreme! Record after record was shattered. Speeds reached as high as 160 miles an hour on the straightaways, as 33 of the fastest drivers in the world waged a breath-taking battle for gold and glory.

Never before in all the history of the motor car have tires been put to such a torturous test. And never before has any tire so firmly established itself as a Champion in construction and performance, as well as in name. Here is dramatic proof of the extra strength which the revolutionary new Safety-Lock cord body provides in Firestone Champion Tires—of the extra protection against blowouts assured by the new and advanced Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process—of the extra mileage resulting from the tougher, wear-resisting rubber compounds in the sensational new Gear-Grip tread.

WILBUR SHAW, the 1939 winner
On May 30th, Wilbur Shaw drove to his second victory in the 500-mile Indianapolis Race on Firestone Champion Tires at an average speed of 115.05 miles an hour. Champion race drivers, whose lives and chances of victory depend on tire safety, know tire construction. That is why they select and buy Firestone Tires for their racing cars.

No longer can there be any question of which tire is safest. One tire—and only one—provides these exclusive safety construction features. One tire—and only one—has been on the winning cars at Indianapolis for 20 consecutive years. Motor car manufacturers enthusiastically adopted the Firestone Champion Tire for their 1939 models. Order your new car equipped with this amazing tire. Or drive in and let us equip your present car with a set of new Firestone Champion Tires, the one tire—and only one that is safety-proved on the speedway for your protection on the highway.

inating competition with imported products.

Nubody will feel extra bnd, I guess, because thnt storm last Thursday missed Charlevoix. It was bad enough here, spreading a blanket of dust and making conditions otherwise disagreeable. Over at Boyne City and East Jordan the wind up-rooted trees, blew the roofing off of buildings and interrupted electric service. Petoskey was hard hit, too, so it must be that the storm circled us completely.

And while on the subject of weather, Sunday was nne of the darnest, most disngreeable days in many a moon. Cold, drizzly rain and everything people don't like. There were a lot of southern Michigan and out-of-state fishermen here for steelhead fishing, but the weather drove the biggest shnre of them home. Those who stuck cnught some fish, however. Saw one party come into Clothier's with six, one a nice 7-pounder. A party from Mac's Camp caught six up south arm. I braved the weather and cnught three. Some of the other boys made catches too, so it appears things are looking better for those who like angling for "Michigan's Tarpon."

See where a movement is under wny to promote John L. A. Galster of Petoskey, as a Republican gubernatorial candidate in 1940. Galster's executive ability and his keen insight into governmental affairs over a long period of years are highly respected by Republicans in the north and throughout the state. It would be to northern Michigan's interests to get behind such a movement.

And while speaking about governors, noticed Monday a lot of signs about town publicizing the candidacy for governor on the Democratic ticket of none other than our own "Pete" Harold Hallett. It all turned out to be a jake played on "Pete" by a party of Detroit friends who were his guests over the week end. "Pete" says he isn't a candidate for anything, let nlone gavernor, and that he had his own method of evening the score with the jokesters. There's nothing better than fun.

FIRST CRUISE IS COMING TUESDAY

HARRISBURG, PA. CHAMBER OF COMMERCE SCHEDULED

Grand Rapids Association of Commerce Comes June 22nd, Erie Pa. C. of C. on Tuesday, June 27th

Committees of the Charlevoix Board of Commerce are making preparations for the entertainment of three cruise parties scheduled to visit here within the next two weeks.

The first cruise, the Harrisburg, Pa. Chamber of Commerce, arrives for a one-hour stay at 8 a. m. on Tuesday, June 20, on the Str. South American. The brief stay precludes much in the line of entertainment other than sight-seeing. Two members of the Board of Commerce have been invited by the Georgian Bay Transit Co. to accompany the cruise and join in maping out some means whereby the boat line might be persuaded to make Charlevoix a regular port of call.

The second cruise brings the Grand Rapids Association of Commerce "Good Will" group on Thursday, June 22nd. They will arrive at 4 p. m. on the Str. Alabama and will remain here until 8 p. m. Golf, fishing parties and sight-seeing trips are being arranged for entertainment of the visitors and the usual visit of representatives to Charlevoix business places will be in order.

On Tuesday, June 27th, Charlevoix will be visited by the Erie, Pa. Chamber of Commerce. The cruisers will arrive at 8 a. m. on the Str. North American and will remain here until 12 o'clock noon. Similar entertainment is planned for this group, including golf, fishing and automobile sight-seeing trips.

WARDEN BEATS "TABBY" OUT OF TROUT DINNER

Find Angler Brings Cat Along to Eat Under Sized Fish

Methods used by some fishermen in attempting to circumvent the law frequently bear the mark of genius, according to enforcement officers who have seen a lot of tricks tried. A towerman stationed by the department of conservation recently discovered a new one to put in his book.

While patrolling the Jordan river, Towerman Harry Harrington encountered a fisherman whom he recognized as a prominent citizen of a nearby community. The man was fishing off the bank of the river.

When he began to talk to the man, Harrington saw the man's small daughter approaching, carrying a half-grown kitten. Just then the fisherman, in plain view of Harrington, tossed a live inch trout back into the stream—a trout which, the officer could see, was deader than its proverbial kin, the mackerel.

Exclaimed the fisherman: "Why the poor little fellow is dead!"

"Why did you throw him back, Daddy," lisped the girl, "You said that my Smokey could have him",—and looking at the towerman, added earnestly. "Smokey just loves fish."

MICHIGAN BASS SEASON OPENS SUNDAY

NO CHANGE IN REGULATIONS THIS SEASON

Five Thousand Inland Lakes Will be Thrown Open to Fishing for All Species of Game Fish

A last minute glance at a digest of the state's fishing laws, before the 1938 season opens this coming Saturdny, shows a number of points whlch sporting fishermen always keep in mind.

Six inches is the minimum legal size for perch, bluegills and sunfish, umong the most popular of the "panfish" species. Keeper size for both lnrge and small mouth bass is 10 inches; 14 inches for pike; and, seven inches for all three species of trout—brook, brown nnd rninbow.

The maximum number of perch which a fisherman can take in one day or hnve in his possession at one time is 25 for inland waters and 50 for the Great Lakes and certain inland lakes designated by law. This is the first year a limit in number has been npplied to this species on the Great Lakes.

The legal maximum for pike is five, as well as for black bass. There is a limit of 25 on bluegills, sunfish, warmouth lnss, calico, rock and strawberry lnss, crappies and perch, which may be figured for any one of the spécies or for a combination of them so long as the grand total does not exceed 25.

Under the new regulations, resident anglers who purchased licenses for the trout season are legally qualified for the pan-fish seasòn, this permit being good for all species which are lawful take. Other anglers who do not intend to try for trout may obtain the "resident non-trout license" for 50 cents, which with an identifiention will entitle his wife to fish without additional charge. Provision for wives was not included with the trout license.

Out of state fishermen are offered two kinds of licenses. One is a "nonresident annual fishing" permit which costs two dollars and permits the licensee to take all authorized species. The other license, costing one dollar, is the "non-resident 10-day" permit which entitles the licensee to take all legal species for 10 days from date of issue. In both cases wives may obtain the licenses for 50 cents.

All persons over 17 years of age must have licenses this year, the minimum having been reduced from 18.

LOCAL YOUTH BELIEVED DROWNED

GERALD ARVILLA, 14, MISSING SINCE SATURDAY

Water-Filled Canoe In Which He Was Sailing on Lake Charlevoix Found Saturday Night

Gerald James Arvilla, 14, son of Mrs. Marie Hull, is believed to have drowned late Saturday afternoon in Lake Charlevoix.

Providing mute evidence of tragedy was the discovery by coast guards at 10:30 Saturday night of the water-filled canoe in which the boy had gone sailing. His failure to return in the evening to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Nordrum, his uncle and aunt, with whom he was living, resulted in a search which revealed the craft about a quarter mile beyond the old beet sugar factory. The mast, sail, paddles and out-rigger with which the canoe was equipped were found in the near vicinity.

It is believed that the youth, who was considered quite capable of handling such a craft and was also a good swimmer, found heavy seas from a strong easterly wind too much for the small boat and was heading shoreward when it capsized. The mast, securely fastened, had been removed and the boat was right side up when found, indicating an attempt to make it buoyant. That the youth became numbed from the cold water and sank, or else attempted to swim to shore, is quite evident.

A double tragedy was averted when Donald Herrick Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Herrick, who had been sailing with Gerald in Round lake, left the boat at the railway bridge, declining to go out on the larger lake.

Dragging operations conducted Sunday and Monday by coast guards and other individuals failed to locate the body.

Besides his mother, Gerald is survived by a sister, Marie, and three brothers, Joe, Carroll and Glen.

NEW ZONING ORDINANCE IS ADOPTED

CITY COUNCIL APPROVED NEW REGULATION MONDAY

Establishes Five Districts Where Gas Stations, Garages, Coal Docks, Fish Houses Are Prohibited

As the result of action taken Monday night by the city council, future establishment of gas stations, garages, coal yards and docks, wood yards and fish houses will be governed by a new ordinance which amends the title and two sections of a prior ordinance covering such activities.

The ordinance establishes five districts prohibiting the construction of such businesses and district No. 5, which comprises all Round lake frontage from the Belvedere Club grounds around the lake to Prospect street, specifically prohibits not only gasoline stations and garages, but also coal shed, dock, pier or wharf or other buildings for the storage of coal, coke, gravel, sand or cement, wood yard, gasoline tank for storage of over 1,000 gallons, and any fish house or fish yard used for the keeping of or storage of fish, fish nets or other fishing apparatus. A provision exempts that part of district 5 between the west line of the Belvedere Club and the west line of Lot 4 of Block 19, Newman's Addition, but not including any part of Antrim street abutting on Round lake.

Full details of the ordinance, which becomes effective 20 days following adoption, may be found in the council proceedings published on page 6 of this issue.

The council voted to purchase an automobile for the police department, selecting the bid of the Auto Electric Service out of five submitted.

Revision of contracts with the Kit Carson Lumber Co., builders of the electric light plant extension, and the Rathbun-Jones Engineering Co., diesel manufacturers, to provide needed additional improvements in excess of the original contracts, were approved.

The council approved advertising for bids for improvements to the Bellaire hydro electric plant as a part of the PWA electric system extension and improvement project. Need of the Bellaire unit to provide current during the Ferry avenue plant construction and unfavorable weather conditions during early spring, has delayed this part of the project.

Charlevoix has a summer automobile parking problem which could easily be at least partially remedied. While our business district is small when the number of cars to be served is considered, it is also a fact that many cars could be parked in the places now used by business owners and employes for their own automobiles. Even a casual observation will prove this assertion. Have many times seen the greater portion of a block occupied by cars owned by business people while the prospective shopper — the person who wants to spend his money—rides up and down the street looking for a place to park. A one-hour parking regulation is a joke as long as only the tourist, visitor or shopper is the only one observing it.

In the bigger cities where delicatessen stores provide the public with everything from "soup to nuts" it is nothing new to go into a store and buy a roast duck, but in Charlevoix "Mac" McCarthy at Mart Block's store is providing an innovation we natives have only begun to appreciate. "Mac" prepares not only roast chicken, turkey and duck, stuffed with dressing and all the trimmin's, but also dishes out potato and fruit salad. If he was a woman with such culinary ability, some aspiring male would have grabbed him off long before this.

Judging from the fun those Harrisburg, Pa. fellows were having Tuesday morning, one surmises that these cruises must provide a very pleasant outing.

Ebb Warren, editor of the Traverse City Record-Eagle outdoor page, gave Charlevoix's famed steelhead fishing a fine bit of publicity in Monday's edition. He wrote at length about the fighting qualities of Lake Charlevoix's "fresh water tarpon," and told how they were caught and

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

"Big city influence was responsible for the defeat of the new school state-aid bill and retention of the 1937 statute which provides $43,000,000 of state aid."

Such is the charge of the Michigan State Farm bureau in a statement signed by Stanley M. Powell, legislative counsel. The farmers' representative points out that outside of Democrat senators who voted solidly for the higher amount, the senate roll call shows that the $38,250,000 appropriation was opposed by ten Republican senators from the following cities: Detroit, Kalamazoo, Lansing, Saginaw, Port Huron, Bay City, Ann Arbor, Flint and Grand Rapids. In addition Republican senators from North Adams and Blissfield voted also against authorizing the lower amount.

Nine Democrat senators voted as a block for the $43,000,000 appropriation, following the same strategy of Republican legislators in the 1937 session: Approve requests for more spending; the majority party is always held responsible for any deficit.

FERRY COLLISION DAMAGE ESTIMATED

TWO BOATS COLLIDED IN THE DENSE FOG THURSDAY

Twenty Passengers and Eight Cars Were Damaged in Mishap; Set $11,000 Probable Figure

Highway department officials have estimated the damage done to the two state-owned ferry boats, which crashed in the Straits of Mackinac Thursday, at $11,000.

The transports, St. Ignace and Cheboygan, collided in a "zero" visibility fog four miles off the Mackinaw City dock as they passed over the North Graham shoals.

Twenty persons and eight cars aboard the St. Ignace, which was traveling toward the upper peninsula dock, were injured.

The Cheboygan, carrying 60 persons and 23 cars, was damaged only slightly and continued her run on schedule. B. J. Gellick, U. S. inspector, said the larger ship was seaworthy and estimated the dumage at $100.

The St. Ignace, however, was stove in 21 inches above the waterline and will be kept at dry-dock in Cheboygan for repairs estimated at $10,000, Gellick said. The department, reported that it would be back in service for the Fourth of July week end traffic.

Captain Andrew Coleman of the Cheboygan said that the two boats collided after "location" signals had been given. He said he reversed his engines just before the crash but held contact after the collision to prevent either boat sinking if the damage had been great enough. The lifeboats and preservers were uncovered and made ready for immediate use, he said, but were unnecessary.

The shoals mark the closest passage that the boats make in their hourly nine-mile trip as the shallow water makes it necessary to avoid grounding.

Mrs. Lillian Underwood is taking a vacation from now until July 16th, and a young man from church school will occupy the pulpit at the church until then, assisted by Misses Harris and Dorothy Rodentau.

All members of the several rural Sunday schools, remember that next Sunday is the day for turning in the Sunday school notebooks, and please bring them along as they have to be sent to Philadelphia next week.

Harry Mathews of Bellaire gave a fine talk to the young people on the value of Sunday school work, at the Creswell Sunday school last Sunday. He and Gov. Dickinson are two workers in the Sunday school who occupy official position in county and state administration, which is something out of the ordinary.

A fine farewell party was given for Rev. Dorr Garret at Alden last week by a large crowd of his admirers. It is regretted that Mr. Garret has to leave there where he has been pastor for four years. He will not be far away, though, as he will be pastor on the Elk Rapids charge next year. The Finch family of this place attended the party.

Mr. Petafor of Alba, bee inspector for Antrim county, was around Monday inspecting bees. He just "smelled" of the hives of the writer, then burned up the hives and frames. Mr. Shearer, east side of the lake, lost eight hives in the same way. Soon the cherry inspector will be around. A person wonders what he can do and cannot do. This bee inspecting will probably cost the county or state $300 for Antrim county. Of course it gives a job for somebody.

Here's The Difference

Railroads operate on their own roadways, built and maintained entirely by the railroads.

Out of every dollar the railroads take in, taxes take 9 cents, and their rights-of-way take 23½ cents—a total of 32½ cents for roadways and taxes.

Highway motor carriers operate on public highways, built and maintained by taxpayers.

Out of every dollar taken in by the certificated motor carriers, 7½ cents (I. C. C.) goes for taxes of all sorts—and this represents all they pay for roadways and taxes.

Barge lines which operate on our inland waterways — the canalized rivers of the country—operate on "roadways" built and maintained by taxpayers.

Out of every dollar taken in by these inland waterway freight carriers slightly under 2 cents goes for taxes of all sorts—and this, too, represents all they pay for "roadway" and taxes.

Thoughtful people now believe that forms of transport which operate on and by means of facilities provided by the taxpayers shall pay for the use of such facilities and shall be on an equal basis as regards taxes—real taxes to be expended for the general support of government.

Laws now before Congress aim to remedy the present inequitable situation in the American transportation industry.

In substance, they call merely for a square deal for the railroads.

And a square deal for the railroads means a square deal for the taxpayers, too.

"I thought I knew all about automobiles!"

A LOT of folks have had their eyes opened wide by a ride in a 1939 Ford V-8. They just didn't realize how much more value and how many improvements we've put in this car the last few years.

Today's advanced Ford is a product of progressive engineering, fine materials and honest construction. It is backed by an experience of building far more cars than anybody else in the world.

One ride in today's Ford — with its smooth 8-cylinder engine, stabilized chassis, hydraulic brakes — will prove it's the modern car in the low-price field.

INCREASE OF SHIPPING AT SOO LOCKS REPORTED

Two and Half Million Ton Gain in May Over Previous Year

Freight shipments through the St. Mary's Falls canal increased 2,500,000 tons during May over the corresponding period in 1938, according to the monthly report issued by the canal office.

Increased industrial activity at steel centers was believed largely responsible for the increase in freight tonnage, the report said.

The canal handled a total of 5,798,994 tons of freight in May compared with 3,365,290 tons during the same period last year. However the May total this year was 8,910,610 tons under that of May, 1937, when all records for that month were broken.

NEW DRIVERS' LICENSE LAW IS NOW EFFECTIVE

Governor Signs Measure Increasing Cost of Permit to $1.25

A new drivers' license law increasing the cost of original licenses and renewals from $1.00 to $1.25 took effect June 15.

Local examining bureaus will retain 20 cents of the 25-cent increase in cost. Rep. Robert N. Sawyer of Monroe, who sponsored the measure, said the fee of 15 cents provided in the old law was insufficient to pay the expenses of examining bureaus. Licenses must be renewed every three years.

NASH-KELVINATOR SALES PROMOTION IS GIVEN NATION-WIDE RECOGNITION

Adjudged the outstanding selling and sales management event of 1938, the National Salesmen's Crusade, the "Sales Mean Jobs" movement originated by George W. Mason, president of Nash-Kelvinator corporation, has just been awarded the Howard G. Ford trophy, recognized nationally as the foremost award for business achievement in the United States.

Announcement of the award was made today by Ivan J. Falconer of the Radio Electric Appliance Co., Kelvinator sales representatives in this area.

The trophy was presented at the annual convention of the National Federation of Sales Executives, held in Philadelphia. It is a joint award of the Federation, of its Philadelphia branch and of the famous Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania.

"The National Salesmen's Crusade, which within a few months last spring and summer spread to 1,100 cities of the United States, was based on the fundamental that if anybody could do anything about lagging business, it was the salesman, front rank man of industry's army in the field," explained Mr. Falconer. "It was the belief of Nash-Kelvinator's President Mason that if salesmen of all kinds could be stimulated to make extraordinary effort to get business, the wheels of industry could be moved off dead center and speeded up again.

RESORT SEASON OUTLOOK BRIGHT

Manager of Michigan Bakeries Inc. Cites Business Increase

That this year's resort business in the northern Michigan area will top previous years' business generally is the forecast of Jack Jansen, manager of Michigan Bakeries Inc. for this territory.

Jansen bases his optimism on a steady increase in sales of "Michigan" bread and rolls in this territory for the past several weeks and on the rising sales in this area during the summer seasons through the past five years.

"Bread is an everyday item in the grocery store and a daily food requirement of every person and so its increased consumption is, I think, a pretty fair gauge of the increased number of tourists and resorters who frequent northern Michigan in the summer months," Jansen pointed out.

COMMUNITY DAILY VACATION CHURCH SCHOOL WAS CONCLUDED FRIDAY

The Daily Vacation Church School held in the public school buildings closed Friday evening with a program held in the high school auditorium. A very fine representation of parents and friends attended the program and viewed the exhibits of the various grades.

The total enrollment of the school was about 140 but some did not attend regularly, so that they missed out in receiving a certificate. However 115 certificates were awarded and many of them had gold stars attached for perfect attendance.

The missionary project was the offerings taken in the worship periods and at the closing assembly, for Mont Lawn, a children's camp, near New York City, fostered by the Christian Herald for the underprivileged children of New York City. The total offerings amounted to $11.50.

A committee of young people prepared a group of resolutions concerning the vacation church school, which were adopted by the audience Friday evening. These resolutions follow:

Whereas, the Community Daily Vacation Church School, which has been in session from June 5 to 16, has been of great interest to all concerned, and

Whereas, it has been of great benefit to all those who faithfully attended, and

Whereas, it has brought us to a closer realization of God, a clearer meaning of the Bible, and a more definite understanding of the applications of Jesus for every day living, we desire to offer the following resolutions:

Be it resolved, that we hereby express our appreciation, first to Mr. North, superintendent of schools, the board of education, and Mr. Scott, the janitor, for their kind cooperation, and assistance.

Second, to the Baptist Circles, the Sunday schools of the Congregational and Methodist churches and the Church of God, and the Kiwanis club, for so graciously assisting with the finances of the school.

Third, to Gordon Todd and Louise Young for operating the picture machine and Mrs. Sloan for donating blue print paper.

Fourth, to the department of visual education of the Methodist church for the kind service rendered in providing stereopticon slides and reels.

Fifth, to Mrs. Sally Blake for teaching alcohol education; Mrs. Pulsipher, for assisting with the junior devotionals; Rev. and Mrs. Parker for the missionary study; Mrs. Saltonstall who looked after her duties as registrar so faithfully and Mrs. Alexander who acted as supervisor of the school.

Sixth, to Marjory Edwards and Phyllis VanAllsburg, who gave of their time to play the piano, also the girls who so willingly assisted the teachers in the kindergarten and first grade.

Seventh, to the teachers, Miss Edna Richardson, Miss Nina Harper, Mrs. Alfred Browe, Mrs. Sylvia Miles, Mrs. Freida Novotny, Mrs. Norton, Rev. Parker and Rev. Alexander, who willingly gave of their time and effort to make the school a success.

Be it further resolved:

That next year, we all work together for a bigger and better Daily Vacation Church School, endeavoring to reach every boy and girl in the community and encourage a more perfect attendance of the same. That plans may be enlarged to include a nursery department, for the very small children and a department of arts and crafts for expressional work, and that to this the study of biblical truths may be applied to the full development of better christian characters.

Respectfully submitted,

FACILIS DECENSUS AVERNO," ETC.

"The decent to the nether world is easy." "To retrace one's steps thence and to regain the air above, this is the toil, the laborious task." Units of industry, farmers, lending institutions (such as banks and building and loan associations), insurance companies, professional people and others, cannot compete with the United States government. Each day more of our people comprehend this fact. "Equality under the law" calls for the government to "lend to all" if loans are to be "made at all." Each day we enlarge the opening of the door of the treasury. We say this is a democracy. We say this is a self-government. We say this is a popular government. The trend is for government agencies to lend money or to guarantee the debts of "all" the people, "on such security as they require and at such rates as they demand." There are those who contend that having gone so far, we must go "all the way." Everybody must be "equal under the law." As we proceed further down the incline more people and more groups are saying, "You either lend to me, or give to me, or guarantee for me, on my terms, or I will vote against you." Let me again remind you that "No government is strong enough to support the people. The people must support the government." — Cong. Fred L. Crawford, 8th District, Michigan.

Get "Gangster" Bird

Harbor Springs—A sharp-shinned hawk, one of the most dangerous enemies of smaller birds, met an inglorious death here a short time ago. The predator, which feeds on song birds, had chased a sparrow into a warehouse. The manager and an assistant who had discovered the hawk was killing robins in the vicinity, cornered the bird, killing it with a broom. The species is said to be one of the swiftest flying birds known.

CHRYSLER

Many of America's great industrial leaders started at the bottom and worked up by sheer force of merit. Walter P. Chrysler, automobile manufacturer, was one of them. He began as an oil wiper in a railroad shop at Ellis, Kan., at five cents per hour. Now he is able to command millions. He did not advance by leaps, but grew slowly and steadily into such a practical knowledge of mechanics that he could take apart and reassemble an automobile. Different positions of responsibility preceded organization of his own company in 1924. He believes prosperity is determined wholly by supply and demand and that depressions are unnecessary. "More important than currency, more important than gold," said Chrysler, "is the confidence of the people. Confidence and courage are the essentials of success in meeting present difficulties; people must have faith."—Wayne (Neb.) Herald.

She Bothers 'Em

Portland—Miss Mae Rose Schuller has several of the male students of rival high schools all in a dither. No, it hasn't much to do with feminine charms, as usually considered. She is the only female member of the high school golf team, and sometimes gives her male opponents plenty to worry about. "Golly! Wouldn't it be awful to be beat by a girl?" said one of her competitors.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT

Anemia In Babies

Anemia in babies is much more common than is generally recognized and freqnently the condition becomes quite severe before the family physician, pediatrician or the mother realizes it. The normal child is born with a normal amount of hemoblobin, or coloring matter in the blood, but during the next three or four months the hemoblobin drops below the normal for adults. As the child begins to grow, more iron is required for all the cells in the body nnd for the growing organs and tissues. The reserve of iron which the child had at first is used up and new iron needs to be introduced to prevent the development of anemia.

At the age of two months, the red cells, nmounting to approximately four and one-hnlf million, may become pale and anemic. In premature children and twins the condition is still more likely to occur. Indeed, if the mother herself is somewhat anemic before the child is born, the anemia of the infant is almost certain to appear.

Nutritional anemia of infants is extremely important because it may influence adversely hoth the growth and development of the child as well as its resistance to disease. Prolonged nnrsing or an exclusive milk diet constitutes the outstanding cause of the nutritional anemia of infants. The refusal of solid food by older infants has often been productive of low blood values so that a drastic reduction of the milk intake of the older child is necessary. We must recognize that the iron content of milk is low and that as soon as the child's natural supply of iron is used up, solid foods should be introduced. Cereals are now commonly added at the third month, vegetables, fruit and eggs between the fourth and seventh month, and meat by the tenth month. Egg yolk may well be added to the formula of the artificially fed child as early as the second month. The addition of these foods with a high iron content may not completely protect against anemia, and the physician may be obliged to prescribe a specially prepared mixture of cereal containing a high amount of iron, or add iron as medicine to the child's intake.

The older child and the growing boy or girl should be given eggs and meat which contain the most iron as well as a weekly portion of liver. Of the vegetables containing iron, lima beans, beet tops, beets, spinach, peas, parsley, articbokes, asparagus as well as lettuce, dates and figs contain iron in an assimilable form. Spinach is not nearly as valuable as egg yolk with respect to the iron to be derived from it.

"Stagecoach" Feature of Pioneer Days

Across a vast panorama of primitive splendor, several thousand feet above sea level under a burning sun, a solitary stagecoach careens and rocks behind six galloping horses. Every mile brings the coach and its odd assortment of passengers closer to a waiting band of murderous Apaches, led by Geronimo, fiercest of them all.

This is the tense and thrilling background of Walter Wanger's "Stagecoach," a frontier drama of the 1880's when Indians still roamed the sagebrush, which opens at the Palace Theatre next Saturday, June 24, with Claire Trevor and John Wayne in the starring roles.

"Stagecoach" was directed by John Ford, with Andy Devine, Louise Platt, George Bancroft, Donald Meek, Thomas Mitchell, Berton Churchill, John Carradine and Tim Holt in prominent featured roles. It is a United Artists release.

Raft, Ellen Drew Cast in Race Film

The newest starring team to come out of Hollywood—George Raft and Ellen Drew—head the cast of Paramount's thrilling romantic drama of the race track, "The Lady's From Kentucky," which opens on Tuesday, June 27, at the Palace Theatre.

Cast together for the first time, George will be seen as a small-time gambler, a tout who, through a twist of circumstance, finds himself involved in the noble sport of racing horses. Lovely Ellen Drew is cast as a gentlewoman of old Kentucky who has inherited her father's racing stable. Rounding out the cast are Hugh Herbert, the droll comic, who finds plenty of opportunity to indulge in his unique variety of comedy, and ZaSu Pitts, in one of the best roles of her career as a southern belle.

Popular Film Comics Play "Never Say Die"

Playing together for the fourth time in little more than a year, Bob Hope and Martha Raye return to the screen in a frivolous film farce, "Never Say Die," which is scheduled to open next Thursday, June 29, at the Palace Theatre. Bob is cast as a nervous wreck of a millionaire who "enjoys poor health"; Martha, as a girl who in escaping from two suitors finds a husband where she least expects one.

"Undercover Doctor" Crammed With Action

The rattle of machine gun fire, the blinding fumes of tear gas, the exciting chase of the G-Men after ruthless killers, plus a heart-rending love interest will be caught on the screen of the Palace Theatre Thursday, June 29, when "Undercover Doctor" will make its local premiere. Based on the actual experiences of G-men told in J. Edgar Hoover's book, "Persons in Hiding," the Paramount film traces the unfortunate career of a brilliant but wenk-willed surgeon.

LANSING LETTER

Opposing Republican senators justified their action on several grounds: (1) The house formula for $38,250,000 was unfair to cities; (2) The late Gov. Fitzgerald had pledged $44,000,000 for 1939-40.

What are "Frills"?

Into the school aid controversy, which will come to a showdown on the final legislative days, June 29 and 30, (or in a special session which Gov. Dickinson threatens to call) Michigan's chief state executive has injected the issue of school "frills."

Assuming the state government cannot afford to grant $43,000,000 aid to schools, what with a staggering deficit already on its hands and state employes facing a prospect of payless pay-days, Governor Dickinson has countered with a suggestion that school curriculums should be revised. He referred specifically to supervised playground activity and the teaching of music.

To Mr. Dickinson, who taught a two-room school at Potterville 40 years ago, these educational services could be dispensed with under emergency conditions.

To parents of young children, the answer would probably be otherwise. They want the latest of so-called "progressive" education which seeks to develop the child culturally as well as strictly according to fundamental three "R's.". It's just a matter of viewpoint as to what constitutes "frills."

In New York state the legislature has likewise trimmed state aid to schools. A "save-the-schools" campaign is now under way by Parent-Teacher associations to prevent temporary closing of public kindergartens.

Cutting Teachers' Pay

"We can't expect 30 per cent of the teachers to teach for less than the average state clerk gets. . . . Schools have made progress, and we want to maintain that progress," states Albert J. Phillips, executive secretary of the Michigan Education association.

Phillips agrees with Dr. Eugene B. Elliott, state superintendent of public instruction who has consistently espoused the cause of teachers, that a reduction in school aid from $43,000,000 to $38,250,000 would come out of teachers' salaries.

As these two educators see it, the public demands the retention of new services which have been added to school curriculums since Gov. Dickinson's teaching days close to the turn of this century: Music, playground supervision, home economics, and manual training, as four examples.

If economies must be made, parents would object to having these courses suspended or put on a fee basis, so the logic goes. Hence, teachers would have to accept a cut in pay.

In the last analysis, the whole school aid controversy comes home to roost right at the taxpayer's doorstep. The "buck passing" ends there.

Dillman's Dilemna

Upon the capable shoulders of Grover C. Dillman, budget director, has been put the responsibility of advising how the biennial budget may be kept in balance.

The 1937 legislature handed out state aid liberally and otherwise upped appropriations to the tune of $18,000,000 worth of red ink. In checking over the 1939 appropriations to state institutions and state departments, Dillman has just revealed that the state government's share of legislative appropriations represents a $500,000 increase over what they have been receiving for the present fiscal year closing this June 30.

The 1937 legislature, faced with excess appropriations, handed the "hot potato" to Gov. Frank Murphy with executive power to reduce allocations as he saw fit. The "recession" with its relief load spoiled any efforts made by Murphy and his budget advisor, Harold Smith, to head off to deficit.

However, the 1939 legislature has not granted such authority to Governor Dickinson. There is no question but that Dickinson, if he possessed the right of a financial czar, would wield a heavy axe on state spending. His personal habits of living have been Coolidge-like for thrift and economy.

Liquor Tug-of-War

Another tempest has broken out over prospective new curbs by the state upon the sale of liquor.

The governor is known to be dissatisfied with the failure of the legislature (and even the churches) to do anything about the all-inclusive "liquor problem."

While Dickinson, an ardent dry, would like to have the "roadhouse evil" solved as far as it involves late closing and serving of drinks to minors, the legislature has shown no inclination to legislate further in this direction.

Among members of the state liquor commission, Chairman Orrin A. DeMass of Detroit and Commissioner Verold Gormley are inclined to let licensees alone without additional restrictions. Commissioner Murl H. DeFoe leans inwards a solution of liquor problems by administrative rulings and enforcement. DeFoe was a close advisor of the late Gov. Fitzgerald. He enjoys the utmost confidence of Gov. Dickinson.

The outcome of the inside tug-of-war will be watched eagerly. Politicians and liquor men alike are uneasy over what DeFoe may do. He is a potential headline maker.

Milk Price Fixing

Michigan's plunge into the sea of price-fixing will be made soon. The milk marketing commission has been appointed, and it may be expected to proceed toward the end of the plank.

As far as dairy farmers are concerned, the "water is fine."

An examination of the law (house enrolled act No. 88) shows that each member of a five-man board is limited to $3,000 compensation, plus expenses, and that the board may hire an executive secretary "and such clerical, office, attorneys, or other assistants as it deems necessary, and to fix their compensation."

The board will have the broad powers to create a milk marketing district, to fix minimum prices and to be paid to producers by distributors, and otherwise to regulate the milk industry.

A local milk marketing committee may be appointed by the state board for any marketing area or any two or more contiguous marketing areas. The local committee is given power to hire investigators and assistants necessary to carry out terms of the law.

"Reasonable check-offs" (or operating dues) may be taken from payments made to producers by distributors. A producer co-operative marketing association, if it furnishes not less than 50 per cent of the milk for such marketing area, may serve as the local milk marketing committee and thus qualify for the "check-off" financing. Ultimately, of course, this overhead cost will be passed along to the consumer in the form of milk prices.

wrote in an altogether interesting story which was supported by some mighty nice photographs. "There's a man who knows real sport when he finds it," says I.

Fish sometimes behave just like the child you want to recite before company. If you don't believe it is true, just ask Don Clothier, for he's had Ed. Drier, who does a lot of photographing for the West Michigan Tourist & Resort nssociation, out trying to get some movies of steelhead trout in action when hooked for a movie nf fishing actlvities in northern Michignn. So far the fish have failed to behave, so it all goes to prove that, like the child, they won't perform when you want them to. They did get three nice mackinaws Tuesday, however, and took some good action pictures.

Bill Wallace says that if you have nny heavy hnuling to do to the north side, you'd better get it done before the bridge is sodded, so as not to cut up the lawn.

Those three flower beds planted atop the shelters in the new East Park fish pond certainly set the thing off mighty nice.

Boyne City is going to stage Charlevoix county's 4th of July celebration this year and members of that city's newly-organized chamber of commerce are making great entertainment plans for the event. The celebration will last four days, July 1, 2, 3 and 4, with a homecoming as a feature. A boxing tournament, amusements of every kind and other customary Independence features will soon be announced.

Mrs. Inez Fox of St. Petersburg, Fla., (the former Inez Brown, daughter of Mrs. George Brown of this city) received a complimentary write-up in a recent issue of the St. Petersburg Times on her ability as a gardener. One takes from the article that her gardens are one of the show places of St. Petersburg, with rare plants coming from Africa, the western states and Mexico, nnd an abundance of bird life. The newspaper accompanied the story with several pictures revealing the beauty of the gardens.

TONY ACCETTA, CASTING CHAMP, ARRIVED TODAY

Exhibition Tonight at East Park; at Wood Brothers, Thursday

Tony Accetta, the bait and fly casting marvel of this age, is in town and local anglers can come well prepared to see the finest of demonstrations with rod and reel and ask hundreds of questions from an expert.

Recognized as the world's foremost bait and fly casting exponent, Accetta arrived in Charlevoix this morning and will give the first of his exhibitions at East Park tonight.

Accetta is especially desirous of having local angling enthusinsts ply him with questions. He wants to solve their fishing problems. A pleasing personality, Accetta elucidates nicely and not only will his appearances here be interesting but educational.

So for the first time in years local fans can go to a bona-fide recognized "pro" and get some valuable first-hand tips on this and that method of enticing fish, the most satisfactory baits to use, just what to do and not to do at such and such times. Like golfers who struggle for years to seek perfection and keep constantly in touch with a pro player, fishermen are thus placed in the same category.

This afternoon Accetta, who is in Charlevoix under the auspices of the Wood Brothers and the Shakespeare company, will be at their store, and also tomorrow.

Over Half of '38 Seniors Leave Campus With Work Ahead

Jobs hard to find?

Perhaps the 837 men and women graduating at Michigan State college this spring are unusually enterprising, yet it is a satisfaction to college authorities that one survey by division deans and another by students indicates at least half of the seniors are leaving the campus with jobs and positions.

Veterinary science as in 1938 reports its 35 veterinary graduates and 12 medical biology graduates all are leaving wih assured employment.

In agriculture, reports Dean E. L. Anthony all but one-third have obtained positions or are returning to home farms, while forestry graduates have found about 50 per cent employment. Those who have studied in vocational agriculture have found nearly 100 per cent placement in teaching positions and women majoring in home economics education were equally successful.
